BCR Men Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shopcraft workers at British Columbia Rail walked off the job just after 8 a.m. today but a union spokesman said unions will set up picket lines only if a contract has not been agreed on by Sunday midnight.

Norm Farley, chief negotiator for the shopcrafts, said the unions are giving B.C. Rail three days to come up with a better contract offer, but added picket lines will go up if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Farley said he met with management negotiators late Thursday night but no progress was made.

Some workers in Prince George began walking off the job at midnight but most other workers stayed on the job until 8 a.m., he said.

B.C. Rail employs 320 shopcraft workers in North Vancouver and Squamish and 120 in Prince George and other northern areas.

A B.C. Rail spokesman said the workers had left the job but no picket lines had been set up.

In anticipation of the walkout, B.C. Rail embargoed all shipments at midnight Thursday.

The embargo coincided with expiration of the corporation's contract with the shopcraft unions which represent carmen, firemen, oilers, machinists, electricians and pipefitters. The term of government-appointed mediator Charles Stewart also expired at midnight Thursday.

The railway operates a freight system from North Vancouver to Fort Nelson in northeastern B.C. and a passenger service to Lillooet and Prince George in central B.C.

The strike was scheduled after union spokesmen said railway negotiators refused to improve an offer of an 87-cents-an-hour pay increase.

The contract which expired at midnight had a journeyman rate of $5.79 an hour.

Farley complained the only offer the government corporation made on a seven-page fringe benefit demand was "a pair of work boots for the guys."

On Thursday a B.C. Rail spokesman denied the company withheld an offer on fringe benefits. He said that when negotiations broke off early Wednesday, the railway's offer, including wages, fringe benefits and catch-up increases for several classifications, was 19.5 per cent.

The railway spokesman said the offer would be the highest Canadian wage settlement ever for shopcrafts — $1.39 an hour higher than the wage paid for similar classifications by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

B.C. Rail also said in a statement that union demands have not moved away from the 75-per-cent wage increase and 264-per-cent increase in fringe benefits demanded when talks began July 5.

WAGES UP 14% IN YEAR

OTTAWA (CP) — Collectively-bargained wage settlements produced average annual increases of 14.5 per cent in the third quarter of this year compared with 12.7 per cent in the second quarter, the labor department reported Thursday.

Shouting Match Sees MLAs Back

By LINDA HUGHES and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The B.C. Legislature reconvened today and immediately erupted into a shouting match across the floor as the Opposition attempted to open emergency debate on the "crisis" in the forest industry.

Speaker Gordon Dowding ruled out of order the motion for debate by Opposition leader Bill Bennett and after a short 45-minute sitting, the government moved to adjourn over Opposition protests.

Three government bills and a legislative committee's report on property taxation were introduced at the morning sitting and indications were given that legislation would be introduced "within a few days" to deal with the slump in the forest industry.

The bills include a new marketing act which will give the B.C. Marketing Board new powers to exercise control over all the individual commodity marketing boards in the province. The board will be representative of the community in order to give consumers and producers the right to question and examine marketing board operations.

Labor Minister Bill King introduced a bill which will impose a collective agreement to end a two and a half year dispute between four elevator companies and the International Union of Elevator Constructors Local 82 in B.C.

An amendment bill, introduced by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, will facilitate re-organization of his department, by giving him greater signing powers and repealing an old provision that the deputy minister must be a physician.

But the focus of attention at today's sitting was the report from the municipal matters committee which was assigned to investigate real property taxation during the spring sitting of the legislature.

The report recommends property taxation assessments in 1975 remain the same as rates in 1974. The committee concluded that "it is better to live with an imperfect assessment roll" than proceed rapidly to implement actual value assessment at 100 per cent "without sufficient time to study the implications of such a move."

Legislation passed last spring introduced 100 per cent assessment of all properties in the Province and the committee's task had been to recommend a tax policy to go along with the new assessment levels.

The report, recommending a return to the old system, will be used as the basis of taxation legislation to be introduced later in the sitting. It was not signed by four committee members, Socred MLAs Hugh Curtis (Saanich and the Islands), Alex Fraser (Cariboo), Don Phillips (South Peace River) and Liberal Allan Williams (Howe Sound).

After the bills and reports were introduced, Education Minister Eileen Dailly moved the house adjourn to 2 p.m. Monday — as opposition members shouted it was time to get down to work.

"You have your homework to do for this weekend," she told them, after suggesting there was no need for emergency debate on the forest industry because legislation dealing with the slump would be brought in by the government shortly and would provide an avenue for debate.

Bennett had pressed for immediate discussion of unemployment in the industry, arguing it has reached "crisis" proportion.

HOUSING GRANTS $500

OTTAWA (CP) — Effective today, the government will give $500 cash grants to first-time buyers of moderately-prices houses, Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson announced in the Commons.

Maximum cost of a moderately-priced house in Victoria has been set at $38,247.

The minister said the legislation, once passed, will make the grants available for a one-year period retroactive to today.

Danson said the definition of moderately-priced houses will vary with market areas. In Regina, where prices were lower than in some areas the maximum house price qualifying under the program would be $31,580. It would be $44,915 in Toronto where housing prices were higher.

Danson said the program is designed to help families buying their first home.

"Rather than wait until legislation can pass through the House, I wish to make this benefit available to families immediately, and to remove any uncertainty on the part of home buyers or the housing industry."

The announcement was applauded by opposition parties who have pressed repeatedly for details since Parliament opened Oct. 30.

The payments are expected to cost about $2 million for the remainder of 1974 and approximately $28 million in 1975.

Angry Firemen Axe Fire Hoses

MONTREAL (UPI) — Striking firefighters turned the city of two million residents into turmoil today, defying a court injunction ordering them back to work in a cost-of-living dispute with city hall.

Only about 55 supervisory personnel were on duty to protect the city and authorities asked suburban fire departments to stand by.

Police summoned riot squads to at least three blazes in the city during the night to protect working firemen from strikers who axed hoses and stoned crews as they fought the fires.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, campaigning for re-election in a poll set for Nov. 10, said his administration would issue a major announcement on the situation this afternoon.

Drapeau's principal opponent, worker-priest Jacques Couture, accused the mayor of treating the firemen unfairly and said Drapeau's own salary had been increased 92 per cent in the past two years.

The long-smouldering Montreal Firemen's Association feud blew up Thursday night when the 2,400 firefighters began walking off their jobs, leaving only small crews made up of fire chiefs and district supervisors to cope with 10 major blazes during the night. No serious injuries were reported.

Fire department officials accused strikers of setting some of the blazes, most of which occurred in vacant buildings. Spokesman for the firemen denied responsibility and blamed it on "a pyromaniac that is playing around."

The fireman ignored a superior court injunction served at 3 a.m. today ordering them back to work. It called on association president Jean L'Abbe and his executive council to order the men back on their jobs.

But L'Abbe said he had tried and failed to persuade them return and said there was nothing the union executive could do.

"I tried," L'Abbe said. "It don't seem to work."

Provinces $1B Over Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — The 10 provinces have budgeted to spend almost $1 billion more than they take in during the current fiscal year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Provincial spending is projected to rise by 21.1 per cent during the 1974-75 fiscal year while the estimated increase in revenue is 19.8 per cent, Statistics Canada said in its annual survey of provincial budgets tabled in legislatures earlier this year.

The statistical agency has developed what it calls a "financial management system" to present balance sheets of the various government levels. The system attempts to account for the fact that governments have different budget methods.

Included in the Statistics Canada analysis are both operating expenditures and spending on capital projects, such as construction of buildings and highways. Not included are the operations of "government enterprises," such as Crown corporations and utilities.

Six provinces are responsible for the combined deficit of about $1 billion; two have

MORALE BOOST VISIT BY FORD TO NIXON

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — President Ford visited the bedside of Richard Nixon today after doctors told him it would be a great morale booster for the man Ford succeeded in office less than three months ago.

Ford broke off a barnstorming political tour briefly to go to Long Beach Memorial Hospital where the 61-year-old Nixon was still in critical condition following phlebitis surgery and a brush with death Tuesday.

The visit was the first time the two had met since Nixon resigned under fire in the Watergate scandal Aug. 9 and then was given a pardon by Ford, whom he had picked as vice-president.

Ford's call was scheduled for only 20 minutes.

White House News Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford made the decision after word from Dr. John Lungren that "the former president is in the best condition since his operation ... a visit from President Ford would be a tremendous boost for his morale."

Rich Face Tax Hike

TORONTO (UPI) — Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde Thursday warned well-off Canadians to be prepared for higher taxes to give the poor a better deal under an "incomes redistribution" program.

He said one million families — 20 per cent of the total — had incomes of less than $5,156 in 1972. About 345,000 families received less than $3,000 a year.

"This means that one-fifth of all families were required to live on incomes of less than one-half of the national average family income," he said.

"The job of governments, in the course of a social security review this fall and winter, will be to try to determine what kind of income distribution, or redistribution, would be consistent with the community's values."

Lalonde admitted the decisions will be difficult.

Nanaimo Man Crash Pilot

NANAIMO (CP) — A 29-year-old native of Nanaimo was identified Thursday as the pilot of the four-engine Lockheed Electra owned by Pan-Arctic Oils Ltd. of Calgary that crashed Wednesday near Rea Point, N.W.T., killing 32 persons. Brian Thomson was one of those killed when the plane crashed through sea ice off Melville Island.

Treason Charged To Papadopoulos

ATHENS (UPI) — A Greek judicial council today charged former dictator George Papadopoulos and other protagonists of the 1967 military takeover with high treason, an appeals court spokesman said.

The spokesman said an official statement on the judges' decision to press treason charges would be used shortly.

First National Drops Prime Rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today lowered its prime interest rate for the third consecutive week in response to easing money and credit conditions.

The bank, second largest in the U.S., dropped its rate from 11 to 10¼ per cent, lowest for a major bank and lowest since last spring.

U.K. Trade Deficit With ECM Worsens

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's trade deficit with the European Common Market is worsening steadily and may reach a record $3.99 billion this year, an official estimate published Thursday says.

The department of trade's magazine, Trade and Industry, says the visible trade deficit of imports over exports had widened from $314 million in 1971 to $2.73 billion last year.

Food Wastage Erupts Into Debate

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The mass wastage of food in Canada over the past few months erupted into emergency debate in the Commons Thursday amidst warnings that Canadians are eating and throwing away too much food.

Federal and provincial health authorities, farmers, ranchers and fishermen have been saying and showing that waste is becoming a distressingly commonplace fact of life in Canada. A four-hour debate, following the ritual killing of 600 calves by financially hard-pressed Quebec farmers, took place a few hours after a special Commons committee ended another day of hearings on the spoilage of 28 million eggs. (See also Page 7.)

New Democratic Party MP Max Saltsman said outside the House Thursday he is drafting a bill to present to the House of Commons to make destruction of food a criminal offence.

The Waterloo-Cambridge MP said he is horrified at reports out of Quebec that farmers are slaughtering calves and burying them in mass graves because low returns for beef mean they can't afford to feed them.

"It's bloody immoral," he said angrily. "No matter what the reason for it."

If Whelan were found guilty under his bill he would like to see the minister thrown in jail, he added.

"If I had my way, I'd have him put behind bars," he snapped.

"Huh," said Whelan when informed of Saltsman's move, "everybody in Canada will be in jail because we're all guilty of wasting food."

Plumptre Says 'Nonsense'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Beryl Plumptre dismissed as "nonsense" complaints that retail beef prices are too high at a time when farmers are selling cattle for less than it costs to raise them.

Current retail prices merely reflect the increased cost of feeding cattle, she said in one of two reports released today.

Although retail prices were higher now than a year ago, there is no evidence to indicate that consumers are paying too much.

In fact, Mrs. Plumptre said, beef is a bargain at current prices.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, meanwhile, stood firm on a commitment made Thursday night to hold a full-scale inquiry into the beef industry if he finds the report is unsatisfactory.

He told irate Commons questioners he has not had time to study the report in detail because it had been released only 90 minutes earlier.

He wanted to consider the board's report carefully before making a decision, he added.

Outside the House, he said he hopes inter-departmental discussion of the report will take place while he is attending a United Nations food conference in Rome next week.

According to the report, farmers are selling top-grade beef cattle for 53 cents a pound when it is costing them 57 cents a pound to raise them.

But board economist Gordon Burton, a Claresholm, Alta., rancher, suggested consumers may be paying considerably higher prices in the future.

Burton said he expects a lot of ranchers to sell off cows during the next month in an effort to reduce the size of the country's cattle herds.

The board was concerned what effect this would have on future beef supplies.

The slaughter of 600 calves in the Lac St. Jean region of Quebec "had no economic significance," he added.

Many dairy calves are killed and thrown away each year anyway.

Farmers have no use for them in their herd, particularly if they are bulls, and they do not grade as top quality veal.

It is a common practice to dispose of a number of such calves.

SUGAR UP AGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wholesale price of sugar in B.C. increased $3 a hundredweight Thursday to $54 a hundredweight.

Wholesale price in eastern Canada is $56.90.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young announced in Victoria Thursday that her department is conducting a study into the reasons for the increases.

She said her department has no power to control or rescind the increases, but would study the matter and present a report to the federal government.

Bill Davies, general sales manager for B.C. Sugar, said the most recent flurry in world sugar prices has been caused by reports of poor sugar beet crops in Eastern Europe.

Retail prices in lower mainland stores have not gone up as a result of the wholesale price boosts, but were expected to rise next week when current stocks run out.

Car Makers Gear for Shrinkage

OTTAWA (CP) — If you think North American compact cars are small now, wait until 1980.

Not only will they likely be much smaller, but they will likely be slower and hard-ridding, with few hints of luxury, suggests Dr. E. P. Cockshutt of the National Research Council.

He says the 1980 models will have to be 400 to 500 pounds lighter than present compacts — about the weight of the smallest Volkswagen — if car manufacturers are going to meet government goals for better gasoline mileage.

It is unlikely car makers can improve engine efficiency enough by 1980 unless automobile size is drastically reduced, Dr. Cockshutt, head of the mechanical engineering division's engine laboratory, said Thursday in an interview.

His laboratory is directly involved in research to improve engine performance.

Last week, U.S. government officials said they want the auto industry to promise to make cars averaging at least 20 miles a gallon, or 25 miles to a Canadian gallon. The administration also wanted auto efficiency improved 40 per cent by 1980.

The Trudeau government hasn't announced any similar goals for the Canadian subsidiary auto plants, but an industry department spokesman said Canadians will inevitably drive the style of car that the Americans decide to build.

"Two-thirds of the cars Canadians drive are built in the U.S.," said Ian Craig, the department's director of vehicle systems.

He understood the car makers have agreed to meet the U.S. government's goals, but it was still unclear whether the industry would be shooting for an over-all 40-per-cent efficiency improvement or a 40-per-cent improvement on all models of cars.

Cockshutt said people will have to change their taken-for-granted attitudes about automobile luxury. Fast acceleration, power brakes, power steering, air conditioning and soft rides might have to be sacrificed if new cars are going to meet new conservation standards.

Cockshutt said current North American-made compacts may get 25 miles a gallon under optimum driving conditions, but their over-all mileage performance was considerably below this mark.

Refinements by 1980 in the standard gasoline engine wouldn't produce much better mileage and car makers may turn to diesel engines which, under varying load conditions, are 20 to 50 per cent more efficient than standard gasoline engines, said Dr. Cockshutt.

TROOPS DELIVER

Royal Jubilee Hospital sounded a hurry-up call for three units of a special blood type needed early today and the troops delivered.

Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage said the hospital needed O negative blood and three donors from the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, stationed at Work Point Barracks, were on hand when a clinic opened there this morning.

Clinics at UVic's student union building over the past three days produced a total of 713 donors, the most productive clinics held at the university in the past five years, he added.

Mass Wastage Of Food Debated

are destroying cattle while there are people starving to death in other parts of the world, Saltsman said.

"To farmers it means a loss of income, and I can sympathize with that, but to others it means a loss of life."

Another example of food being wasted occurred recently in the Atlantic fishing industry.

Conservative MP Lloyd Crouse, a Lunenberg, N.S., fishing company executive, said Wednesday a Canadian fishing boat captain recently dumped 85,000 pounds of freshly-caught haddock into the ocean.

He had exceeded his quota and chose to get rid of the catch. The fish die even when returned to the water quickly.

The problem in the food production industries is said by government and industry officials to involve a complexity of factors including uncertain prices, erratic markets and high operating costs.

The debate came in the shadow of a United Nations Food and Agricultural Organization report estimating more than 460 million people, 40 per cent of them children, are permanently hungry.

Sawmill Closure Costs 180 Jobs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Northwood Pulp and Timber Ltd. has announced permanent closure of its Eagle Lake sawmill at Giscome, layoff of 180 employees and the phasing out of the small company town, about 350 miles north of here.

The Eagle Lake mill is one of the oldest in the Interior.

It was started 30 miles east of Prince George in 1915. The town of Giscome has a population about 350.

The announcement by Horst Sander, Northwood Pulp's vice-president of Sawmills, said closure of the sawmill on Nov. 22 and the planer mill Nov. 29, was due to the depressed lumber market.

He said the bad lumber market advanced the permanent closure from a company-planned date of June next year.

Closure next year had been planned, because of insufficient timber, the company said. Other factors were the age of the mill and expenditures which would have been required to meet pollution control standards.

Nearly two weeks ago the Council of Forest Industries of B.C. reported the unemployment in the industry was 13,585, with 8,631 of these in the interior.

SESSION STARTS IN FIERY STYLE

"The industry-wide picture is grave. Unemployment is nearing 20 per cent and the industry is prepared to predict that the worse is yet to come," said Bennett. "In the interior, unemployment in the sawmills may reach 50 per cent before spring."

Traditional unemployment in the housing industry over the winter is 40 per cent, he said, but unemployment this year "may substantially exceed" that level and housing starts declined to their lowest level in two years.

Bennett said the Socreds want to discuss the problem and are "prepared to offer proposals which will increase the job opportunities in the forest and housing industry."

The taxation report, prepared by an all-party committee chaired by MLA Carl Liden (NDP, Delta) also recommends the establishment of an agency to investigate individual cases of real property tax "hardship" and grant appropriate relief, especially in case of locked-in land and small businesses.

The committee asked that a special commission be appointed to inquire into all ramifications of the new 100 per cent assessment system and review all aspects of real property taxations procedures.

The review, which could take the form of a royal commission, would study: interjurisdictional sharing of tax revenue; classification of real property; exemption; the tax burden between property classes; and differential taxation of non-resident owned land.

The B.C. Assessment Authority, set up as an independent body last spring, should continue to function as a separate authority and should complete, as soon as possible, an assessment roll based on actual value of land and improvements, said the report.

The new Natural Products Marketing Act, introduced by Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, is in response to complaints that consumer interests are not represented on marketing boards.

The provincial marketing board, which is now a three-member departmental agency with little power, would now have the authority to hear appeals from consumers or producers who felt they have sustained some less or injury because of the actions of any marketing board.

Cabinet will appoint up to 10 people representing different interests in the community to the board and they will have authority to examine and to alter or cancel any orders made by marketing boards.

Total spending by the 10 provinces for the current fiscal year, which ends March 31, is projected at $25.925 billion. Total revenue projected is $24.969 billion.

The federal government has yet to table a budget it is due within three weeks but a guide to the level of federal spending for the current fiscal year is provided by the May 6 budget on which the government was defeated. That one called for budgetary spending of $24.4 billion and projected revenue at $23.95 billion.

The six deficit provinces were: Newfoundland, revenue of $654 million, spending of $751 million, deficit of $97 million; Nova Scotia, revenue of $831 million, spending of $894 million, deficit of $63 million; New Brunswick, revenue of $737 million, spending of $791 million, deficit of $54 million; Ontario, revenue of $8.351 billion, spending of $9.032 billion, deficit of $681 million; Manitoba, revenue of $1.005 billion, spending of $1.133 billion, deficit of $128 billion; and Saskatchewan, revenue of $944 million, spending of $985 million, deficit of $41 million.

The two with a near-balanced budget were: Prince Edward Island, revenue of $156 million and spending of $150 million; and British Columbia, revenue of $2.448 billion and spending of $2.457 billion.

the weather

Under the influence of a ridge of high pressure, cloudy skies with a little light precipitation prevailing over much of southwestern B.C. will give way to sunshine this afternoon with mainly sunny weather continuing into the weekend. In the interior skies are generally cloudy and some precipitation is reported over some localities mainly over the southern interior. Little change in this weather is expected today and Saturday except for sunny periods in the afternoon. A disturbance from the Pacific is causing some rain on the north coast today. This weather will change to occasional showers inland as this system proceeds eastward across the province today and Saturday.

DON'T DISCOVER HONDA CIVIC AFTER YOU'VE BOUGHT ANOTHER CAR! . . .

These Car Experts Have Done Your Comparisons for You . . . Here's What They Have to Say:

U.S. Environmental Protection Agency official test showed Honda Civic at 34.9 miles per gallon.

"Honda Civic was chosen 'Car of the Year' by an overwhelming majority of our voters. Its bright design and practicality give it the potential to be a world-wide people's car. Its function and economy make it a masterpiece of its kind." Motor Fan (Japan's leading car magazine)

"The Civic's acceleration is more than a match for that of competing 1200 cc sedans, and a few with larger engines as well; 1200 cc in the Civic feels more like the 1600 cc of, say the Datsun 510 or the Toyota Corolla (1600 cc)." Road and Track, May, 1973.

Doors Open Wider for Women In Armed Forces Positions

OTTAWA (CP) — The defence department Thursday broadened the scope of female involvement in the armed forces, in effect opening the doors for women in all but a few classifications.

Defence Minister James Richardson announced that the ceiling on the number of women in the forces will be removed and they will be eligible for 82 of the total of 121 job positions.

They will be restricted only from combat trades, sea-going duties and isolated postings.

And such is a new and unexpected recruiting crisis, some officers are saying with only some exaggeration it is hoped that female recruits bring their brothers along with them.

Officials say recent publicity about reduction in the size of the forces has drastically hit recruiting.

The effect of the publicity has been such that officials are worried about even keeping up with the reduced size of the forces.

Richardson's announcement means that women will be accepted into 18 officer classifications and 64 non-commissioned trades. Previously 48 trades and classifications were open to women.

Richardson said the new policy means that most openings will be filled by selecting the best candidate available, male or female.

"We'll be recruiting people, not males or females," said Col. Herve Lagace, in charge of recruiting.

The new edict means that the target of 8,000 women in the forces and recruitment of 800 a year is gone and that it's first-come, first-served for all but the restricted areas.

Women now represent about 3.2 per cent of the total strength of between 78,000 and 79,000 in the forces. Of the 2,695 women now in uniform, 2,098 are in non-commissioned ranks and 567 are officers.

It was announced last week that 50 will be joining the Canadian contingent in the United Nations Emergency Force in the new year.

The new roles up for women include such things as land ordnance engineers, Protestant chaplains, truck drivers, fire-fighters and electricians.

A random sampling of trades now open to females would include air traffic controller, weapons technician land, machinist, plumber-gas fitter, stationary engineer, military "policeman" and transportation controller.

12-Foot Wall Of Water Rips Town

BELTON, Tex. (UPI) — A 12-foot wall of water ripped open the courthouse doors in Belton, Tex., as powerful storms and tornadoes battered the state for the third straight day Thursday, wrecking homes and businesses and leaving at least one person dead.

"A 12-foot wall of water came down Central Avenue," Bell County Commissioner Richard Thompson said in Belton.

"It washed a pickup from Killeen to Belton (35 miles). It hit the doors of the courthouse and ripped them open. The water was as high as the top of the horse trailers."

Sheriff Lester Gunn said an unidentified body was discovered at Moore's Crossing near Killeen.

Magruder Termed Liar With Sticky Fingers

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — A defence lawyer referred to Jeb Stuart Magruder as a "liar" with "sticky fingers" today in seeking to discredit his prosecution testimony at the Watergate cover-up trial.

Jacob Stein, attorney for defendant Kenneth Parkinson, made the strongest attack yet on prosecution testimony in the trial.

Parkinson, a lawyer who was hired by the Committee to re-elect the President, is one of five former aides of ex-president Nixon and associates on trial in the case.

The jury of nine women and three men did not hear Stein's charge.

They had left the courtroom while lawyers argued about Stein's questioning of Magruder about meetings that Magruder had with Parkinson July 14 and 15, 1972.

"To forbid me to examine this man's motivation who has lied time and time again is an insult," Stein said in obtaining permission from Judge John J. Sirica to pursue the questioning.

Lawyers for former White House chief-of-staff H. R. Haldeman, meanwhile, have indicated that national and domestic security considerations may be part of their defence in the trial.

Strickler got Magruder to acknowledge there was a legitimate need for intelligence gathering about demonstrators during the 1972 presidential campaign.

In a related development, lawyers are watching medical reports on Nixon because the former president's health may decide whether he will appear as a witness.

Sources say there already have been serious discussions about moving the trial to California for Nixon's testimony if he is too ill to travel to Washington.

An Exercise in Public Relations

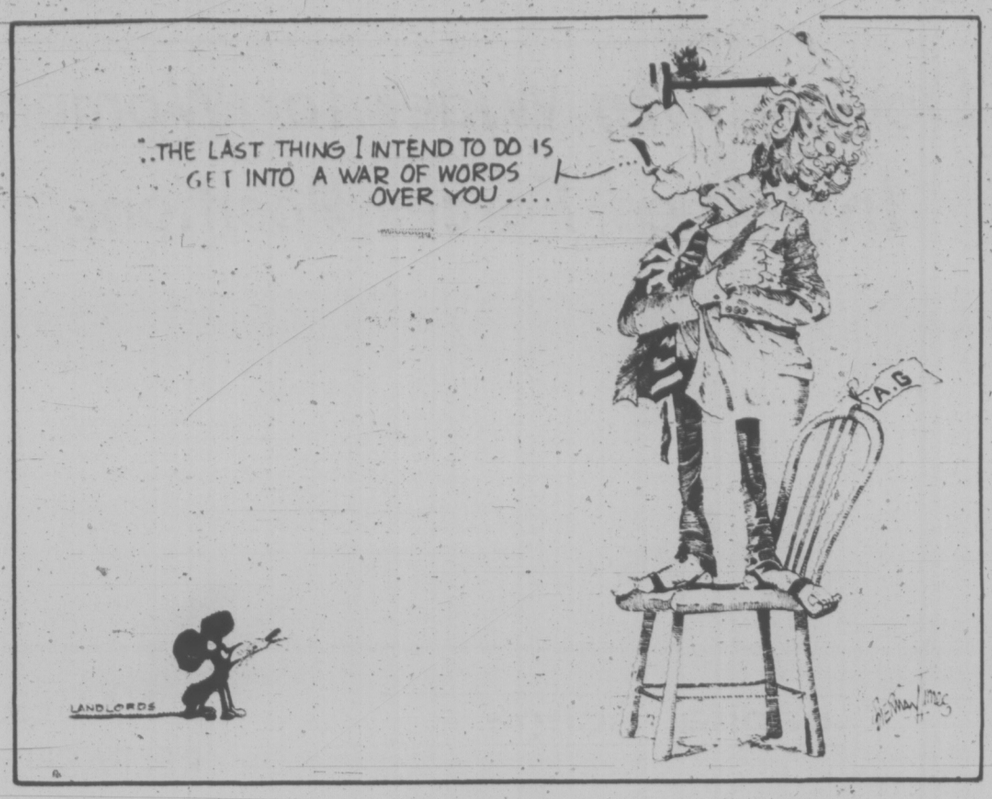
That was a cowed group of premiers who emerged from 24 Sussex Drive Wednesday after a five hour federal-provincial discussion on inflation. Only a few weeks ago the premiers, almost to a man, were harshly critical of Ottawa's loose anti-inflationary philosophy and demanded a full-blown federal-provincial conference on inflation in order to deal with pressing regional problems. Ottawa appeared about as interested in that idea as it is in wage and price controls.

But suddenly the federal mind did an about-face. Finance Minister John Turner had been out in the wild west laying a little groundwork with the feisty western premiers on resource taxation. And now Ottawa was saying yes, come down and see us and we'll kick the problem around for one day. One day? The whole western world has been trying to come up with solutions to rampant inflation for nearly two years. The one-day Ottawa conference had a powerful odor of facile public relations. Let the boys get it off their chest, we'll toss them a few goodies and tensions will be eased all round, seemed to be the philosophy.

"Seemed" is the only word we can use because the discussions were held behind closed doors. The premiers reportedly came away brimming with confidence that the economy can be stabilized. That's very nice, but what about the people in this country who are faced with inflation every day? They are not brimming with confidence about the economy. In fact they are having a difficult time making ends meet. To have a secret meeting on a subject that concerns every person in this country is an insult to Canadians. Inflation is public business and meetings on the subject at the highest government levels should be conducted in public.

But the new sweetness and light between Ottawa and the provinces is also unnerving. Politicians with widely varying constituencies and philosophies are rarely in accord except when a problem becomes extremely grave. Yet premiers physically and philosophically as far apart as our own Dave Barrett and New Brunswick's Richard Hatfield are saying essentially the same thing: the economy is in good shape, don't worry, we'll see this thing through. A reassuring pat on the head is not enough as unemployment rises, housing starts decline by 30 per cent and B.C.'s forest industry talks of laying off 28,000 men this year.

These are not the indicators of a healthy economy. Closed meetings, paternalistic utterances and the official communique do nothing to lighten the gloom. It is time all levels of government laid it on the line, rather than staging contrived public relations exercises. From the public point of view, the one-day federal-provincial discussion was a bad joke.



Firm Stand

Privacy for Public Figures

Margaret Trudeau is certainly the most ingenuous and free-spoken of political wives to have lived at 24 Sussex Drive, the official residence of the prime minister of Canada. In an extraordinary television interview broadcast on Sunday night by CTV, she described herself as "pretty much an out-front, straight forward chick." To use a similar phrase, she let it all hang out.

At the same time, there seems to be a paradox of huge proportions buried in her revealing and sometimes touching comments on life in a fishbowl. She complained of a lack of personal freedom, of being a "prisoner" in her role, dogged by two RCMP bodyguards whenever she goes shopping.

Yet she made the complaints on television, an all-seeing, often pitiless medium of communication. Probably half the population of the country either saw the actual program which featured her as its "star attraction" or read the front-page stories in the newspapers the next day which quoted her at length.

But politicians — and politicians' wives — should remember publicity is hard to control. News coverage doesn't submit to the mechanical laws of plumbing or the sausage-making business. It can't be turned on and off like a tap; now on for election campaigns, now off for the between times. It's a bit like asking a camel to poke his head only so far into the tent and no further. Where should the line be drawn and who should draw it?

Whet the public curiosity with candid remarks about what a wonderful guy your husband is, who also happens to be prime minister of Canada, and, understandably, there may come the reply, "Tell us more."

Mrs. Trudeau's efforts in her husband's behalf played no small part in his re-election to the highest office in the land. She became a public figure in her own right, yet shied away from any press interviews during the campaign.

She said on Sunday she is trying to decide whether to remain "just" a wife and mother or to "reach out a bit and try and do something in Canada on a more ... professional level ..." If Mrs. Trudeau opts for the latter she may expect more, not less, public scrutiny and interest in herself.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Save Museum

There was so much evidence of civic pride and citizens were most helpful and obliging towards their visitors.

Your provincial museum is superb as is the maritime museum, which, in both cases, are extremely fascinating and instructive.

The former of course is in perpetuity, but what of the latter? This is a most important exhibition and should be perpetuated in like manner, and every effort should be made to do this while there are dedicated and knowledgeable people around to advise.

The history of beautiful Victoria is so closely associated with the sea, the ships and the brave men who sailed them that it seems appropriate to display the city's traditions through an expanding maritime museum.

I heartily agree with the sentiments expressed by the following quotation (from Canadian Historical Review) which is featured at the provincial museum: "No self-respecting society can neglect or wantonly destroy the records of its own development without living to regret it."—Cyril L. Hume, Marine Historian, Neutral Bay, Australia.

Praise for Dave

In the Times you published a letter written by "Victoria Home-owner and O.A.P." concerning increases of assessments and taxes on his (or her?) home since 1953.

He blames the provincial government for the 300 per cent increase but forgets that assessments and municipal taxes are the responsibilities of the local municipal authority.

He was fortunate in having an increase of only 300 per cent in 21 years. My city taxes have gone up around 450 per cent since 1950, but thanks to the present provincial government I have no cause for complaint. Neither has the writer of the above letter when you examine his figures.

He states that he paid $129.32 for 1953 taxes which this year were $395.52. But he was allowed by the provincial government this year, including a special grant for those over 65 years of age, the amount of $262.95 according to the tax notice. Subtract that from his figure of $395.52 and the result is $132.57 for his 1974 city taxes. When you compare that with his 1953 taxes of $129.32 you see that he only actually paid $3.25 more this year than in 1953. Most home owners would envy him.

Instead of worrying and criticizing Premier Barrett and the provincial government he should be appreciative of his favorable tax situation as well as other benefits to us O.A.P.s like free prescribed drugs and medication, bus passes with no restrictions, Mincome, ambulance service at a low cost, $80 rental grant to tenants. These needed reforms show that the premier is well aware of O.A.P.s' problems and will help to remove or at least ease the burden.

Concerning inflation, my fellow OAP repeats a truth obvious to all on which there is no argument. When he asks: "Where will we all end?" The only reply is: "No one knows." To his other question: "When is it going to stop?" I suggest the answer is: Not until people face and accept the full facts and reject half-truths and misrepresentations. Meanwhile, thanks a lot, Dave. — W. Wood, 1518 Haultain.

CBC-CRTC Fight Brewing Over Ads and Canadian Content

By RICHARD GWYN

OTTAWA — A six-month-old confrontation between the Canadian Radio-Television Commission and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that is about to break to the surface has in it the making of a tragedy.

Pierre Juneau, chairman of the CRTC, and Laurent Picard, president of the CBC, are two of the ablest public servants in the country. Picard has taken a CBC that was moribund and demoralized and brought it back to life. Juneau probably saved Canadian broadcasting from being destroyed by the American programming that flooded in with cable television systems, and he has infused Canadian broadcasting with a sense of mission: "Either we have a country or we don't. Let's decide."

The tragedy is that Juneau and Picard now are locked in a personal battle. Unless they find a way out the broadcasting of one or other could be destroyed.

"This mustn't needn't become a win or lose situation," says Picard. He pauses, then adds: "But I am not a loser. The CBC cannot afford to lose any more. It will kill the CBC if we go back to where anyone can kick us whenever they want to."

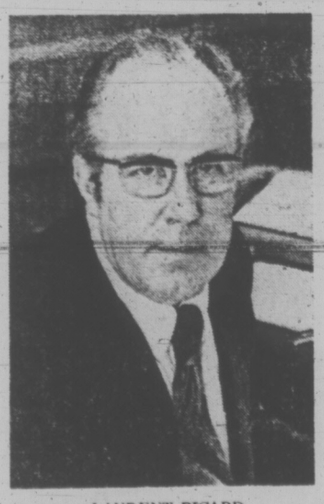
Juneau: "Our views may be wrong, but they are deeply-felt and they are there to be judged." Again a pause. "The commission has lost fights before, that is not important in itself. But let me make it clear that we cannot afford to, and do not intend to, lose too many fights."

The debate between Juneau and Picard stems from a CRTC report of last April which extended for five years — this was a formality — the CBC's licence to broadcast but, in an unprecedented step, attached "proposed conditions" to the licence renewal. The commission warned the CBC to "guard strongly against considering itself as a mass medium, and particularly against considering its audience as mass." As steps to that goal the CRTC directed the CBC to cut its advertising commercials by roughly half by 1978 and to fill prime-time starting a year from now from 8 to 9 p.m. with a minimum of 50 per cent Canadian content, compared to less than 30 per cent at the time of the report.

The report earned the CRTC its first critical reviews in half a decade of almost unprecedented public applause for a regulatory body. Editorials denounced the CRTC for lecturing the CBC and for dictating to parliament which would have to advance extra funds to the CBC to make up for its lost ad revenues.

Since April the CBC board of directors and the commission have met once, and Picard and Juneau have met together a dozen times. Neither side has conceded an inch. In private each man speaks about the other with great bitterness.

The CBC intends to ignore the commission's directives. The CBC budget for next year, submitted to treasury board last week, makes no provision for the lost ad revenue. Although the CRTC directed the CBC to end commercials on radio by next January 1, the commercials will be carried to the end of March, at which time the CBC planned to drop them anyway.



LAURENT PICARD
. . . Juneau should read Mao

These details are trivial, and could be settled in a half-hour session between the two men. Picard, for example, agrees fully with the CRTC's goal of 50 per cent Canadian programs in prime time, but rejects the right of the CRTC to tell the CBC "how to manage the corporation."

If Juneau and Picard cannot settle their differences, then Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier will have to do it for them. "I'm just about to start finding out why nothing has happened," he told me. Pelletier is a personal friend of both men. "I'm not particularly looking forward to it, but I've told both of them that if I have to arbitrate they'll get a decision, and that'll be it." Among the innumerable ironies in the affair is that the main thing Juneau, Picard and Pelletier, all Quebeckers, are arguing about is the quality and content of English-language television.

The specific CRTC directives to the CBC are only the surface of the debate. Its substance is shaped by two competing philosophies, about the nature of public broadcasting, about the condition of Canada and about ways to achieve an excellence that both men seek. The debate is shaped also by politics and by personalities.

The starting point is the character of the two men. Neither stands alone. Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the CRTC and before that with the CBC, contributed almost as much to the controversial report as did Juneau. Picard's executives are more hawkish than he. They urged him to take the confrontation directly to parliament and the cabinet, a tactic Picard so far has refused to follow.

Few men could have less in common their qualities are almost a reverse-image of the other's. Juneau is a lone, long-distance runner, a private, driven man who has devoted his entire life to films and to broadcasting convinced that in the flickering images on the screen lies the survival of the nation. Juneau is a poor administrator and can be brutal in his backroom dealings. Yet he has a physical presence, a quality of coiled strength, and incisive intellect that commands respect even from private broadcasters (whom he has slapped down) and something like devotion from those who work with him.

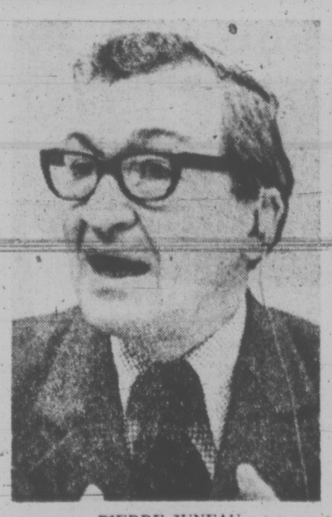
Juneau is pure Gallic, intense, logical, contained. Picard on the surface seems almost the model of an English-Canadian business executive. He's one of the best administrators in the country and this year passed up an offer to become chairman of Canadian National Railways because he thought the job lacked challenge. Picard moves from challenge to challenge and conquers them with management, with graphs, and charts and "modules," with easy self-confident humor. "Being president of the CBC is always having to say you're sorry," he once remarked. He has a candor and frankness that leaves listeners helpless to separate out artless innocence from artful calculation.

Picard is far more than a manager. Before the CRTC hearings early this year, Picard immersed himself in English-Canadian literature "to find out about the rest of the country." He once taught business administration at the University of Montreal, and used as a textbook The Revolutionary War by Mao Tse-tung. A generation of rising executives learned from that book "all there is to know about timing and about preparing your resources before you attack a target."

Picard believes Juneau should read Mao. "You can kill the CBC with exaggerated expectations just as you can kill a child's growth if you demand too much from him or her."

"Sure, I'd love to replace Maude and M.A.S.H., but you can't do that until you have the Canadian programs to replace them. We need three more years to build; then attack us for everything we have failed to do."

Picard's mood is exasperation ("if we abandon American programs now we lose our audience and there's no way parliament will fund minority network"), half-controlled anger ("the CRTC report was imprudent. No. Yes, let the word stand"), and sheer bafflement ("sure I'd like to reduce the commercials, but where's the money to come from? Commercials are simply not a priority").



PIERRE JUNEAU
. . . CBC no mass medium

Juneau's concern isn't timing. "The dates we proposed aren't important — they all can be changed," he said. (In practical terms, even if the cabinet agreed with Juneau, no money is available.) His concerns are the goals and directions of Canadian broadcasting. His eyes are on the horizon.

"There is a contradiction in the CBC that must be faced and debated. It won't go away, and it will become worse. Many of the most popular U.S. programs on the CBC are available, or could be available, on other channels (Canadian private and U.S. stations via cable TV).

"There is a contradiction between the CBC's public service pre-occupations, which are the reason for its existence, and its marketing pre-occupations, that is the link between mass audiences, certain types of imported programs and commercials." An example of the contradiction, says Juneau, is the CBC's decision to run baseball's world series instead of a Canadian Football League game.

Juneau's model for the CBC is not the U.S. Public Broadcasting System's educational network with its fragmentary audiences but Britain's BBC. "A corporation that is financed by public funds and gets marginal revenues from advertising should not be influenced so forcefully by the marginal part of its revenues," he says.

To each man's argument there is a counter-argument. U.S. programs are needed, says Picard, to build audiences for the Canadian programs that follow them. Juneau replies that it is not mass audiences that count but the combined size of smaller audiences all watching different programs.

An answer, though not a solution to the confrontation, is that either Juneau or Picard, or both, may move on to new jobs. Juneau is the more likely to stay, and become chairman of the new commission that will regulate both broadcasting and communications. His name has been suggested also as under-secretary of state, a post he almost took two years ago.

Picard told a commons committee he would "move aside for new blood in two or three years." The new blood will arrive much sooner than that and Picard's private goal is to step down next summer.

Before January a new CBC executive vice-president will be appointed to replace Lister Sinclair, who steps down to become vice-president of program innovation. Sinclair's successor will succeed Picard.

Under Picard's leadership the post of CBC president has become a plum. The search for a successor is one of the most massive undertaken. The first list contained 500 names. These now have been cut to eight. The short list includes Claude Bissell, former president of the University of Toronto; Douglas Fullerton, former chairman of the National Capital Commission; Allan Gotlieb, deputy minister of manpower and formerly of communications, and Peter Newman, editor of Maclean's magazine.

Picard in fact won't step down until both his succession and the CRTC dispute are resolved. And he's in a mood to fight: "The CBC missed the boat once. We drifted. If we do that again we're finished, and we deserve to be. We have to keep the people we've just attracted, like John Hirsch. This is life or death for us, just give us time."

Juneau's views deserve respect. The contradiction he has identified is real. The CBC cannot ride forever on the back of U.S. programming. But Picard deserves the time he pleads for.

Somewhere, just out of reach today from two proud men, must be a point where both can say to the other, "you're right."

The answer is that both men are right. Both are fighting for the CBC's survival, Picard for today, Juneau for tomorrow. Juneau's ideas are right; Picard's immediate needs are real. The difference between them finally isn't ideology, but time. And pride.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 1, 1914.

NAPLES — Mount Vesuvius is again in eruption and the inhabitants of the vicinity have become greatly alarmed. Special prayers were made today and processions of people went to favored shrines as a repetition of the disaster of 1906 is feared. The activity of the volcano first became manifest by deep detonations and rumblings. This was followed by gigantic columns of smoke and soon thereafter an abundant eruption of lava began. In the last serious eruption of 1906, several villages were destroyed and the property loss was estimated at $20 million. About 500 persons were killed and 50,000 were rendered homeless.

Jack Horner's the Name And Politics Is His Game

By BRUCE GARVEY

OTTAWA — The Throne Speech debate was dragging on, with most MPs in the House of Commons having their half-hour's say. Nobody might have been expected to object to Stanley Knowles' recommendation to save time and get on with business.

Knowles, New Democratic Party leader in the House, suggested cutting the droning speeches down to 20 minutes, but he couldn't have done it at a worse time, precisely as big Jack Horner was lumbering to his feet for his half-hour's worth.

Not that Horner is any stickler for Throne debate speeches to a near-empty Commons. But this wasn't your run-of-the-mill speech for the 'rancher from Crowfoot, Alta. He hadn't labored over it for days and spent the night on a milk-run flight from Calgary for it, to have Stanley Knowles or anyone else lop 10 minutes off his time.

Sometime in the next two years, when Jack Horner may well be in the thick of a fight for the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party, he wants to be able to point back to that speech and say, "There it is, folks—Jack Horner's idea of conservatism."

Even as Robert Stanfield begins his self-imposed two-year sojourn as a lame-duck Opposition leader, there's a stirring among the Conservative benches about who'll take his place.

He won't say he's a candidate; he won't say he's not.

But whether he likes it or not, or wants it or not, Jack Horner feels events and the times are pushing him even closer to taking a cattleman's hefty fling at the job.

If there's one thing he's sure of, "It's about time to put some conservatism back into the Conservative party." And in Horner's view there's no way that Ontario Premier William Davis in many minds, Stanfield's heir apparent or any other easterner come to that, is likely to do it.

"We've got to re-establish ties with the West and it's going to take a westerner to do it," he shrugs.

"I've been approached, and I'm thinking and maybe even leaning a bit . . ."

So when Horner rises for his speech, the Commons is more populated than usual on a Throne debate afternoon. His old friend and mentor John Diefenbaker leans over to listen intently, and Claude Wagner—a likely leadership candidate—cocks an ear.

This is Horner's "philosophical speech," his "Concept for Canada," and much of his home-spun theory and cattleman's common sense is aimed at his own party as well as the Liberal government.

"There's one sure way to cure inflation," he says, "and that is to work a little harder, be a little more productive, save a little more, and for all governments to spend a little less."

There's a surplus of beef today, yet the farmer received approximately $120 a head less for butchered meat than he received a year ago. The cost of meat on the counter is about the same.

"Where did this $120 go? Inflation gobbled it up. The packer took $30 and retailing and distribution costs accounted for $80-90.

"Yet although there is a surplus of meat, the price remained the same for the consumer because the government has allowed inflation to run wild."

The cattle industry is Horner's first love. Out on his range, outside Calgary, he herds them with a half-ton truck and a strange-breed "Australian blue" cattle dog that he swears is the best heel'nipper he's ever known.

If there's a recurring nightmare that disturbs Jack Horner's sleep, it's a vision of a creeping, socialistic welfare state gradually sucking the vitality out of Canada . . . grinding down the hard-working middle-class with an increasing tax burden, propping up the poor without a nudge to help them work their way out of poverty, stifling the initiative of the small businessman whose incentive is to be able to make a dollar without government controls holding him back.

"He'll, I'm not heartless," says Horner outside the House. "I don't want to take help away from the kind of people who need it. I've got a bigger heart than many. But there's got to be the incentive to do a good day's work and be able to get ahead through doing it."

And he tells the Commons: "If we carry on as we have in the past, we will discourage these people. They will become reluctant to develop their skills and talents and will be more prepared to sit on their fannies and wait for the government to provide for them.

". . . There are two basic directions we can take to tackle our mounting problems —one is the socialistic, with state participation in all sectors, and the other is through a free market economy with over-all state control.

"Canada's greatest danger at the present time is that we are attempting to correct the situation through the socialistic route . . . this route is fraught with danger and is doomed to failure."

Horner saw it in the Conservative party's acceptance of a guaranteed annual income, work or no work. And that's the day he stomped away from Robert Stanfield and "socialist conservatism."

It wasn't any secret in Crowfoot riding, at least, that a vote for Jack Horner in last July's election was a vote against Stanfield as much as a vote against Pierre Trudeau and the Liberals.

It sometimes bothers Horner that he's often cast as some kind of Canadian cracker, a red-neck rancher who could use the same speech-writer as U.S. Senator Barry Goldwater.

But maybe Horner wouldn't quarrel with that altogether — he's a political animal, all right.

And before the next year is out he figures to surprise more than a few easterners with the dust that a little gut politics can throw up.

That's why he's hitting the college speaking tour in Ontario — the University of Toronto next month — with an "ask me anything" round of getting the feel of Bill Davis' home turf.

Somewhere along the line, Horner believes, Canada has lost "the true-blue Canadian attitude" — one might refer to it as the working philosophy.

"We must exhibit a keen desire to allow people to manage themselves. We must allow them to make a few dollars and determine how they should be spent.

"How many times have I sat in the House in the past few years and heard it said that this or that budget is increasing the burden of the middle-class?

"We cannot do that forever or we will kill the goose that laid the golden egg. The salaries of people in the middle class are taxed at a higher rate in Canada than they are in the United States and so are many of our companies.

"One cannot penalize a younger person who has initiative and drive for seeking out the highest reward for his efforts and services. These people do not mind living south of the border, and in fact many of them go there and have gone there."

Always there's government interference, says Horner, and banks that are putting up the money for Americans to buy us out. Tomorrow it will be the Japanese, Germans and Arabs, as well.

That's Jack Horner's conservatism and it's all on the record if anyone wants to know, while Horner sniffs at the political breezes blowing around Ontario and Alberta.

HORNER . . . voice of conservatism

Israel, Not Oil The Real Issue

By JOSEPH FITCHETT
The London Observer

BEIRUT — The often-forecast "great oil war" will not take place, according to Arab experts here. They say signs point to conciliation, not confrontation, on issues of Arab oil and Arab funds.

Fierce mutual denunciations between Arab capitals and Washington over high oil prices had created a crisis atmosphere. But the tension was partly based on confusion between two separate issues — a confusion deliberately fostered by both Arab and American diplomats. Politically, Arab governments are united in a solid front on using the oil weapon to obtain concessions in the Arab-Israeli dispute. The second issue — the long-term, more intractable question of relating the oil exports from Arab countries to their imports from industrial countries — conceals divergences among oil-producing countries which could crack open the oil front once the Israeli issue recedes.

A private Arab newsletter here summed it up neatly. Arab governments, conservative and radical alike, see oil as a weapon to secure settlement with Israel. At the same time, the United States sees American ability to procure settlement with Israel as a lever to extract pledges of lower oil prices and expanded production.

Publicly, both parties disguise this political trade-off.

Arab diplomats argue the economic case for the oil squeeze. They want to justify their policies and avoid a backlash of world opinion against the use of oil as a weapon against Israel. Naturally, too, Arab governments want the West to appreciate the worth of any eventual oil concessions. President Sadat claims there is a "major campaign led by world pro-Israeli circles" to blame the Arab oil war for all the world's woes. So the Arabs are consciously fighting back in the propaganda battle.

The American administration has motives for dramatizing the full dimensions of the threat — a confrontation over resources — which it expects to avert successfully by talking about the threat to the world economic order. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger rightly stresses the new interdependence he hopes governments will pursue. But the specific issue of oil supplies is hardly so complicated or drastic.

Sheikh Yamani, the Saudi Arabian Oil Minister, has often explained that his country's oil and money are suspended on the Arab-Israeli issue. A fresh outbreak of war will disrupt oil supplies again like last October. On the other hand, Yamani has explicitly said that if Israel withdraws from occupied Arab land Saudi Arabia will bring down oil prices.

Despite Kissinger's attempts to maintain that peace talks and oil prices are separate issues, his last Middle East trip demonstrated again that Washington recognizes they are directly and inseparably linked. Kissinger's public satisfaction over the renewed Saudi offer of oil relief after a political settlement was widely commented on here. The Arab adage "petroleum is 90 per cent politics" never seemed truer.

Saudi Arabia can deliver. Oil producers have no intention of selling oil again as cheaply as before, and many want still higher prices. But Saudi Arabia has the largest supply of export oil and it influences smaller Arab oil exporters' policies. A Saudi bid to lower oil prices and a Saudi decision to recycle its oil earnings would take the main heat out of the situation.

Saudi Arabia does not need more oil income and it is not concerned about conserving oil, which it has in abundance. What Saudi Arabia does need is a political settlement of the Israeli-Palestinian problem, which will draw the teeth of Arab radicalism and make the Arabian peninsula safe for King Faisal's regime. As diplomats here point out, it suits Faisal and Kissinger to apply public pressure on one another now. In the long run, however, American and Saudi interests are linked.

A seldom-mentioned fact which underscores Saudi Arabia's freedom from ordinary economic equations is that Saudi Arabia (and some other Arab producers) have larger oil reserves than they admit. The extent of proven deposits is actually a closely kept secret. Prime areas in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Abu Dhabi and Iraq are closed to oil exploration or development either because of political disputes between neighboring countries or because the central government is reluctant to introduce oil and development into areas of potential dissidence. Also, oil wealth, publicly admitted, increases the demands from poorer political allies for financial support.

However co-operative Saudi Arabia is, some problems will remain. Iran needs every dollar of oil income to match the ruinous inflation which drives up the cost of imports required for its modernization. Iraq needs maximum income to finance its ambitious internal development and maintain its left-wing campaign in Arab countries. Algeria is pursuing the principle of Third World countries getting a fuller return for their perishable natural resources. China wants to see the oil war raise tensions in the industrial world.

All Arab governments genuinely resent their under-representation in the world's lofty financial councils. They want to see more manufacturing of oil-based products done in Arab factories. Poor Arab countries like Egypt demand fixed subsidies from oil-rich countries like Saudi Arabia.

But none of these problems generate the same amount of pressure as the confrontation over the Arab-Israeli issue. This is what is blocking the oil abundance of Saudi Arabia.

Deportation Could Be a Haitian Death Order

By RONALD LEBEL
The Toronto Star

MONTREAL — Like 1,500 Haitians in the Montreal area, Paul Saint-Surin and his wife, Marie-Josee, live in constant fear of being deported to their native "island in the sun."

"I will never return to Haiti," the 24-year-old laborer vowed in an interview. "They may ship my body over there, but they will not take me alive."

Penniless and desperate, the couple went into hiding after telling a reporter last month they hoped the Canadian government would soon review the status of Haitian refugees.

Saint-Surin and his wife have been ordered deported because they entered Canada as visitors after the 1972 federal election, when the cabinet changed immigration rules to ban this practice. The Immigration Appeal Board upheld the deportation orders in September.

Scores of Haitians have been expelled in recent weeks and community leaders predict the total will reach 1,500. About 900 await the outcome of their appeals while the others eke out a living as clandestine cheap labor.

In interviews with The Star, spokesmen for Haitian groups described the deportations as a tragedy because of the "police state terror" and "disastrous economic conditions" prevailing in their homeland.

The Civil Liberties League of Quebec has requested an urgent meeting with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau, one of its founders, to discuss possible solutions. The Quebec government and French-language newspapers have also voiced concern.

Some illegal immigrants, such as Marc Georges Severe, who faces deportation this month, fear they will be imprisoned or executed without trial in Haiti because of their political activities against the Jean-Claude Duvalier dictatorship.

Others who never engaged in politics, such as Saint-Surin, fear arrest or financial reprisals because the Haitian regime considers all nationals who flee the country as undesirables.

Many of those facing deportation have the dubious consolation of knowing that their spouses or children can remain here because they have landed immigrant status or Canadian citizenship. This applies, for instance, to the Saint-Surins' two-month-old daughter, Ketty.

Immigration officials express sympathy for the plight of the Haitian "visitors" — most of whom have been in Canada for more than a year but stress they have a duty to enforce existing laws and regulations.

Rev. Paul Dejean, director of a counselling service for the 13,000 French-speaking Haitian immigrants in Montreal, urges federal authorities to admit the 1,500 "visitors" on humanitarian grounds. "These people are not all political refugees in the narrow meaning of the law," he said, "but they were forced to escape by conditions created by a ruthless regime. Most of those who filed appeals face a tragic fate if they are deported. Some would be in mortal danger."

Dejean, former private secretary to the archbishop of Haiti, was expelled with seven other priests five years ago for allegedly "undermining the Catholic faith."

He says Severe, a former teacher, and other Haitian exiles with university training, literally fear for their lives at the hands of the notorious Tonton Macoute militia and a new police unit known as the Leopards, personally headed by Jean-Claude Duvalier, the country's 22-year-old "president for life."

"We have evidence that several persons were arrested after being deported from Canada," Dejean said. "Some of them have not been heard from since they went back."

In other cases, Dejean said, "they got out of prison only after they gave the Tonton Macoutes all the money they had saved in Canada."

Immigration department spokesmen say they have no reason to believe that deportees experience reprisals by Haitian authorities, but Dejean replies he can provide specific cases and names on a confidential basis.

"Because of censorship of the press and the mails, it is difficult to get details," the Oblate priest commented, "but we know that many deportees are given very rough treatment during interrogations."

Dr. Louis Roy, a department head at Rosemont Hospital and a one-time president of the Haitian Red Cross, said immigration authorities in Ottawa seem "totally unable to grasp" that the Duvalier family has imposed a reign of terror for 17 years.

"A few surface changes have been made since Jean-Claude Duvalier succeeded his father in 1971 to attract foreign capital, but the repression continues," he said.

I could give you the names of at least 25 persons I know who have been imprisoned under Jean-Claude. People keep disappearing. My own brother was arrested 11 years ago and no one has seen him since then."

Roy fled to Canada with his family in 1959 after a fragmentation bomb temporarily blinded his 5-year-old son. The bombing occurred soon after he stated in a letter to Francois (Papa Doc) Duvalier that women and children were being held hostage or intimidated by police despite repeated protests by the Haitian Red Cross.

The 1,500 refugees who came here last year were misled by unscrupulous travel agents and by the lack of a Canadian immigration office in Haiti, Roy said. (An office was opened last December).

"It is an ignominy that these people now face deportation," he said. "The only humanitarian solution is for the minister of immigration to use his discretionary powers to grant them an amnesty."

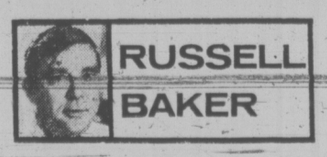
Immigration Minister Robert Andras said in a statement last month he was fully satisfied the law was being applied "fairly and equitably" to the Haitian group.

"No one who enters Canada illegally can be permitted to remain," the minister said.

Rene Saint-Louis, a director of the Quebec Civil Liberties League, retorts that the 1,500 Haitians should be treated like the refugees from Uganda, Chile, and Communist countries who have been admitted to Canada on humanitarian or political grounds.

Canada has every right to restrict future immigration, he argued, but mass deportations to Haiti detract from this country's freedom-loving image.

Rocky Is One Good Fella



Jerry invited Rocky to the house for toast and pinochle and the toaster broke down.

"Don't worry about it, fella," Rocky said, producing a new toaster. "I want you to have this."

"Gosh, Rocky," said Jerry, "I couldn't take your toaster."

"In that case, how about a Picasso?" Rocky asked and he handed Jerry a canvas by the master.

"That's decent of you, Rocky," said Jerry, "but it doesn't have any place to put the toast in."

Rocky said he would call the chairman of General Electric and have him come over right away and wire the Picasso for toasting. Which would increase its value from $100,000 to $100,039.95.

"I couldn't take a gift like that, Rocky," said Jerry. "If I did I might start trying to lose to you at pinochle, and then life wouldn't be as much fun anymore."

Jerry said he had a better idea. "I'll nip around to the bank and take out a toaster loan," he said. "You don't have to nip around fella. I've got a bank right here," Rocky said, producing a bank. "Borrow as much as you want."

"Golly, Rocky," said Jerry.

"Don't call me Golly Rocky," said Rocky. "If word gets around that people are calling me Golly Rocky, I'll never get to be president of the United States."

"Why not, golly — I mean Rocky?" asked Jerry.

"Because Americans will never put up with a president called Golly Rocky, fella. So cut it out and take your loan."

Jerry said he would rather nip out to his own bank.

Rocky said if Jerry insisted on nipping out he would give him a limousine to shorten the trip.

Jerry declined the gift but said Rocky could do him a small favor. Since he was already deeply in debt to his bank, the credit department might reject his request for a toaster loan. If Rocky went along with him, however, the bank would probably be so impressed it would make the loan without questions.

Rocky said Jerry was out of touch with reality. It was a myth to believe that just because his name was Rocky he had any power to sway toaster-loan decisions.

"Come on, Rocky, and be a good fella," Jerry pleaded.

When they entered the bank with Rocky trailing Jerry, the bank dick rushed at them, shoved Jerry aside, saying, "don't get in the way of the customers, you mug," saluted Rocky and said, "do you want the bank president to come down here, sir, or would you prefer the full board of directors?"

Rocky gave him a new uniform and a small Van Gogh.

Before the presentation had ended, three board chairmen from the building across the street, having seen Rocky enter the bank, rushed in to ask if he wanted them to re-organize their companies.

"All I want is a little toast, fellas," Rocky said, and all three raced off to get him some.

Meanwhile, a policeman had entered the bank and taken Jerry into custody. "You want me to book this guy on charges of obstructing the progress of a customer, Rocky?" he asked, Rocky gave him a solid silver badge and an all-expense-paid week in Venezuela.

By this time the bank president had arrived. Rocky asked him to get up off his knees. "My friend Jerry wants a small loan," he said.

"We are a rather small bank," the president apologized. "I could give him enough to buy a few airlines, but for anything bigger I would need an hour on the telephone."

Jerry said all he wanted was a toaster loan, so the president took $39.95 out of his pocket and gave it to Jerry, explaining that he would do all the paperwork personally and deliver it later in the day.

Rocky gave the bank president a brand new bank.

"Gosh, Rocky," said Jerry, when back at Jerry's house they were waiting for the toast to pop up, "you're the biggest-hearted guy I ever met. What makes you want to give to people so much?"

"It runs in the family, fella," said Rocky. "My granddad was the same way. Whenever he saw somebody he liked he gave 'em a dime."

Jerry said he wished he had something to give Rocky. Rocky said he did. Jerry asked what. "This house," said Rocky. The toast popped up. Jerry wondered what Lincoln would have done.

Police Bugged By Tap Laws

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's wiretap legislation appears to be reducing police wiretapping as civil libertarians hoped it would, although police are said to be unhappy about it.

Solicitor-General Warren Allmand, the minister responsible for the enforcement of the act, said this week he is telling police to give the law an honest try, and in the meantime catalogue what they think are its bad points.

The law, which came into effect this summer, stipulates that police may not bug without a judge's permission and that 90 days after a bug has been removed the victim of a wiretap must be informed.

However, a judge may rule that notification can be delayed.

Wiretapping, other than by police and security officials, is outlawed under the legislation.

Allmand said he has been told that police sometimes are not bugging because they fear the necessity of sending out notifications to wiretap victims will result in the disclosure of undercover men or investigations.

The law says that attorneys-general and the solicitor-general or their agents may ask a judge for a delay in notification.

But police say they have no way of knowing in advance what a judge's decision will be.

In some cases police bugging continues when a judge can be shown that other means of investigation have been tried without success.

The RCMP concedes that it has sent out notifications but would not say how many.

Justice Minister Otto Lang has said he still disagrees with the notification clause but added he is awaiting reports.

The significant thing to both federal ministers will be whether judges are granting the extensions.

Whatever the feelings of police, civil libertarians are content.

Gordon Fairweather (PC—Fundy Royal), Progressive Conservative justice critic, said he has heard of discontent in one attorney-general's department. "If that is so it's all to the good," he said.

Stuart Leggatt (NDP—New Westminster), who sought to make wiretapping even tougher than it now is, says the legislation seems to be working successfully and that it appears to have stopped frivolous wiretaps by police merely seeking information.

He said he does not believe the legislation reduces police ability to fight crime but it does add a bureaucratic nuisance to police work.

Leggatt hopes eventually Canada can ban all wiretapping.

Clay Powell, assistant deputy attorney-general for Ontario, said recently that the Ontario government is careful when it brings in applications for bugging.

"We're in the middle," he said. "The police say they're hamstrung, and the other side says it's an invasion of privacy. We're trying to find a balance."

He said only a handful a notifications would go out today.

The extent of wiretapping by RCMP, provincial and municipal police will only be known in a year from now, when the solicitor-general and attorneys-general must make reports to their respective legislatures.

Senators Facing More Work

OTTAWA (CP) — Starting next week, the Senate will have extended hours and the $18,000-a-year senators sometimes will be required to sit five days a week.

Senator Ray Perrault, government leader in the Senate, said Thursday that the 102-seat appointed body will sit four days next week. The Senate generally meets three days a week—Tuesday night and Wednesday and Thursday afternoon.

He said the Liberal government's heavy legislative workload is the reason for the extra hours.

Since Sept. 30, when Parliament opened, seven bills have been approved by the Senate and another five bills which have received approval in principle are currently before Senate committees for clause-by-clause study.

'Have the Mountains Moved?'

OTTAWA (CP) — A veteran Progressive Conservative senator suggested Thursday that British Columbia and Alberta be left to fight out boundary disputes on their own.

"I did not know it was the business of Canada to tell the two provinces what their boundary should be," Sen. Grattan O'Leary (Ontario) said during debate of a bill to create a three-member commission to resolve boundary disputes between B.C. and Alberta.

Representatives from each province and the federal government would serve on the commission.

O'Leary said he can foresee problems with the commission not being able to agree on a boundary dispute and questioned the need for such a commission.

"Surely there (now) is some sort of boundary decided by someone," he said. "What has happened? Are the mountains moving?"

The bill was passed despite O'Leary's objections and now goes to the Commons for consideration.

The B.C.-Alberta boundary through the Rocky Mountains currently is marked on official maps as a series of broken lines. The bill would empower the boundary commission to survey the boundary line, settle disputes respecting the boundary and maintain survey monuments and other physical evidence of the boundary.

Subject to the approval of the B.C. and Alberta cabinets, the federal government could order the boundary on official maps revised under the direction of the commission.

MPs KEPT IN DARK: EVEN TURNER

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition members in the Commons Thursday tried in vain to find out what happened at the previous day's meeting between Prime Minister Trudeau and the provincial premiers.

Trudeau himself was not in the House to make the report and acting prime minister Mitchell Sharp could only report what the premiers said afterwards in the press.

Finance Minister John Turner even confessed that he hadn't been invited to sit in on the main part of the conference.

He was only allowed to attend "at coffee time," he added.

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham) protested at the beginning of the sitting that no government minister had made a statement to report on the federal-provincial discussion to deal with inflation.

"I should like to protest as strongly as I can as a member of this House," he said, "the continual ignoring of the members of the House by not giving us information so that we can properly discuss the affairs of this nation."

Sharp said the prime minister was not present in the House because he was meeting union leaders on the inflation question, but that Turner would answer any questions about the conference.

Opposition leader Robert Stanfield then asked Turner if a consensus was reached by the prime minister and premiers on sharing of the national product.

Turner replied that subject was discussed at lunch before he arrived.

2 Old Enemies Become Friends

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Former consumer affairs minister Herb Gray came to the rescue of his former tormentor Thursday when he defended Beryl Plumtre during a concerted attack in the special Commons committee on egg marketing.

"They were trying to destroy her credibility," Gray said after the meeting, referring to persistent outbursts from MPs from all parties who appeared offended that farm producers should be criticised.

During his years as minister of consumer affairs, Gray was under constant attack in the Commons because of findings published by Plumtre's food prices review board.

She said after Thursday's session that "perhaps the committee members' questions indicated they would not be completely objective in their analysis" of the egg marketing situation.

Plumtre's basic position, reinterating the findings published in two egg reports this year by her board, was that provincial egg marketing boards, and the Canadian Egg Marketing agency which oversees them, were given monopolistic powers without adequate federal-provincial agreements to contain those powers.

The boards being staffed by and for farm producers, prices were being kept artificially high without any concern of input by the consumer.

The first to begin the attack on the witness was Marcel Lessard (L-Lac St. Jean), who gave an impassioned plea for the producer, stating that if government boards such as Plumtre's did not stop mis-using their time by attacking producers, "one day — and I even hope it happens, housewives will have to stand in line to get meat."

Lessard then asked the witness if her board ever concerned itself with prices being too low instead of always concentrating on high prices.

Indicative of the committee's feelings was that his plea was greeted by enthusiastic table-thumping from members of all parties on the committee.

Then Larry Condon, freshman Liberal MP for Middlesex - London - Lambton, prefaced his questions with the statement that he had always respected the food prices review board, but he now saw that it was clearly "inadequate."

Proceeding to try to catch inconsistencies in what the witness had told the committee, he was quickly shown to be in error and came in for a quiet roasting from Plumtre when he was finished his round of questioning.

BRECHIN

'We Knew Of Eggs Rotting'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Consumer Association of Canada knew eggs were rotting in storage for two months before it wrote to Prime Minister Trudeau July 26, the special Commons inquiry into egg marketing was told Thursday.

Maryon Brechin said in reply to questions from Don Mazankowski (PC — Vegreville) that the delay in making the findings known was due to the CAC's dependence on volunteers.

"We are all volunteers," Mrs. Brechin, past president of the consumer group, said. "It's a slow process."

"We don't just dash out on things like this," added CAC president James O'Grady.

The consumer association officials said they got their information about the eggs from people in the industry and "people who were storing them in apple storage facilities and were worried that the eggs wouldn't move in time for the apple harvest."

O'Grady said the CAC was opposed to national marketing boards and asked the committee to inquire into the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency's financial transactions.

He said his group, with a national membership of 120,000, had information that CEMA had borrowed $1 million from a chartered bank in May and when the bank refused to extend the credit the marketing agency got agriculture department backing for an additional $10 million.

Mrs. Brechin said the national marketin agency does not work and producers in many parts of the country are withholding the levy imposed by CEA to cover marketing losses.

The CAC is not opposed to provincial boards since a certain amount of market control seems necessary and they appear to have worked well except for the chicken and egg war that had provinces closing their borders to sister provinces and led to creation of CEMA, O'Grady said.

Political Barriers May Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister James Richardson said Thursday he will consider lifting a ban on politics on Canadian Forces bases.

He was answering a question in the Commons from Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg South Centre) who asked that forces people be treated like other citizens.

Under military regulations, politicking is not permitted on bases. Candidates cannot go ringing doorbells in married quarters, for instance.

Richardson said Knowles made a good point and he will be pleased to consider it.

Health-Care Cost a Topic

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The spiralling cost of the multi-billion dollar health care federal program shared with the provinces, and its inflationary impact, will be a subject to be discussed by the federal and provincial ministers of finance when they meet here Dec. 9 and 10.

Finance Minister John Turner agreed with opposition suggestions Thursday that the inflationary rate of health care costs were matter of grave concern to all governments in this country.

He said it was not discussed at the mini-summit meeting between Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 premiers Wednesday.

He indicated it will be on the agenda of the finance ministers' annual conference in December.

He was responding to questions by Heward Grafftey (PC—Brome Missiquoi). The member said there was a 15 per cent annual increase in the soaring costs of the federal provincial joint health care programs.

Turner recalled that the federal government had tried in the past to devise with the provinces some formula to put "some cap on the escalation of the health costs."

Grafftey said the federal government imposed on the provinces the medicare program in operation today.

"What initiatives does the federal government intend to take to clear up this matter and when will proposals be made so that the rising costs will be brought under control?" asked the Quebec MP.

Turner told the Commons that in the last two or three years to his knowledge the federal government had produced several proposals. All of them were rejected by the various provinces.

"I agree that the subject is vital. It is still worthwhile exploring and we will continue to take initiatives," said Turner.

Old Saving Bonds for New Not Always Wisest Choice

By AL FORREST

Investors should sell their 1973 Canada Savings Bonds to buy the 1974 issue only if they expect to cash in the bonds before 1979, says George Sherwood of Vancouver, regional director of the payroll savings program for British Columbia.

He said in a telephone interview the new Canada Savings Bonds will pay $1,877.50 in 1983 for each $1,000 purchased.

By contrast, the 1973 issue will pay only $1,752.25 per $1,000 in 1983 but investors in 1979 will collect a bonus of $205, pushing the value to $1,957.25.

"If the investor expects to cash in the bonds before the bonus is due in 1979, it makes sense to collect 9.75 per cent per year under the new program rather than 7.5 per cent. Otherwise, he is further ahead to wait for the bonus."

In addition, another bonus of $215 per $1,000 comes due in 1985.

The interest rate on the 1973 issue plus bonuses makes an effective yield of 10.5 per cent.

Both the 1973 and 1974 issues have unusually high yields, responding to high interest rates in other fields.

Sherwood said British Columbia leads all of Canada in sales to this point, in terms of increase over last year.

To date, the total sale is $21.1 million worth of 1974 bonds, 25 per cent ahead of the 1973 sale.

Closing date is Nov. 15.

A total of 29,052 applications for 1974 savings bonds have been received so far.

Sherwood said Canada savings bonds are a very safe investment because they can be cashed at any time for the full principal plus accured interest. In addition, the high interest rate is guaranteed by the government for the term of the bonds.

The interest rate is high, responding to a generally high interest rate this year. Even if the general interest rate declines, the rate will continue to be 9.75 per cent for 1974 bonds and the long-term yield on the 1973 issue will continue to be 10.5 per cent.

He said the 1974 bonds have offered the best short-term yield in the history of Canada savings bonds.

He stressed that the question of whether to cash in old bonds to buy the new issue depended entirely upon the individual case. Anyone intending to hold onto the bonds beyond 1979 for retirement or other purposes would be better off hanging on to their old issues.

Young investors who may be needing cash in a year or two for a down payment on a house or other major purchase would be further ahead to cash their old bonds, buy the 1974 issue, and collect an interest rate of 9.75 per cent while holding the bonds.

The bonds sell in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, $5,000 and $25,000. Purchase limit is $50,000.

For tax purposes, the federal government will treat the cash bonuses either as interest income or capital gains, at the option of the investor.

The bonus will become exempt from tax if it amounts to less than $1,000 under terms of new legislation to be introduced this month by Finanance Minister John Turner.

Turner said in September he intends to re-introduce legislation to make the first $1,000 interest income exempt from taxation.

The $1,000 interest deduction also applies to the 1974 savings bond interest. This means the interest on $10,000 worth of bands—$975 per year—is tax free after the legislation is proclaimed.

The 1974 issues went on sale Sept. 30.

Holders of previous issues receive two cash bonus payments if they mature after 1979. The first is payable on Nov. 1, 1979, and the second when the bond matures.

To receive the cash bonuses, the holder takes the bond to his bank or trust company where the bonus will be paid and the bond returned immediately to the investor.

In some cases a bonus may be earned prior to 1979. For example, the 1969-70 series carries a bonus of $115 per $1,000 on Nov. 1, 1978, its maturity date.

Kaiser Resources

Kaiser Resources Ltd. Thursday announced an amendment to its sales contract with its Japanese customers providing for metallurgical coal price increases of 81 cents a long ton effective Oct. 1, 1974, 69 cents effective Oct. 16, 1974 and 8 cents effective Jan. 16, 1975.

Edgar F. Kaiser, Jr., president and chief executive officer, said the price increases were granted to cover recent increases in material and labor costs and expected changes in pension costs in 1975.

With the revisions effective in October, the price of coal delivered under the company's long-term sales contract with its Japanese customers currently is $30.24 per long ton.

G and H Steel

G and H Steel Industries Ltd., a reinforcing steel company, announced Thursday it is acquiring control of Triscon Steel Ltd. of Edmonton, a reinforcing steel fabricating business operating in Alberta and British Columbia.

No details were available.

In its six-month statement ending June 30, G and H reported net earnings of $2,114,153 or $1.90 a share as compared with $333,308 or 33 cents a share in 1973.

Revenue was almost double, to $31,662,000, from $18,710,000.

The company also reported it was negotiating for construction of a plant and facilities in Edmonton.

Finning

Finning Tractor and Equipment Co. Ltd. reports third-quarter profit of $2 million or 50 cents a share compared with profits of $1.3 million or 34 cents a share for the corresponding period of 1973.

Revenue for the period just ended was $41.4 million compared with $36.1 million in the 1973 third quarter.

The figures showed a profit of $5.5 million or $1.40 a share compared with $4.3 million or $1.11 a share in the same period last year.

Company chairman and chief executive officer W. M. Young said the increased profit resulted from lower income tax rates and tighter control of expenses within the company.

He added that earlier price increases to cover increased costs of supplies enabled the firm to "restore margins."

Young said the company is worried by the weakened lumber market but has a large number of orders on hand from forestry companies.

He said that since construction sales and mining replacement demands remain firm, if an expected improvement in supply deliveries occurs the firm should expect "improved revenue in the fourth quarter of 1974."

Stock, Bond Firms 'Reel' From Losses

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's stock and bond industry is reeling from huge losses and rapidly losing competent personnel, the Toronto Stock Exchange said this week in a brief to the Ontario Securities Commission.

The exchange is seeking commission approval for a 10-per-cent increase in commissions for orders valued at more than $5,000, which would raise revenue for TSE brokers by an estimated seven per cent.

Presenting the brief to a commission hearing, TSE President J. R. Kimber said brokers' costs are rising rapidly but trading activity has not improved.

"A result of existing conditions is that, in a financial sense, the industry is losing its capability to perform its necessary role in the capital market."

He said that nine TSE stock-brokers have left or were about to leave business in the last six months, leaving membership at 82.

Operating losses of member firms totalled $20,517,000 in the six months ended Sept. 30.

During the same period, directors of member stock-brokers have withdrawn $8,368,000 of their money "because they have decided the industry has poor prospects for the future and that their money can be better used elsewhere."

Between the end of March and the present, the number of personnel employed by 65 of the member firms has dropped 11 per cent to 9,891 from 11,149.

Since January, the number of salemen employed by TSE members dropped six per cent to 4,738 from 5,039.

The exchange was last granted a rate increase late in 1973. The first increase in five years, it raised revenues about six per cent.

In July, the exchange asked for another increase of 17.5 per cent on commission charges for orders valued at more than $20,000. No increase was granted.

Kimber told the commission that different possibilities for raising commissions have been considered, but the exchange wants to avoid imposing higher charges on small investors.

"Small savers should be given every encouragement through investing to share in the benefits arising from the future economic growth of Canada."

Looking Ahead at Taxes: Family Allowances

This is one in a series of articles prepared for the Times by Revenue Canada to enable taxpayers to plan ahead for next spring.

Although this year, for the first time in 28 years, government family allowance payments became taxable, from a tax point of view all Canadian families with children under 18 should be better off than they were before.

Next year, when the time comes to file 1974 income tax returns, the parent who is claiming children as dependants must deduct the amount of taxable family allowance payments from his or her claim for personal exemptions.

Since a child may be claimed as a dependant for income tax purposes by either his mother or father, information slips will be issued by Health and Welfare Canada to the recipient of the family allowance. The slips will show the total family benefits paid in the year which must be included as income. The slip, called a TFA1 Supplementary, should be enclosed with the income tax return of the person or persons required to report the income or part of the income.

If the father claims the child as a dependant, he must include in his income allowances paid on behalf of the child although these allowances have been paid directly to his wife.

There is a formula for working this out. Instructions may be obtained from the local District Taxation Office.

The family allowance legislation gives the provinces the right to vary the size of the allowances on the basis of a child's age or the number of children in a family, or both.

Seven of the 10 provinces have opted to pay a flat $20 per child each month; the remaining three have established separate plans. Eligible families in Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario, Manitoba, British Columbia and Saskatchewan receive the flat rate. Prince Edward Island and Quebec have geared their programs to family size, and Alberta's is based on the age of the children involved.

Certain persons who are not actual residents in Canada throughout a particular year, but nevertheless subject to Canadian income tax, are entitled to receive family allowance payments. Included in this category could be students, teachers, employees of Canadian firms, members of the diplomatic corps and armed Forces.

Immigrants and emigrants are subject to tax on their world income while in Canada in the year they immigrated to or emigrated from Canada. Children of landed immigrants are eligible for family allowance payments as soon as the family arrives in Canada.

Children who come under the care of a government agency or of a private institution will be paid a special non-taxable allowance of $20, to be paid to the agency or institution. The special allowance will also be paid to foster parents of government-placed children. Another feature of the new allowances Bill is that increases, to compensate for changes in the cost of living, can be made by an Order-in-Council subject to House approval.

Effective from the beginning of 1974, when a family allowance is deposited in a bank account in the name of a child, or in trust, or otherwise invested in the child's name and the investment can be readily identified as the property of the child, any income earned from it is considered income of the child.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A claim by an 18-year-old that the court has lost jurisdiction over him because he was in jail when he was scheduled to be sentenced was turned down in provincial court Thursday.

Judge Edmont St. Jorre sentenced Trevor Patrick Clanton of Sidney to a three-month jail term to serve concurrently with a sentence now being served for another offence.

Lawyer Brian McAsey reminded St. Jorre at a special court session Clanton had been scheduled to appear for sentencing before him last Friday on a charge of uttering a forged prescription. But Clanton was unable to appear because he was in Wilkinson Road jail.

Clanton, released in his own recognizance in the sum of $500 after pleading guilty to the offence Oct. 12, had been taken to jail Oct. 22 after being arrested the previous day on a parole suspension warrant.

Parole had been suspended because of the charge.

McAsey said Clanton was unable to make a telephone call since he was taken into custody, and his office had been unable to find Clanton.

St. Jorre said he had heard about the problem of making phone calls from the jail for the past 27 years and added, "I can't see the big deal about putting a phone call in.

But St. Jorre decided the court still had the power to sentence Clanton.

"The body is here so I have jurisdiction," he said.

McAsey had argued the court lost jurisdiction because an "abuse of process" had caused "great prejudice" to his client.

St. Jorre also turned down McAsey's application to change the guilty plea that Clanton had entered.

McAsey said Clanton made the plea without the aid of a lawyer. Clanton "may well have valid defence.

"He knew what he was doing," St. Jorre said.

The offence, described by St. Jorre as being "very criminal and cheeky", concerned removing a prescription form Oct. 4 from Dr. I. P. Buckingham's office, 2412 Beacon.

He forged a prescription for 50 tablets and the doctor's signature and took the form to a drug store, but did not return to pick up the drugs.

McAsey asked for a short jail sentence because the offence was "not a type of forgery that hurts the public."

The court was not told what caused the fight, which attracted a crowd of about 40 persons.

Robert Leigh Finnega, 37, of 3978 Saanich, Alan William Sprigg, 23, of 1171 Newport, David Michael Wercholaz, 21, also of 1171 Newport, and Joseph Duncan Smith, 22, of Hamilton, were each fined $25 for creating a disturbance.

★ ★ ★

A 22-year-old husband, who struck a man his wife said had grabbed her was fined $25 for common assault on Wednesday.

Darrell Bowden, 564 Hillside, pleaded guilty.

Court was told Bowden's wife said the man had put his arms around her as she was walking on Hillside. She ran to tell Bowden, walking nearby, who grabbed the man and struck him in the face and the stomach.

Judge Ostler commented that Bowden "took the law into his own hands, which he had no right to do."

★ ★ ★

Smith was also fined another $200 for escaping custody.

He had been handcuffed and put in the rear of a police car, but escaped when a friend, John Fredrick Bridge, 24, of Hamilton, opened the door.

Smith got into a car driven by Bridge and was later rearrested at Fisgard and Blanshard.

Bridge was fined $100 for aiding Smith in the escape.

Duty counsel Brian MacKenzie said Bridge thought releasing his friend was a joke, but now realized the seriousness of the offence.

Judge William Ostler described the situation as dangerous because it can lead to riots."

A man who fired several rifle shots was given a suspended sentence and put on probation for a year.

Murray Lee Wiggins, 26, of 1510 Mount Douglas Crossroad, earlier pleaded guilty to dangerous use of a firearm, and ordered not to carry a firearm for a year.

Police had been called after shots were heard in the Mount Douglas Crossroad and Glendenning Road area.

Two young persons told police they had been walking on Glendenning when they heard shots and saw a man behind an upstairs window point an object in their direction.

★ ★ ★

A request to have the court grant a 20-year-old man an absolute discharge from a common assault conviction was turned down.

Defence counsel Richard Stewart made the request on behalf of Omer Joseph Elie St. Laurent, 20, of 1300 Yates, who pleaded guilty.

Stewart said the public would not be harmed if a discharge were given, because the chances of the offence recurring are negligible.

St. Laurent had struck his girl friend as he was leaving her home Oct. 17.

He had been asked to leave by the friend and by police, who were called to the house by the girl's sister, following an argument.

Stewart described the assault as "an act of frustration in not being able to iron out their differences in private."

Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald opposed the application saying St. Laurent showed "an unusual degree of determination when he lashed out in the very presence of police officers."

Stewart said the two now have reconciled their differences.

Ostler gave St. Laurent a suspended sentence and put him on six months' probation.

Granting a discharge, he said, would be "contrary to the public interest."

Paul Vincent Thompson, 20, of no fixed address, was given a suspended sentence and put on nine months' probation for four counts of obtaining goods or cash by false pretences and one count of obtaining food by fraud.

Thompson was also required to pay compensation.

He ordered a meal June 19 worth $1.55 from Scotts Fine Foods, 650 Yates, but did not pay for it. He also cashed three bad cheques in July worth $70 at Village Green Inn, in Duncan, and used a bad cheque July 19 to buy a pellet rifle and hunting bow from Island Collateral and Sales, 620 Johnson.

★ ★ ★

Steven Antoine Ladouceur, 20, of 1219 North Park, was fined $200 for shoplifting a pair of jeans worth $15 from The Bay on Wednesday.

Ladouceur took two pairs to a fitting room, then returned one to the rack and left without paying for the other.

★ ★ ★

Gordon Butts, 17, of 1741 Cedar Hill Cross Road, was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation for possessing cannabis resin, and, for possessing marijuana, Ian Leslie McCrimmon, 22, of 563 St. Charles, was fined $75.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Guy Stuart Smith, 21, of 2644 Prior, was fined $325 and banned from driving for 30 days for impaired driving, and, for the same offence, Wayne Darwin Gustafson, 27, of HMCS Yukon, was fined $350 and banned for two months.

Mail Embargoed

OTTAWA (CP) — A temporary embargo has been placed on all Canadian mail destined for France because of a postal strike which began last Tuesday in that county's territories, the post office announced. The embargo will be maintained as long as the strike lasts, the post office said in a release.

RED RIVER FLOODWAY BANKS BECOMES 130-FT. SKI HILL

WINNIPEG (CP) — An artificial ski slope providing runs up to 1,000 feet long is under construction on the banks of the Red River floodway.

Manitoba Recreation Minister Rene Toupin said Thursday plans call for a hill 130 feet high to increase the total height of the area to almost 200 feet.

The site is located adjacent to the floodway just south of Highway 59. The channel, which diverts water around the city in the spring flooding season, averages 30 feet in depth, and its slopes are already used for a variety of winter sports, including snowmobiling and tobagganing.

Rope tows, snow-making equipment, temporary warm-up areas, washroom facilities and a parking area are also planned for the site.

Toupin said the department is also studying the feasibility of building a "miniature mountain" 300 feet high on the site, with landscaped and treed slopes, a chalet, and other permanent year-round facilities.

The area may eventually become "a major ski area development right on the outskirts of Winnipeg," the minister said.

The cost of the initial phase of the development was not announced.

Manitoba Insurance Corp. Entering General Field

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation will enter the general insurance business early next summer, Public Insurance Minister Bill Uruski announced Thursday.

Legislation allowing the move was passed at the last session and proclaimed by order-in-council this week.

Effective Nov. 18, the legislation will change the name of the former automobile insurance act to the Manitoba Public Insurance Corporation Act to reflect the broader application.

The new act specified that separate financial accounts are to be maintained for Autopac and the general insurance business.

A wide range of non-compulsory general insurance coverage will be offered in competition with private companies. Autopac coverage is compulsory.

Initially, the government will offer fire insurance for commercial and residential establishments, guarantee and performance bonds on contracts and persons, public liability to protect homeowners and householders against injury to other persons on their property, and burglary and theft insurance.

Uruski said other forms of insurance will be offered later.

Following the announcement, Opposition Leader Sidney Spivak said in a news release the decision to proceed with fire insurance is another example of "stubborn, pig-headed adherence to socialist dogma that flies in the face of all the facts before us."

Joint Squad Eyed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Discussions are being held between the city police and fire departments aimed at forming a joint arson squad.

Police Chief Norman Stewart said such a move has been considered for some time but was being held up until completion of amalgamation of the fire and police departments.

Spree Closes Camp

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — The minimum security work camp at Moose Mountain Provincial Park in southeastern Saskatchewan has been temporarily closed as a result of a drinking spree Sunday, it has been announced.

The prisoners involved in the incident were returned to the Regina Correctional Institute Monday.

It was not known how long the camp will remain closed, but correctional centre officials said they will screen more prisoners later this week and some could be back in the park next week.

Sask.. Hikes Welfare

REGINA (CP) — Social Services Minister Alex Taylor said today there will be increases in welfare payments effective Dec. 1 to reflect increases in the cost of living.

He said details would be announced within two weeks.

The minister, noting a lack of people for jobs in service industries, said his department is insisting that employable people on welfare take jobs that are available.

Fertilizer Bootleg

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial government should investigate claims of Peace River farmers that Alberta fertilizer "is being bootlegged by U.S. trucking companies to the United States," Grant Notley (NDP—Spirit River-Fairview) told the legislature.

He asked Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner if the government "can assure us that transfers are not an attempt at supply management that would drive up the price of fertilizer next spring?"

Dr. Horner said his department was continually monitoring fertilizer supply and that where transfers to the United States were made, "we have been able to curtail it."

Dam Talks Secret

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian and United States officials conferred behind closed doors Thursday on construction of a proposed dam on the Pembina River in North Dakota and the possible flood control benefits to Manitoba.

The meeting, held in a room in the provincial legislature building, was at the technical level and included representatives of Manitoba, North Dakota, the Canadian external affairs department and the U.S. state department.

There was no announcement about how the talks went but a formal statement was to be issued here today.

Beggars Bother Calgarians

EDMONTON (CP) — Begging by young people, particularly on Calgary's 8th Avenue mall, has become a real problem and tougher laws are needed to deal with offenders, the provincial government will be told.

The annual convention of the Alberta Urban Municipalities Association approved a resolution from the City of Calgary asking for an amendment to the Municipal Government Act.

Calgary wants the act amended "to prevent continuing violations of municipal bylaws by authorizing the arrest of a person dealing with begging in public places."

Calgary delegates said the resolution, which has the backing of the Calgary Police Commission, came about because "housewives are tired of being hassled by beggars" along the mall.

However, other convention delegates argued that the AUMA appeared to be taking a prejudicial stance against young persons and tougher laws "could infringe on their liberties."

"Begging could be misinterpreted by over-zealous police officers," they said.

Alan Macdonald, former City of Edmonton solicitor and chairman of the resolutions committee for the convention, said the whole problem of preventing begging is being studied by the Alberta attorney-general's department.

"In Vancouver, beggars carry knives . . . and the passing of this resolution may expedite the attorney-general's study," Macdonald said.

SCHOOL HOT LINE STUDIED

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta education department is considering establishment of a special telephone numbr which would allow school administrators and parents quick access to information.

A department spokesman said Thursday the public could use the line to place collect calls to experts on all aspects of education in the province.

For example, a parent could call to complain if his child had been strapped. That would be referred to administration or a trustee of the local school board.

Communications director Nick Chamchuk has asked superintendents and secretary-treasurers throughout the province to evaluate the proposal.

He said the province does not plan to use the proposed hot line as a means of interfering in controversial matters within the jurisdiction of school boards.

Pleas Taken On Obstruction

OTTAWA (CP) — Eight persons pleaded not guilty Thursday to charges of assault and obstructing police during a demonstration by members of the native people's caravan on Parliament Hill Sept. 30.

Trial will be in provincial court Jan. 21-24.

Shrubbery 'Neglect' Irks City

The city will crack down on parking lot owners who are not conforming to the spirit of the city's beautification bylaw, says parks committee chairman Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Hundreds of shrubs in planters installed to screen parking lots in downtown Victoria died because they were neglected, Anderson said.

"We are disappointed," he said. "The city will press the owners to maintain their screening plants."

He was commenting on complaints that a good beautification idea is going down the drain.

The city issues permits for the operation of parking lots on an annual basis but on the understanding the owners will landscape.

Jack Robbins, manager of Robbins Parking Service Ltd., which manages several parking lots, said his firm maintained the screening plants.

"I think many of the plants died because they were planted at the wrong time of the year — in the spring of 1973," he said. "They did well the first year, but couldn't take on the second. The shrubs should have been planted in fall."

"We watered the plants," he said. "But that didn't seem to do any good."

He said some shrubs were also stolen.

It cost $175 per planter to purchase and install the shrubs. There are two planters to each parking lot.

Clift Bate, parks administrator, said many of the shrubs died because of the lack of attention.

"We don't have any trouble with our planters," he observed. "That is because we look after them."

Frank Snopek, manager-owner of Appollo Cement Products, makers of the planters, said he offered to maintain the shrubs for a nominal fee.

"But the lot owners thought they could do it themselves," he said. "They believed it would be more economical to do it this way."

CRASH PROBE OPENS

EDMONTON (CP) — Coroner Walter England of Yellowknife started an investigation Thursday at the Rea Point Camp 1,600 miles north of Edmonton into the crash of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. aircraft which took 32 lives early Wednesday.

England is no stranger to plane crashes in the remote Arctic regions. He was the coroner who conducted the inquest early in 1973 into the crash of an aircraft piloted by Marten Hartwell. Hartwell survived a 32-day ordeal before being rescued. An English nurse and two Eskimo patients died in the crash of the twin-engine Beechcraft after it strayed 180 miles off course Nov. 8, 1972.

Following is a list of crash victims:

Neil Rogers of Calgary; George Cameron MacLeod of Halifax; Lindsay James Farrell of Calgary; D. Larry Clarke of Edmonton; Ronald Diebert of Grimshaw, Alta.; Paul Guir of Edmonton; Howard Cazaly of Edmonton; Robert Goble of Barrhead, Alta.; Brian Jamieson of Calgary; Stanley Schrauwen of Bashaw, Alta.; Morris Antonation of Brandon, Man.; Wilfred Hoffman of Flatbush, Alta.; Gerald Robertson of Edmonton.

Glen Kelliher of Iron River, Alta.; Chris Killeen of High Prairie, Alta., Hohn Cooper of Calgary; Roy Erickson of Leduc, Alta.; Vernon Adamcik of Calgary; Alvin Desjarlais of Edmonton; George Bremner of Edmonton; Thurston Harrison of Edmonton; Michael Arnatsiaq of Arctic Bay, N.W.T.; Earl Bennett of Kimberley, B.C.; Adam Allan McPhee of Edmonton; Leonard Huff of Edmonton; Joachim Wilhelm Redeker of Edmonton; Peter Mather of Toronto; Raymond Gamblin of Edmonton; Brian Thomson of Leduc, Alta.; Darrell Lamson Petten of Wetaskiwin, Alta.; and Gordon William Slater of Edmonton.

Indian Report 'Hidden'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government has been suppressing a comprehensive, 39-page report on Indian land claims, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said Wednesday.

The union said the report recommends B.C. enter into negotiations with the federal government on aboriginal title claims and that certain lands be returned to Indians without delay.

In releasing an unofficial version the union said Human Resources Minister Norman Levi received the report Feb. 15. It was based on research done under former minister-without-portfolio Frank Calder who was dismissed from cabinet in July, 1973. It was written by Reg Kelly, Calder's executive assistant, who remained a provincial employee after Calder's dismissal.

Kelly has since resigned and now works for the federal Indian affairs department.

The report is considered significant because Levi said in a June policy statement four months after receiving the report that the province considers Indian land claims a federal matter and will not enter into negotiations.

Levi said Thursday the government is "sticking to that position."

"Everything mentioned in the report has been covered by the government one way or another," he said.

He reiterated he's ready to meet Indian representatives "to come up with an agenda and work out a range of issues."

Union spokesman Lou Demerais praised the report's land claims position but was critical of the lack of consultation with native people in its preparation.

Anderson 'Misled' Press—MLA

VANCOUVER (CP) — MLA Colin Gabelmann, chairman of the select standing committee on labor and justice Thursday accused committee member David Anderson of misleading the press during recent public hearings.

Gabelmann (NDP — North Vancouver-Seymour) made his angry remark after Liberal Leader Anderson (L—Victoria), claimed the committee has never heard from a "bonafide" domestic worker.

Gabelmann challenged Anderson, claiming the committee has heard from several domestics during interior hearings.

"Some members of this committee have been misleading the press for some time," Gabelmann said.

However, Anderson said the domestics were from a government homemakers service rather than from the private field.

In the brief, the commission argued that labor legislation protection should be extended to domestic and agricultural workers.

Dave Werlin, first vice-president of the British Columbia division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees called for an examination of poor wages and conditions for seasonal fruit and berry pickers as well as conditions of Chinese women working in what he called the "lower mainland marketing gardens" and agriculture work in which native Indians are employed.

"We can see no reason why seasonal workers should be exempt from the protection of the province's labor legislation so that some unscrupulous employers may exploit them at will," he said.

Werlin said that arguments that such protection would raise consumr costs are invalid because the middlemen are making the real profit.

"The unfortunate situation is that what the consumer pays has little relation to what the farmer gets."

"If wages of farm laborers are improved this need not necessarily increase prices to the consumer or mean less return for the farmer," he said. "The additional costs could easily be absorbed and should be absorbed by the big middlemen who today are making the highest profits in their history by exploiting both farmers and consumers to the limit."

TUB RACING IN SNOW PROPOSED

COURTENAY — Bathtub racing in the snow has been suggested as a feature of this year's winter carnival at Forbidden Plateau.

Mayors of local municipalities should be asked to participate, he said.

Militant Monks Putting Squeeze on Thieu

By PHILIP A. McCOMBS

SAIGON (WP)—South Vietnam's most powerful Buddhist leaders are quietly pressuring President Thieu to make significant steps toward peace or resign.

They are prepared to make more dramatic protests in the coming months should Thieu fail to respond. A special office to supervise this effort has been set up under the direction of the militant monk Tri Quang.

At a time of mounting anti-government protest here — hundreds clashed with police Thursday — the top Buddhist leaders have so far appeared to the public as conservative and even hesitant by comparison with the various groups and fronts that have been marching in the street.

But the influence of these monks is vast, and Tri Quang is known to be planning his moves carefully. Whatever these leaders do or do not do will be a crucial factor in the outcome of the confrontation between the government and its critics.

Youths battled police Thursday in suburban Saigon

These leaders — including Tri Quang — are the 11 members of the ruling council of the An Quang Buddhists, whose protests against government repression preceded the overthrow of Ngo Dinh Diem in 1973.

During the years of military regimes that followed Diem's overthrow, the An Quang Buddhists struggled for the creation of democratic institutions.

Now they would like to see Thieu out, but they clearly feel a stake in the success of the institutions they helped create.

They want to exert pressure for reform, but with exceeding care. They fear violence or a sudden overthrow of Thieu because of the political chaos and opening to the Communists that these events might bring.

Roughly three-fourths of South Vietnam's 20 million people are Buddhists, and while the religion had traditionally been fragmented and loosely organized, the An Quang leadership exerts more influence than any other faction.

The leadership claims effective control of three million Buddhists and the ability to communicate directly through a chain of command to these plus three million others. Beyond that, its influence is indirect.

In interviews with The Washington Post, many of the An Quang leaders indicated they are following a policy of gradual escalation in bringing pressure to bear on Thieu.

They are soft-spoken, impressive men with shaven heads who wrap themselves in grey or orange robes. Sitting in their small rooms in crowded pagodas, they speak with the calm authority of executives who have vast power at their fingertips.

They have issued carefully worded public statements essentially calling on Thieu to resign, and on the two sides to stop fighting. They are also working behind-the-scenes to convey word of the seriousness of their intentions directly to Thieu.

Later, there may be more dramatic actions, but none of the leaders would disclose what these might be. They said the decisions on what actions to take have already been made.

Before Diem's overthrow, there were Buddhist self-immolations, hunger strikes and marches. However, the current An Quang statements have had a strongly anti-violent tone.

"We have publicly asked Gen. Thieu to resign voluntarily if he feels he is standing in the way of peace and national reconciliation," said the venable Quang Do, one of the 11 leaders and their official spokesman. "If he is not willing to go, then he will be pulled down."

Quang Do said that in case of recalcitrance by Thieu there could be direct An Quang Buddhist action "soon" or not until next year sometime. "It depends on the situation," he said.

He said, "action could take place in many forms, but none of these will depart from our firm stand against violence."

The venerable Tri Thu, chairman of the ruling council, said, "Whatever we do, we must do it very carefully. The Buddhist religion is always in a stand-by position, ready to act."

Tri Quang politely declined to be interviewed at this time, but it is known that he is now actively engaged in preparing the campaign of public anti-government protest.

There will be several occasions during the next few months to gauge the development of this campaign.

Three days of peace seminars are being held in the An Quang pagoda at present, a national Buddhist youth conference will be held in Saigon next month, and Nov. 1 is the national day commemorating the Diem overthrow.

The current quiet An Quang pressure, with the threat of direct action later, appears to be in line with the tactics of the Catholic anti-corruption movement and other groups that say they are now in a consciousness-raising period of protest that may be a prelude to mass anti-government protests and possible general violence in excess of this week's rioting.

On the other hand, the An Quang leadership deeply distrusts the Catholics and has given only the vaguest support to the anti-corruption movement.

They regard Catholicism, much as they regard communism, as essentially a Western philosophy alien to the Vietnamese way of life.

"The Catholic prists in this country have been traditionally so corrupt that maybe if he joined the anti-corruption movement they'd suspect we are going it just to get at them," quipped the venerable Giac Duc, director of youth affairs for the An Quang.

Beyond this, there is the feeling that while corruption is an important issue, peace is the overriding issue that embraces all others.

The An Quang vote of support for Sen. Yu Yan Mau's Buddhist peace front, the national forces of reconciliation, has been widely publicized.

Mau's newly formed front is a loose grouping of Buddhist politicians and other peace forces.

It is supposed to provide a vanguard for movement toward national reconciliation under the terms of the Paris agreement, but Mau is widely suspected of creating it primary to serve his own political ambition. He was injured in this week's street fighting.

The interviews indicated that An Quang support for Mau is extremely tentative, and that the An Quang leaders intend to maintain complete control over the uses to which their influence is put.

"The Buddhist faithful will sacrifice their lives for Buddhism, but who wants to sacrifice his life for Yu Yan Mau?" said the venerable Phap Lan. An important An Quang monk though not one of the top 11.

The monks clearly feel that ultimately the Buddhist politicians, whom the monks helped elect, will come to help for them rather than the other way around.

"Mau just hasn't been able to get his force off the ground," said Phap Lan, "but if the monks of the An Quang direct and organize that force, then you can bet that all the Buddhist faithful will support it."

So far the An Quang leadership has made a declaration of "spiritual support only" for Mau's force. Spokesman Quang Do said such support would be given to any peace-seeking group the policies of which are acceptable.

"But if Mau's group allies itself with any group acting against our policies, we'll reconsider our support," he said.

One of the key jobs of Tri Quang in office will be to prevent Communist infiltration into Buddhist ranks, according to the monks.

The anti-communism of the Catholic anti-corruption movement seems so far to have helped to effectively immunize it from possible repression by the government.

The Buddhists, on the other hand, have always been more open to Communist infiltration.

They appear to fear that Communist infiltration at this critical time of rising tensions could provide Thieu with an excuse to crack down on them — which they think would result in chaos that they want to avoid.

Death Scene Fire Trap—Chief

VANCOUVER (CP) — The three-storey rooming house in which three persons died in an early-morning blaze Thursday was called a "fire trap, a typical dump" by Vancouver Fire Chief Armand Konig.

After the fire, Chief Konig said the concrete-and-wood building, which housed at least 50 tenants in the city's downtown Eastside area, had no sprinkler system and had been cited for violations of minimal safety standards.

Arson is not suspected in the blaze, which broke out shortly before 7 a.m. on the third floor. When firemen arrived, the building was engulfed in flames and a dozen ladders were used to rescue trapped residents from the smoke-filled rooms.

The three dead persons were found on the top floor of the 70-year-old building. Two suffocated and one was burned.

Police later identified one of the victims as Edwin James Dagg, 49. The identity of a second victim is being withheld and the third body remained unidentified.

Owners, St. Lawrence Investments Ltd., did not have a city operator's permit, although application had been made. The permits were introduced Oct. 1 to ensure that lodging premises meet city bylaw requirements.

The owners had been charged Sept. 12 with ignoring summonses issued by fire investigators to make them upgrade safety features and secure two fire doors which opened to a sheer 12-foot drop.

The fire was the fifth at the rooming house since early 1972. One man died in a 1972 fire. Thursday's deaths were the first fire victims in 1974 in the downtown eastside, compared to 15 last year before enactment of the city's new fire bylaw.

ICBC STAFF VOTES TO JOIN OTEU

VANCOUVER (CP) — Employees of the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia have voted to join the Office and Technical Employees Union, it was announced Thursday.

In voting last week, the employees rejected the B.C. Government Employees Union and the Canadian Union of Public Employees, also on the ballot, to favor the OTEU by 63 per cent.

The ICBC has about 1,500 employees who will be affected by the vote. About 1,400 employees voted.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Art Phillips said Thursday the city's attempt to gain more rent from the Pacific National Exhibition began in the spring and has nothing to do with the current political conflict between city and provincial representatives on the PNE board.

The city wants the PNE rent raised to the equivalent of full property taxes, which would currently be $900,000 from $1 a year.

At a PNE board meeting Wednesday night, Squamish Mayor Pat Brennan, the new PNE president, called the request political sabotage.

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Striking miners at the Endako molybdenum mine near here who are owed about $40,000 in back wages, should have their money by Friday, mine manager Jim Wright said.

Canex Placer Ltd., owners of the mine, agreed to provide the money following warnings from an industrial relations officer that the company was contravening the provincial Payment of Wages Act.

The act requires workers to be paid within eight days of the expiry of their pay period.

The 400 miners walked out Oct. 11, but are still owed wages from their final pay period which ended Oct. 15.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk has promised to meet with union representatives and former company president John McKay to discuss fears the Anaconda plant in Vancouver will soon be closed by its American owners.

Cathy Walker, president of Local 1 of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, which represents the 125 employees at the plant, said the union is seeking Lauk's intervention because it is important that viable secondary industry not be permitted to leave the province.

McKay said he is convinced the Anaconda Co. of New York plans to close down the Vancouver electronics plant to support a faltering company operation in California.

He was fired after he made a bid to buy the company.

'Discriminations' In New Tel Rates

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rate structure changes proposed by British Columbia Telephone Co. encompass substantial discriminations which are unsupported by adequate information, a United States communications economist said here Thursday.

Dr. William H. Melody, of the University of Pennsylvania, was appearing as a witness for the B.C. Attorney-General at a hearing into the company's application to the Canadian Transport Commission for rate increases.

Melody told the public hearings of the CTC's telecommunications committee that B.C. Tel was using personal judgments and "impressionistic notions" of costs in distributing increases in rates. He said B.C. Tel lacks a complete knowledge of its service costs on which to base its proposed rates.

If the restructuring is implemented by the telephone company, nearly 30 per cent of subscribers would receive cuts in their rates while the others are made to bear the cost of an over-all increase in rates revenue of some $5 million. The restructuring would be the first to be attempted in more than 20 years.

The company is seeking a total of $15 million in revenues in a full year through revised rates, increased long-distance tolls and other charges.

Melody asked that present rate structuring be maintained until the company demonstrates that proposed rate disparities are justified by specific cost factors, social factors, or by declared public policies.

He said that by law the company must ensure that its tolls are "just and reasonable" and to avoid unjust discrimination. He has asked that the company bare its decisions to independent assessment.

Melody said that although B.C. Tel cannot unilaterally restructure rates provided that it observes an imposed upper limit on revenues, it is effectively free of restraints if there is no information by which others may judge its decision.

Big Minh Joins Viet Militants

Times News Service

SAIGON — Gen. Duong Van "Big" Minh joined militant Buddhists and Catholics today in demanding the resignation of President Nguyen Van Thieu. The Buddhists called for an uprising to force Thieu out of office and end what it called his fascist military dictatorship.

Thieu struck back with an attempt to discredit his antigovernment foes by calling them Communists and Communist lackeys. But he promised to fight government corruption, one of the charges that led to violent battles in the streets of Saigon on Thursday.

The assault against Thieu was the gravest threat to his leadership since he took office eight years ago.

Big Minh was the hero of the 1963 revolution which toppled President Ngo Dinh Diem. Although still popular he has kept a low profile since he withdrew from the 1971 presidential election with charges that Thieu had rigged them. He is leader of the so-called third force — an offspring of the Jan. 28, 1973, cease-fire agreement — which opposes communism and also Thieu.

"I am not a communist," Minh said. "The militant catholics and the monks at an Quang Pagoda are not Communists. President Thieu should regain the confidence of the population: if he cannot, he cannot govern anymore. A new set of leaders enjoying the backing of the people is needed."

Despite a violent police crackdown Thursday in which scores of anti-Thieu demonstrators in Saigon were injured, thousands demonstrated today in Da Nang and Qui Nhon. They expressed no confidence in the president and called for his resignation.

Thieu said the hard line taken Thursday in Saigon will continue.

"I will not tolerate any activities that will cause public disorder," he said. "I believe that the migitary forces will strongly support my action."

For two months, anti-Communist, Roman Catholics, Buddhists, opposition legislators, reporters and others have been demonstrating for an end to corruption, for social reforms and the restoration of civil liberties, including press and political freedom, in South Vietnam.

In response, Thieu has fired four cabint ministers, three of the four corps commanders and 377 field-grade officers. But his opponents contend that he has not answered their charges of personal corruption against himself and members of his family, and that he has done nothing to bring an end to the fighting that is draining the country economically.

Closing Time

LONDON (CP) — A 16th century pub called the Lobster Smack, situated on Canvey Island in the Thames Estuary, may finally be moved so a new sea wall can be built. The pub appeared in the novel Great Expectations by Charles Dickens and was famous for bare-knuckle fighting.

CHIEF GEORGE

His Heart, Pen Both Soaring

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

The chief's eyes flashed he was on to one of his favorite subjects.

British Columbians, he said, should take a bigger interest in their salmon fisheries, the preservation of streams, rivers and soil.

His attitudes on conservation are part of his heritage and his heritage is reflected in a book just published, called My Heart Soars.

Chief Dan George was in Victoria Thursday promoting his collection of poems, the writings of a Coast-Salish Indian of the Burrard Reserve in North Vancouver rather than of the Hollywood movie and television actor.

He showed no evidence that he was enthusiastic about having written the book. He did show concern for B.C.

"Unlike the Prairies, which can produce large crops of wheat, livestock and other agricultural products, B.C.'s main source of food supply is its salmon," he said. "Our rivers, if properly managed, protected from erosion, could produce millions of tons of food."

"If you destroy your main food supply, all the dollars in the world won't mean much."

He's had time to develop a concern, in 75 years. He's also had time to appreciate some of the simple things and that's what his book is about:

"The beauty of the trees,
the softness of the air.
The fragrance of the grass,
Speaks to me."

They're "just some words I wrote down," the chief says.

The sometime logger, longshoreman, musician and actor is off on a cross-Canada, 19-day promotion tour.

But promotion will likely be for more than his book. He's a firm believer that whites and Indians should be integrated, but that it is vital for the native people to preserve their cultural identity.

He also wants, and has helped achieve, a more realistic place for Indians in the white man's books, movies and television.

FORD LAYS OFF 12,000 IN U.S.

DETROIT (Reuter) — The Ford Motor Co. said today it is laying off more than 12,000 workers, including 1,000 who will be sent home indefinitely.

The announcement followed similar layoffs by General Motors last month.

The layoffs came on the same day the U.S. government announced that the unemployment rate for October rose to six per cent from 5.8 per cent.

Townhouse Proposal Draws Citizens' Fire

Esquimalt residents living in the municipality's northwest corner don't want high-density development on a 23-acre tract in their area, and that's what they're telling council.

"They'd like to see things (remain) the way they are," Ald. Terry Prentice said Thursday, but they realize development is inevitable.

Fourteen residents on or near the site have written to council expressing their views. Their letters will be discussed at a council committee meeting Monday.

After Pine Home Builders Ltd. applied to the municipality recently to have two parcels of land in the tract approved for development of a 50-unit townhouse, council considered rezoning the entire site for higher density.

Since area residents had approached council four years ago on the future of the area, aldermen decided again to solicit their views.

The area is zoned for duplexes.

"The residents are not all opposing development," he said, adding they just want the land used efficiently and with regard to quality.

Asked whether residents views will be heeded if council believes they are not in the municipality's interest, Prentice said people's wants as well as their needs must be factors in land usage.

Mayor Art Young was less sympathetic to residents who opposed debelopment and said, "if you give people a chance there'll be no change."

"Basically, humans are creatures of habit," he said.

Young said elected officials should be resonsible to the whole community and not rely solely on opinions of those involved in an issue.

'SHAPE UP OR ELSE'

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson has given his cabinet minister an ultimatum — stop criticizing the government or resign.

Wilson told his ministers the cabinet runs the country, not the left-wing or the labor party, and if they don't like it, they can quit or be fired, according to political informants.

Macdonald Backs Off

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for Attorney-General Alex Macdonald Thursday reversed an earlier stand by Macdonald on the status of a section of the new Landlord and Tenant Act.

Section 28 of the act, which covers rent review and controls, was proclaimed Oct. 1, the spokesman said. Last week, Macdonald said it had not been proclaimed when he was replying to a statement by the 1,600-member British Columbia Rental Housing Council that landlords are free to give notices of January rent increases because of the section.

Ultra Secret: How Codes Broken

GREATEST INTELLIGENCE TRIUMPH

By ALFRED FRIENDLY
Washington Post-Outlook

LONDON — After 30 years or more 100 or so Americans and a few thousand British can give their children — by now long since grown up — an answer to that hitherto unanswerable question: "Daddy, what did you do during the war?"

With the publication here last week of "The Ultra Secret," a slim but riveting book by retired Group Capt. Fred. W. Winterbotham, the story of how British intelligence broke the German codes during the Second World War, and what was done with that greatest intelligence triumph the world has ever known, the cat is out of the bag, and he can talk about it.

A little, that is. Winterbotham's book was thrice reviewed by the authorities on what could be included, and, mindful of the oath we all took when we were inducted into the mysteries and which still applies, I shall go no further than he did on substantive matters.

Thanks to a Polish mechanic who worked in a German factory building a machine to encipher communications into what the Germans thought was an unbreakable code, and who was lifted out of Warsaw by intelligence agents, the British built a machine — ultimately scores of them — to return the gibberish into military German, an even more atrocious language than non-military German.

Machines Captured

Subsequently, a couple of German machines themselves were captured, a circumstance that caused the former owners no concern. The nature of the machine was such that unless you knew the code settings for the day, you were as much in the dark as before. Or so the Germans thought.

What the British did, however, was to build a deciphering machine which was a kind of computer. It could test all the possible settings — something that would have taken a team of cryptographers a month to do — in a matter of hours or even minutes, and produce the right one.

It takes no great imagination to see what this ability meant in a war. If you had Hitler's orders to his generals, their replies, the generals' orders to their subordinates, the field commanders' orders to their units, the situation appreciations by Germans high and low, the positions of ships at sea, the moves from one airfield to another, the names of the commanders, their requests for men and equipment, their reports on status of strength and supplies — if you had all that, who could ask for more?

New Dimension

The Allies did have that (as long as those communications went by radio rather than by letters, telephone and telegraph lines) current and in huge volume. As Field Marshal Harold Alexander, conquerer of the Germans in North Africa, has said, "The knowledge not only of the enemy's precise strength and disposition, but also how, when and where he intends to carry out his operations, has brought a new dimension into the prosecution of the war."

"Ultra," which was what the British christened the decipherment, made victory possible by 1945. That is a flat statement, but I make it advisedly. If anyone wants to argue the point after reading "The Ultra Secret" and what it did for the Allies in every campaign from Dunkirk to Berlin, I will take them on. We Americans were put, as the British say, "into the picture" in a substantial way in about 1943, when the British finished scraping the barrel of their own intelligence officers who could read German, and of signals personnel.

Thus, a few score of us here foregathered at the headquarters of the decoding operation, a country estate of some tycoon who had built a ghastly late Victorian mansion, set in spacious grounds (by then built up with Nissen huts or worse) with a swan pond, a ha-ha (a sunken wall to keep out the grazing cattle but not interrupt the view) and other orthodox accoutrements, outside the miserable railroad junction of Bletchley, 50 miles northwest of London.

Rather Nice Lot

We thought ourselves a rather nice lot. In administrative command was Telford Taylor, the future distinguished Columbia University law professor.

There was Leiws Powell, now one-ninth of the Supreme Court; William Bundy, to become assistant secretary of state and now editor of the quarterly publication Foreign Affairs, along with a miscellany of others, incluging a passel of superb mathematicians and one fellow who wore riding trousers and boots and read Catullus in the original on the way to work.

The British were an even nicer lot, and the number of Bletchley-ites who have become famous in law, letters, diplomacy and the arts are too many to mention.

They were, however, rather tired of their own faces, living under tightest security together for years, so when we Americans arrived, we were cultivated and feted beyond any expectations. Various of my hosts in those years remain today my closest friends in England.

Morale Amazing

For there was an amazing esprit in at the place. Morale was high, because everyone knew the fantastically-successful results of our daily — and nightly — endeavors. It was one place in the military where there was no sense of futility, of useless work or of nonsense. Had he served there, Joseph Heller would have had no material for "Catch-22."

The place had exploded during the course of years with its increasing success in deciphering German traffic, so that many thousands were employed.

What amazed me then, and what still remains inexplicable, is how securely the work of Bletchley has been held for 35 years. An occasional intimation that a code-breaking operation was going on there has appeared in the British press only in recent years, and without any detail. David Kahn's huge and truly definitive book, "The Code Breakers," barely mentions it, and without any real indication of what it did.

Idiot Books

Latterly, two or three idiot but sensational books have been published on how the Allies fed the Russians military intelligence, thanks to informers high in the German general staff: The truth is that the Allies passed on some Ultra intelligence to their then allies, but without a clue to the source. One may assume they are at this moment busily translating Winterbotham's book.

The Bletchley material was communicated, almost instantly and in a cipher that the Germans could not break. It went to special liaison officers at each command, and from them only to the commander and one or two others let in on the secret. Their security was, as events have shown, close to perfect. Those in the know, incidentally, were officially forbidden to put themselves into a position where they might be captured by the enemy.

One of the most difficult problems connected with the use of Ultra was, as Winterbotham points out, the danger that the whole achievement would be blown by too-eager use of a single piece of information relayed to a go-getter commander.

Cover Plan

Wherever an operation in the field was mounted, based on a piece of Ultra information, elaborate pains were taken to develop a cover plan that would lead the Germans to believe that the too-exact information on which the operation was obviously based had derived from some other source. (A bad breach of the principle, which may or may not have tioped the Japanese — the facts are in dispute — that we were reading their traffic was the shooting down of Adm. Yamamoto on one of his flights to the South Pacific.)

Sometimes, in fact, an agonizing decision had to be made not to take advantage at all of Ultra information, as for example when Hermann Goering's orders to bomb Coventry were intercepted. There were a few hours when an evacuation might have been ordered, but only fire-fighting equipment was alerted.

Some of the Bletchley-ites were, it must be confessed, odd. I recall one linguist whose current field of research could always be discovered by his costume: I saw him once in a long black coat, a broad-brimmed felt hat and heavy beard. He was working on Romanian.

There was, of course, a Churchill story about Bletchley, unfortunately apocryphal (I met Winston Churchill once and asked him about it, which was a mistake, for although he thought it funny, he denied having made the witticism).

No Stone Unturned

The story was that Bletchley was his favorite establishment in Britain, which was perfectly true, and that he had ordered that no stone be left unturned to get it the equipment and the staff it needed. One day he visited the place, stood on a little knoll on the grounds and watched the lunchtime crowd surging by. He turned to the commandant and said:

"I told you to leave no stone unturned to get you the people you wanted. But I did not think you would take me so literally."

Bigtime Spenders Have Final Fling

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The U.S. election campaign nearing an end is the last for the big-time spenders.

The next campaign, in 1976, will be relatively cheap, under the new spending laws approved by Congress in the Watergate aftermath and recently signed by President Gerald Ford.

Meanwhile, despite certain inhibitions imposed by the scandals of the Nixon years, there is a surprising amount of cash flowing through the campaign for seats in the Senate, House of Representatives and state houses which culminates at the polls on Tuesday.

Common Cause, the public interest group which monitors money in politics, reported that $40 million had been raised for the campaign by the beginning of September. The final total is expected to be well above this. Several candidates are in the millionaire class already.

Money is an issue itself in a number of individual campaigns, but in most cases it is one on which the Republicans are capitalizing, pointing accusatory fingers at well-heeled Democrats.

This is a curious benefit to the party of Richard Nixon, Maurice Stans and big business, a combination that produced the same overkill of 1972 directly responsible for the new restrictive laws which go into effect next year.

But another result of the Nixon scandals is that a lot of Republican fund wells have dried up and smart money has been diverted to the Democrats. That is part of the price Republicans are paying, or rather foregoing, for the sins of their godfather.

Thus Judy Petty, the pert Republican candidate for Congress in Arkansas, is calling her opponent "Wilbur Milk." Besides his nightlife, Democrat Wilbur Mills has been tainted by association with the dairy industry.

Huge Arab Profits Money 'Time Bomb'

By HUBERT ROWEN
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The staggering dimensions of economic catastrophe created for the rest of the world by the oil-producers' monopoly become more clear day by day. Yet, the western nations dissemble in trying to find a rational way in which to respond.

● In India, nutritionist Jean Mayer found a shortage of the kind of fertilizer needed for the high-yield grains of the "green revolution." Why? The oil needed to power the fertilizer factories is too costly. So India is reverting to some of the older strains of grain.

● In the affluent United States, the cost of petroleum imports during the three months June-August at an average of $11.70 per barrel came to an annual rate of $29 billion, compared with $7.8 billion in all of calendar 1973. There's about $20 billion that American citizens can't spend on domestically produced goods and services.

● In Italy, a country on the verge of bankruptcy, the oil deficit this year will be at least $7.5 billion, compared with $2.3 billion in 1973. The over-all Italian balance of payments deficit could reach $10 billion.

● In Britain, which could be next in the disaster line, real problems are concealed by large Arab deposits in sterling accounts. This hides the huge British trade deficit. Having extracted a guarantee from the Bank of England against a drop in the sterling rate, the Arabs could pull out their funds at any time.

The impact, of course, is world-wide. In a recent address to the Bank of Spain, West German central banker Otmar Emminger said that unless there is a dramatic reduction in the collective oil deficit, "the world is likely to face an immensely difficult financial debt problem in a few years time — in fact, a financial time bomb."

Emminger is known as a cautious, optimistic analyst, not given to apocalyptic pronouncements. But simple arithmetic led him into the "time bomb" warning:

At present prices, the countries making up the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) will earn $100 to $105 billion this year, against $25 billion in 1973, and only $11 billion in 1972. Allowing for payment lags and expanded OPEC imports, that would produce a surplus for the cartel of $50 billion in 1974 and again in 1975. Emminger figures that by the end of 1975, OPEC's external assets — claims on the rest of the world — would have reached $120 billion to $130 billion, or twice net U.S. foreign assets at the end of 1973. By 1980, according to World Bank data, the OPEC money hoard could reach $600 billion, and the almost incomprehensible total of $1,200 billion in 1985, six times the present total monetary reserves of the whole world.

This would mean the assumption by the rest of the world of a mountain of debt of such proportions that the debtor countries could all go broke, and the paper held by the OPEC countries would be worthless.

The scenario thus self-destructs, and explains why Emminger and others are joining U.S. Federal Reserve chairman Arthur Burns in saying that the idea of re-cycling surplus OPEC money is "an escape from reality," What is needed is a quick, substantial reduction of the deficits, not a Rube Goldberg contraption to "finance" them. So far, the surplus funds haven't overwhelmed the financial system, because only about $25 to $28 billion has had to be absorbed.

But the real torrent of cash flows is about to begin, as Gordon Richardson, governor of the Bank of England, observed the other day. Between now and the end of the year, the flood of payments to OPEC — and from OPEC looking for investment havens — will double and could triple the amounts of the first nine months.

The only way to reduce the oil deficits is some combination of lower prices and lessened purchases. It would take political courage, but President Ford should follow the French lead and put an absolute ceiling on the dollar amount of oil that can be imported.

A group of Princeton professors — William Baumol, Peter Kenen, and Richard Quandt — have made the sensible suggestion that importation be permitted only under government licence. That way, the U.S. could begin to limit the consumption of petroleum, especially gasoline, "and restrict the size of the market open to the cartel."

Mao's Rival Now Dead

LIU SHAO-CHI
. . . officially dead

HONG KONG (WP) — China's former chief of state, Liu Shao-chi, Mao Tse-tung's rival who was purged during the Cultural Revolution six years ago, was pronounced dead Thursday by an official Chinese Communist newspaper.

It is the first time, as far as China-watchers here are aware, that the Chinese have officially admitted his death.

Reports began coming out of China late last year that Liu had died of cancer of the nose in Peking.

But when asked for official confirmation, Chinese officials would say only that Liu was "politically dead" and that was all that mattered to the Chinese people.

Thursday, however, in an article in the English edition of Ta Kung Pao, an official Communist newspaper printed in Hong Kong, both Liu Shao-chi and Lin Piao were described as being "dead physically as well as politically."

Lin Piao, the former defence minister who replaced Liu Shao-chi as Mao's designated heir, is thought to have died in a plane crash after plotting a coup against Mao in 1971. His death was not officially revealed in the Chinese press until last year.

Some China-watchers speculate that the reason for referring to Liu as "physically dead" at such a late date might have something to do with a National People's Congress which Chinese officials are now saying is expected before the end of the year.

Liu Shao-chi replaced Mao as chief of state in 1959 and the post has remained vacant since Liu's removal from office in October of 1968.

Only a National People's Congress can designate a new chief-of-state, albeit in reality a rubber stamp for decisions already made by top party officials. The last people's congress was held in 1964.

Therefore, China-watchers here suggest, the Chinese may want to officially mark the death of the old chief-of-state before a congress is convened to settle the matter of a new one.

U.S. Air Fare Hikes Pass on Split Vote

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) on a bitterly split 3-2 vote, Thursday approved a further 4 per cent fare increase for all mainland U.S. flights to go into effect Nov. 15 along with a series of other fare boosts on flights to Europe and the Caribbean.

The two dissenting board members said the latest domestic fare boost was "clearly contrary to the national interest." They said domestic airlines were already reaping record operating profits which could exceed $1 billion by the end of 1974 and were thus "not entitled to a further increase at this time."

CAB members Lee R. West and G. Joseph Mimetti also said they felt obliged "to take account the seemingly out-of-control inflation gripping the nation's economy and the appeal of President Ford for every citizen and every government agency to join in the fight against inflation."

Pill, Food Aid Rider Advocated

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — A mandatory birth control rider should be placed on any foreign aid program involving food shipments, Dr. Paul Lewis, a University of Lethbridge biologist, told a public hearing into the use of pesticides and herbicides Wednesday.

Lewis told the Alberta environmental conservation authority (ECA) he disagreed with individuals who viewed the problem of feeding growing millions as a challenge to be solved by science and technology.

He said the earth's carrying capacity and resources are limited, "imposing limitations on the number of humans it is possible to maintain.

"Should science, technology, and agriculture combine to double food output by the year 2,000, it will face a human population which will then double and require another doubling of agriculture output in about 30 years."

Lewis said the underlying problem is not insufficient agricultural production but "over-sufficient people production."

He said increased efforts to obtain maximum agricultural production for the short-erm goal of feeding the hungry were justifiable. But the long-term goal must be to limit population, a problem that could not be solved by science and technology because it is rooted in human values.

In the fight to increase food production, man provides conditions suitable for the explosion of one or more species of pests, resulting in the need for pesticides, Lewis said.

The ECA was also told that use and misuse of agricultural chemicals must be seperated before legislation is passed that might rob farmers of their most effective tool in attaining increased production.

John Otto, municipal representative of the county of Warner, said there would be fewer problems with chemicals if they were labelled properly.

Miro Tomasta, Lethbridge city councillor, said controls are needed at the selling level to discourage the use of pesticides, "but in no way can we suggest they be banned entirely."

Tanaka's Critics Smell Blood

By DON OBERDORFER

TOKYO (WP) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's financial dealings have slowly developed into a serious political issue following an extensive magazine report on the subject two weeks ago.

In the past several days, all four opposition parties have announced plans for their own investigations into the premier's extensive assets and lucrative operations. Several opposition lawmakers have taken the floor in parliament committee hearings to demand an official inquiry into Tanaka's tax returns.

Perhaps more serious, the premier's opponents within the ruling Liberal Democratic Party have become increasingly vocal in asking for a public accounting by the party chief. The leaders of a small group of young conservatives, the Seranak have decided to demand his resignation.

In what appears to be an effor to shore up his position, Tanaka has held a series of unusual meetings with his major allies within the party, with the presiding offices of both houses of parliament and with his predecessor in office, Eisaku Sato.

Tanaka, is reported to be taking the charges and demands seriously, and after one meeting several Tokoyo newspapers published speculative reports that the premier had decided to resign. That story was denied by the chief cabinet secretary, Tanaka's senior aide and spokesman.

The Japanese daily press all but ignored the lengthy report in a widely circulated monthly Bungei Shunju, when it was published a little over two weeks ago. Tanaka initially waved away requests for comment from newsmen regularly assigned to cover him.

The magazine revealed, among other things, that Tanaka has massive financial holdings including five acres of downtown Tokyo real estate valued at $8 million, three resort villas, major stock holdings in half a dozen chemical and transportation companies and several hundred francq carp, valued at up to $3,000 each, given him by well-wishers and favor-seekers.

It also detailed some irregular-appearing dealings in government real estate, in which Tanaka apparently made several million dollars. After several foreign publications printed stories on the magazine report, which was much discussed in political circles here, the Tokyo mass-circulation dailies began giving increased coverage especially after Tanaka was forced to answer questions on the subject at a meeting with foreign correspondents Tuesday. Political reaction mounted sharply.

Even before the revelations which suggest but do not document illegality on Tanaka's part, the premier was in trouble. His foremost rival within the ruling party, Takeo Fukuda, quit the cabinet following the party's poor showing in national elections in July. Another senior factional leader, Takeo Miki, also quit the cabinet with a blast at the premier's leadership.

It is plain that they and their followers will organize a challenge at next summer's party convention, where Tanaka is expected to run for another three-year term. (Leadership of the majority Liberal Democrats is tantamount to selection as premier.)

Tanaka's public popularity has been steadily sinking, largely because of this country's serious inflation. A public-opinion poll taken a month ago by the Mainichi Shimbun reported only 18 per cent support for his administration, an all-time low for any premier since the paper began such surveys. Tanaka is so unpopular with ordinary Japanese that some of them shut off their television sets or change the channel whenever his face appears.

Nonetheless, incumbency is a great asset in Japanese politics, as in American politics, and Tanaka is by no means defenceless. He has let it be known that he plans a cabinet reshuffle in late November, and could use the bargains over reforming the cabinet to advantage within his party.

Radio Starts At Camosun

CAMO, Camosun College students' own closed-circuit radio station, starts Monday.

The station, which will be operated by a student radio society, will broadcast to the college cafeteria, library and counselling centre with music, discussions, interviews and campus news.

It will operate from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. each school day.

General manager of the station will be Bob Brophy, and students will take turns in the control room.

Meeting Set On Discipline

Student discipline will be the subject of a public meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. sponsored by Greater Victoria school board.

The meeting will be in the library of George Jay elementary school, 1118 Princess, and will be attended by school board trustees and administrators.

YUGOSLAVS GOING HOME

BELGRADE (WP) — In what seems to be the beginning of a new European migration precipitated by economic uncertainty, about 100,000 Yugoslav migrant workers have been forced to return home during the first eight months of this year because of layoffs and production cutbacks in the industrialized countries of Northern Europe.

Yugoslavia is one of the principal supplies of migrant labor for Northern Europe. About a million Yugoslavs are still employed there, 60 per cent of them in West Germany.

The prospect of growing unemployment in the industrialized nations coupled with recessionary pressures had led to a drastic decline in demand for foreign labor. According to Yugoslavia's state employment office, this demand has declined more than 90 per cent from 1973.

Other main labor-exporting countries — Italy, Greece, Spain, Portugal and Turkey — are experiencing the same difficulties as Yugoslavia. Italian officials, for instance, report that tens of thousands of Italian migrant workers have returned home this year, although specific figures have not been published.

Indications are that the present trend will continue in the coming months and that this can only bring fresh difficulties to the poorer nations of Southern Europe already beset by massive inflation, high energy costs and the prospect of domestic unemployment extended beyond tolerable levels.

These countries have come to rely on the migrant labor system as a safety valve with which to relieve their serious unemployment problems. Moreover, they not only face the problem of reabsorbing the returning workers but are likely to suffer significant losses in foreign exchange.

Yugoslavia's unemployment rate has been hovering around 9 per cent, with more than 400,000 persons out of work. A massive return of the million workers employed in Western Europe would create explosive economic and social problems.

The situation is particularly serious because unemployment is high among young workers entering the labor force. Many of these workers have sought employment in Western Europe during the past year. Official unemployment official statistics, published in the weekly Ekonomska Politika, indicated that average monthly job placements of Yugoslavs in Western Europe this year was 650 workers. The average for 1973 was about 7,000.

The newspaper commented that highly skilled Yugoslavs can still find employment in Western Europe, indicating that Yugoslavia's brain drain continues. About 7,000 doctors alone have migrated to West Germany and Switzerland in the last few years. The reverse migration is also causing balance-of-payments problems.

Sea Saga Scuppered

Financial woes and ice floes have scuppered plans to put B.C. on the marine industry map.

Heavily backed by provincial funds and private industry, the schooner Arctic Dogwood left Victoria in 1973 with plans to become the first sailing ship to make the Northwest Passage west to east. The sea saga was to circle around the world.

Masters said Thursday there is a strong possibility the 53½-foot ferro-cement vessel that provincial officials once envisioned would be a "floating trade fair" for the province, will end up as a training vessel for sea cadets.

He said Bill March, president of the Victoria branch of the Navy League of Canada, sponsors of the cadet and wrenette corps, was interested in negotiating a deal.

When the Arctic Dogwood was christened in the Inner Harbor the ceremony was attended by many dignitaries, including Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk who dubbed the boat "Chatelaine of government." The traditional bottle of champagne was cracked over her bow by the wife of Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen.

In contrast, there was nobody on hand when the Arctic Dogwood returned in late August, Masters having decided to call the venture off because of unusually heavy ice conditions.

"He said he had made the decision to return when the schooner was tied up at Dutch Harbor in the Bering Sea.

"The ice was absolutely impenetrable," he said, "stretching for 220 miles."

He said the Arctic Dogwood Society, formed so that the provincial government could offer financial input to the venture, has now been dissolved.

When in existence, it had on its directorate such notables as deputy economic development minister Les Hempsall (the department had chipped in with $25,000 in cash), provincial secretary Laurie Wallace, Herbert Buchanan of Vancouver, regional director of ministry of transport's Pacific marine services, and Rear-Admiral Dick Leir.

The society had sold memberships on the understanding members would receive a photographic reproduction of the ship's log after she had made the final leg into Halifax.

Masters said he was trying to get out some sort of copy of the ship's log to meet this commitment.

Garden Plots Of 'Beautiful Dirt' to Rent

The project is modelled on the 160-plot operation run by the provincial department of agriculture near Saanich's municipal hall.

Plots were rented all summer to people who had no access to other land, giving them a chance to raise their own vegetables and flowers.

"They've had a marvellous summer out there," said Hilda Beastall, Times garden columnist who pushed the government to start the project.

"Lots of them had never had their hands in the soil before," she said.

Gardeners ranged in age from 18 to 80, she said.

Nelson has pensioners in mind for the plots on Torquay, and said Friday, "let's get some of these people out of their apartments."

Twelve of the 90 gardens, each measuring 20 by 30 feet, are already rented for next season.

Price is a minimal $15 per plot per season, and that price includes the cost of water used.

Those who have rented land include both the elderly and people on social welfare.

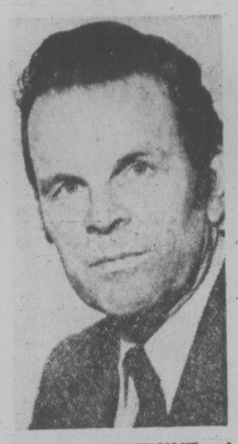
$80,000 FOR COVE IN GORGE

Saanich will receive $80,000 from the provincial government to spend on beautification of the Bathhouse Cove area of the Gorge at Gorge Road and Tillicum.

The municipality has been notified by Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace that the money will come from Capital Improvement District Commission funds.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said today most of the money will probably be spent on reforesting the area between Gorge Road and the waterfront.

Tremayne said that an ecologist with Associated Engineering Services Ltd., the company that made a study of the area for Saanich in 1973, had warned that the trees in the area are dying because of changes made through sewering and other work.



NEW PRESIDENT of the 2,000-member Canadian Institute of Forestry is Victoria's William Young, assistant chief forester of resource management in the B.C. Forest Service headquarters. Young's 25-year career began in Victoria where he first worked on forest surveys.

Bargaining To Continue

Bargaining representatives for 1,100 B.C. civil servants have agreed to resume negotiations with the public service commission Nov. 7 following rejection of a proposed agreement last week.

Talks are on behalf of the administrative, fiscal and regulatory component of the B.C. Government Employees Union, whose executive met this week to decide what steps to follow in view of rejection of the government's proposal.

Outstanding matters relate to wages and retroactivity."

ARRESTED WITH KNIVES

Two Girls Rob Goblin

A 12-year-old boy trick or treating in the Carey and Kent roads area was held up at knifepoint by two 13-year-old girls at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The girls threatened him, took $2 from his pocket and ran off with a UNICEF can containing $5.67 which he had strung around his neck.

Saanich police later recovered the money and arrested the two girls and a 14-year-old girl accomplice. The trio will appear in juvenile court today, two charged with robbery, the other with possession of stolen property.

Police said they seized two kitchen knives the girls were carrying.

The incident was the most serious Halloween happening in the greater Victoria area. Most police departments reported the night was less eventful than the usual Halloween night.

The situation was different in Courtenay, however. There, pranksters are blamed for setting a fire at McConochie's Furniture and Appliance store causing damage estimated at several hundred thousand dollars.

Two blocks from the fire, at the Civic Centre complex, about 200 youths hurled shrubs and plants at passing cars while across the street eggs and tomatoes were thrown.

A group of about 60 youths splattered cars and stores in Cordova Bay. Isolated incidents were also reported in Victoria and Colwood.

In Esquimalt four fire hydrants were opened but quickly turned off. Shutting off hydrants kept Sidney and Victoria firemen busy for a time as well, but in all cases no damage resulted.

Two children, trick or treating in the area of Piercy and Ardwell, Sidney, found razor blades in apples given them, but this activity was down from former years.

Some Treats 'Sabotaged'

Three cases of sabotaged treats were reported in Victoria — two in the James Bay area where a four-year-old youngster received an apple containing three pins and an 11-year-old boy got a candy bar with a large pin in it. The other was in the Hillside area where a child was given a candy coated with nail polish.

Victoria firemen were called to the Colony Motor Inn after a smoke bomb exploded in the men's washroom at about 9:45 p.m.

The bomb covered the washroom with a fine coating of orange powder, and the thick, acrid smoke sent some of the patrons in the packed beer parlor scurrying outdoors.

Four 15-year-old boys used the night's confusion to break out of the juvenile detention home. A Victoria youth detail spokesman said the boys smashed a window early in the evening to make their escape. They are still at large.

In Sooke and Central Saanich, police and firemen had as quiet a halloween as any could remember.

In Oak Bay, where a man reported a "foolish experiment" with human nature showed that trick or treaters are thoughtful and unselfish.

Gerry Elliott was faced with a dilemma. He had to go to night school at 7 p.m. but had no one to call upon to hand out treats to tiny goblins tripping up the walk to his home.

He said he decided to conduct a "foolish experiment" and string out 12 packages of raisins on his front door step of his Oak Bay home.

When he returned at 9:30 p.m., seven had been taken and the five neatly left behind ... apparently for other callers.

Navy Diver Recovering

AB David Lemieux, who is at the National Defence Medical Centre, is making excellent progess in regaining the use of his limbs far ahead of normal expectations, medical specialists say.

He is climbing stairs with a minimal amount of assistance. He will soon be driving a car, at first using hand controls, although doctors expect he will eventually be able to drive a normal car.

"David Lemieux's positive attitude and determination have been major factors in his recovery," said Capt. D. J. Kidd, senior surgeon of Maritime Forces Pacific, who was responsible for the diver's initial treatment, adding he serves as a "model to others having the same experience."

He and another diver had been examining the Provider's anchor cable when Lemieux blacked out at about 50 feet.

His companion didn't notice and Lemieux sank to the ocean floor, a depth of about 180 feet.

He spent more than 24 hours in a recompression chamber before being rushed to hospital.

Lemieux is using his spare time in Ottawa improving his education, knowing there are still many hard months ahead but confident he will eventually lead a full life.

Not So Sick But No Place to Go

More than 10 per cent of beds at Victoria General Hospital are occupied by patients who don't need the $90-a-day care there but have no place else to go.

Executive director Jim Fair told the hospital's board Thursday night there were 47 patients needing only extended or intermediate care in the 428-bed acute care hospital at mid-October.

Where extended care beds are available, care for these kinds of patients is provided for about a third the cost of looking after acute care patients.

Directors decided to send Health Minister Dennis Cocke a monthly report on the number of acute care beds occupied by patients needing less expensive care.

The pressure for acute care beds was underlined by a report that the waiting list for elective (not urgent) surgery has climbed from 745 a year ago to 902, despite the hospital's maximum use of day-care surgery, an early discharge program and daily case reviews.

Patients are admitted and discharged from hospital the same day under the day-care surgery program. Nursing in the home is provided to send patients home sooner under the early discharge project. Case reviews by doctors are conducted to ensure patients don't stay in hospital longer than they need to.

While all these steps have helped, there's a need not only for more acute care beds but for a major modernizing of existing facilities, said Dr. Jim Duxbury, the hospital's chief of staff.

Directors also heard about continuing problems plaguing expansion of the hospital's extensive care unit, which is being updated and enlarged from four to eight beds.

Telemetry equipment ordered in the spring is now expected to arrive from the U.S. later this month. Wiring in the unit has been replaced for a second time but is still showing some current leakage. There are problems with the flooring and air conditioning will have to be adjusted.

Board chairman Art Saunders said these probelms occur again and again when an architect charged with overseeing work does not have a local office. The board hired a Vancouver architect for a $13,000 fee.

The ICU, which provides care for critically ill patients, was to have opened in September and may now open later this month.

Transplants Successful

Kidneys taken at Victoria General Hospital last July from a youth killed in a traffic accident have been used in two successful transplants, the hospital's board learned Thursday night.

A Vancouver surgeon wrote the board to compliment the hospital staff on its assistance in the procedure.

He said he came to Victoria General to assist in removing the kidneys from the 19-year-old donor.

The transplants were completed in Vancouver within 12 hours and the recipients were two young men in chronic renal failure who were not doing too well on artificial kidney machines.

The transplanted kidneys have functioned well and both recipients "are enjoying a better quality of life," the surgeon wrote.

NEW WESTMINSTER — Victoria defeneeman Kim Clackson spoiled his image Thursday and helped build up the Cougars' hold on first place in the Western Division of the Western Canada Hockey League.

He passed up a fight!

By relying on his brain, he silenced critics who feel he relies too much on brawn with a key contribution to Victoria's 5-3 victory over the New Westminster Bruins before 1,398 fans at Queen's Park Arena.

The brawn was used. Clackson twice engaged big Harold Philipoff in toe-to-toe slugfests. The Victoria defenceman won a split decision in the first bout and a draw would be a fair result in the second.

Clackson and the Cougars were unanimous winners of what was intended to be the "rubber" match. Cougars were protecting a 3-2 lead when defenceman Lorn Gloeckner was penalized at the 11:18 mark of the third period.

The manpower advantage gave Bruins an excellent chance to tie the game, and who knows what may have transpired thereafter?

With Gloeckner settling in the penalty box, teams prepared to face off in the Victoria zone. Clackson and Philipoff jostled at their faceoff positions and then the New Westminster defenceman dropped his gloves and swung a fist.

Clackson ducked, dropped to his knees and went into a protective shell. Philipoff managed only one more swing before referee Kerry Fraser stepped in.

Philipoff was penalized for roughing and also took a misconduct for his remarks to the ref. Bruins' advantage vanished as quickly as it appeared, and the hopped-up Cougars coasted easily to only their second victory ever in Queen's Park Arena.

Clackson later admitted fear of a third major penalty and the possibility of a third appearance on the carpet before league president Ed Chynoweth this season — dictated his fight-avoiding manoeuvre.

Kim worried about it. After the game he sought coach Pat Ginnell's assurance that it was the right move. He got it.

"It was the smartest and best play of the game," said Ginnell.

Trailing 2-0 after the first and again after an exasperating second period, the Cougars came to life with a powerful performance the produced five straight goals in the third period.

Ginnell also was provided with standout performances from centres Mel Bridgman, Jim Gustafson, goalie Bob Leslie and defencemen Rick Lapointe and Tim Williams as the Cougars moved three points ahead of second-place Medicine Hat.

A shoulder injury suffered by Peter Morris and limited appearances by Dan Lucas, still hobbling with minor leg injury, forced Ginnell to juggle with makeshift lines.

Bridgman and Gustafson played almost 40 minutes and lit the third-period fireworks on Halloween Night. Bridgman scored his 14th goal of the year and added three assists to run his league-leading scoring total to 36 points.

Gustafson, a going concern, scored his 12th goal and tacked on two assists. Lucas scored twice despite the fact he took only four shifts in the third period.

The Cougars' strong display was worth $50 to each player. That was the sum Ginnell fined his team after Tuesday's 5-3 loss to Regina Pats.

"The fine," said Ginnell, "has been rescinded, gentlemen."

Awarding the Olympics —A Matter of Politics

So times change and so do people and their thinking. It was only four years ago that the International Olympic Committee turned down Moscow's bid for the Olympic Summer Games. Montreal won out and Moscow finished second in the balloting. This year it was Moscow all the way, marking the first time ever a Communist nation has been host to the Olympics.

Not that the final vote occasioned that much of a surprise, because there was little doubt that Moscow was going to get the honor. International politicking has been the order since the balloting at Amsterdam in 1970 for the '76 games. As a matter of fact Moscow had the lead then on the first ballot. The initial tally was Moscow 28, Montreal 25, Los Angeles 17. The surprise then was the rejection of L.A., which figured to have the edge because of the double centennial year in the U.S.

But out went L.A. on the next ballot, and it was obviously the free world which put Montreal in. All but one of the L.A. votes went to Mayor Jean Drapeau's low-key campaign for Montreal the second time around.

The result was regarded as a shocker then, because Montreal was a dark-horse and didn't even have the backing of the federal government. It was the B.C. bid for Garibaldi that curried favor in Ottawa at that time, and Garibaldi, if not considered a shoo-in, was certainly a better bet than Montreal. But not so, and when Montreal got the summer games, Garibaldi was out in the cold. And it may be interesting in retrospect as to how these things come about.

Ahearne Answered the Call

In 1970, the government of B.C. was fully behind the Garibaldi bid, and even brought in the much maligned Bunny Ahearne of the European Ice Hockey Federation to help champion its cause. Ahearne, it was hoped, would lend his name to the B.C. position, which he did, and so did Olympic president Avery Brundage. In addressing the IOC gathering Brundage said he had received a foot-high stack of telegrams from Vancouver and area residents and a telegram containing 105,000 names of Vancouver and Victoria residents was also delivered to the congress. There was much support at home.

Upstairs in the aisles of the International Congress centre were many displays featuring the extraordinary benefits of the countries competing for Olympic favor. The Garibaldi display was highlighted by the appearance of several CPA stewardesses who supplied the full bilingual touch to the festivities. Other presentations were similarly embellished. To many, Garibaldi had the best technical approach, and Vancouver's Mayor Tom Campbell had even gone so far as to predict victory on the second ballot.

But sports and politics make strange bedfellows and when it was all done, the pundits were all wrong, and the Russians took it worse than anybody, and walked out of the Congress hall in a huff when the Montreal decision was announced.

Remember the World Games

There can be no quarrel with the B.C. government decision this time not to endorse the Garibaldi bid. It is questionable if the money would be well spent even though the federal government would shoulder most of the burden with a similar type Olympic coin sale as is being used to finance the '76 games. Because the question remains: would there be benefits to justify the cost?

But now it's Moscow, in 1980, and even before the Montreal Olympics are concluded there must be growing speculation around the world if this really is an atmosphere conducive to playing games? The physical abuse of Soviet Jewish spectators, the verbal tirade to which Israel athletes were subjected, the attack by Cuban basketball players on the U.S. team, all at the World University Games, shouldn't so soon be forgotten, and weren't the greatest examples of Russian sportsmanship either.

If this was the forum Soviet authorities hoped would enhance their bid for the '80 Olympics it failed miserably. But it didn't matter either. Because apparently the Olympic delegates who voted for Moscow this month had short memories or took the easy way out. Moscow? Sooner or later, so why not now?

So we'll live with it. And if there is some cause for concern for Montreal in '76 because of the shadow of the Munich terrorists of '72, how does Moscow really rate for 1980?

Under the Olympic ideals, of course: Humbleness, simplicity and dignity.

Dryden Recovers Past Skills

By The Canadian Press

It took only 19 saves, but Ken Dryden scored his first shutout of the National Hockey League season Thursday night, giving some indication he's returning to the form that won him the Vezina Trophy two years ago.

The shutout, the 15th of Dryden's career, helped Montreal Canadiens to a 3-0 win over Washington Capitals and moved Montreal to within four points of leading Los Angeles Kings in the Division 3 standings. The Kings tied 1-1 with St. Louis Blues.

Dryden, out of hockey last season while articling with a Toronto law firm, has not been showing the form that earned the lowest goals-against average in the league in 1972-73.

"My reactions may be a bit slow, but there's no reason I can't get them back," Dryden had said when he signed up for his return to the Canadiens last summer.

He has been saying since then he needed some time to resharpen the old skills and he now seems to have done that.

Murray Wilson scored on a breakaway midway in the second period to start the scoring and Serge Savard and Guy Lafleur further disappointed the Landover, Md., crowd of 8,251 with third-period goals.

Clarke not only helped the scoring, but was a defensive demon as well, keeping Ranger centre Walt Tkaczuk in check.

"I think the game was decided in the way Clarke dominated Walt Tkaczuk," said Fred Shero, the Philadelphia coach. "That was the story of the game."

Clement opened the scoring at 6:41 of the first period. His second goal came at the end of the second period when his shot deflected off the skates of New York goalie Ed Giacomin.

Both of Lonsberry's goals came in the second period first a tip-in of a pass from MacLeish and, later, a power-play goal.

Reggie Leach also got a second-period goal to give Philadelphia a 5-0 advantage going into the final period.

Three Cougars Destined To Play in World Event

Victoria Cougars are assured of three representatives and may wind up with four on the Western Canada Hockey League team that will represent Canada at the world junior tournament next month.

Cougar coach Pat Ginnell will share coaching duties with Jack McLeod of the Saskatoon Blades, league president Ed Chynoweth announced Thursday.

Ernie McLean of New Westminster Bruins and Del Wilson of Regina Pats will share managerial duties.

Each of the league's 12 teams will be represented on the all-star team. Chynoweth said the players' names are expected to be released within two weeks.

The Times has learned, however, that Victoria players selected are defenceman Rick Lapointe and winger Peter Morris.

The selection of Morris may come as a surprise, since it means centre Mel Bridgman, the Cougars' leading scorer, may be bypassed by the selectors.

★ ★ ★

Dec. 26 — CANADA vs United States at Winnipeg; Russia vs Finland at Brandon.
Dec. 28 — Czechoslovakia vs Finland at Brandon; CANADA vs Sweden at Winnipeg.
Dec. 29 — Russia vs Czechoslovakia at Winnipeg.
Dec. 30 — CANADA vs Finland at Winnipeg; Sweden vs U.S. at Fargo, N.D.
Dec. 31 — Russia vs U.S. at Minneapolis.
Jan. 1 (2 p.m.) — Sweden vs Finland at Winnipeg; (8 p.m.) CANADA vs Czechoslovakia at Winnipeg.
Jan. 5 — Finland vs U.S. at Minneapolis; Czechoslovakia vs Sweden at Brandon; Russia vs CANADA at Winnipeg.

The selectors may have been swayed by Morris' great speed.

That isn't to say Bridgman will not be chosen. It is expected Ginnell, as one of the all-star coaches, may press strongly to have Bridgman added to the roster.

The tournament will be played Dec. 26 to Jan. 5. All the Canadian team's games will be played in Winnipeg.

The Canadian team is expected to play a series of exhibition games, including two with the Czechoslovakian junior squad. Medicine Hat and Lethbridge will get the Czech-Canada games.

In addition to Czechoslovakia and Canada, the United States, Finland, Sweden and Russia will send their national junior teams to the six-team tournament.

Thoroughbreds Get Blood Test

NEW YORK (AP) — New York State Racing and Wagering Board, seeking to establish tighter drug controls, today will begin post-race blood testing of thoroughbreds at Aqueduct Race Track.

The board announced Thursday that the policy, which replaces saliva tests, will also apply to Belmont Park and Saratoga. The practice of urine testing following the races remains in effect.

Stags Stagger In Fan Appeal

By The Canadian Press

Michigan Stags went from bad to worse Thursday night, drawing only 1,149 fans for their World Hockey Association game which they lost 4-2 to Cleveland Crusaders.

The Stags, known as the Sharks when they played in Los Angeles, played their first home game at Detroit's Cobo Arena Tuesday night, drawing 2,522 fans. They won that game 4-3 over Minnesota Fighting Saints but it was only their second victory of the season.

They lost their fifth of the season Thursday night when Skip Krake and Gerry Pinder each scored two goals to lead the Crusaders.

In other WHA games New England Whalers whipped Indianapolis Racers 6-1 and San Diego Mariners edged Chicago Cougars 4-3.

At Indianapolis, the expansion Racers drew 6,097 and outshot New England 30-24 but managed only one goal from Bob Whitlock. Tom Webster and Larry Pleau led the Whalers with two each.

NEW ENGLAND (6) — Tom Webster 2, Larry Pleau 2, John French, Wayne Carleton; INDIANAPOLIS (1) — Bob Whitlock. Attendance 6097.

IS IT OH OR AARON IN HOME-RUN SKILL?

TOKYO (AP) — Who is the baseball world's best home run hitter, American Hank Aaron or Japan's Sadaharu Oh?

The first order of business is for the two fence-busters to decide the rules for the contest.

Win or lose, Aaron is to receive $50,000 from the CBS television network, which will televise the contest in the United States at 11 a.m. PST Saturday. Oh is to receive $20,000.

Aaron, 40, is the world's professional home run king with 733. But Oh, 34, figuring he has at least six more seasons in him, is a good bet to break that record.

The left-handed Chinese-Japanese first baseman for the Yomiuri Giants is only 99 homers behind Aaron, with 634, and if he keeps up his present pace will have 780 by the end of the 1977 season.

Oh won Japan's Central League home run championship for the 13th straight year this season with 49. Since 1963, he has fallen below 40 home runs a year only once, when he hit 39 in 1971.

He hit a grand-slam homer in the ninth inning to send the Mets down to defeat in the opening game of the 18-game tour of Japan by the Mets, who lost three times to the Yomiuri Giants and tied another Tokyo team in their first four contests.

Shift Denied

OAKLAND (AP) — Reports circulated Thursday that California Golden Seals will be moved out of Oakland, despite the fact the Seals have demonstrated rather convincingly they can't win National Hockey League games anywhere else.

While the Seals, who have yet to win on the road in eight games, went down 4-1 at Atlanta to the Flames Wednesday night, club officials here were denying any plans to transfer the franchise to Denver.

"There is no arrangement nor agreement with the Denver Spurs regarding the purchase of this hockey team," said a statement issued by the general partnership of executives operating the Seals.

Ivan Mullenix, owner of the Spurs who had been granted an NHL expansion franchise for 1976-77, also denied reports in the Denver Post and Hockey News—published in Montreal—that the Seals would become the Spurs in 1976.

The Post said it learned from sources in Montreal that the only obstacle to the move was a suit by former Seals' owner Barry Van Gerbig against the NHL, and it was likely the suit would be settled out of court.

Even Floyd Wants a Shot at Ali

NEW YORK (AP) — Former titleholder Joe Frazier who split two gruelling decisions with Muhammad Ali, loomed Thursday as the next opponent for the new world heavyweight champion . . . should Ali elect to continue his boxing career.

Frazier became the logical contender after Ali virtually dismissed a return fight against George Foreman, whom he knocked out in eight rounds Wednesday in Kinshasa, Zaire.

"Joe is better than Foreman," Ali said after his unexpected distruction of Foreman. "Joe lost to George, but that was Joe's fault.

"I've fought Joe twice and it was hell. If I fight him again, it will be hell again."

But whether Ali fights again is questionable.

The champion said prior to his battle against Foreman he would retire and repeated it after the fight.

"I don't want to fight nobody," he intoned "I seriously want to retire but not right now. I want to see my name there for a while.

"I got a big decision to make. I might stop where I'm at and forget the money. I will have to talk to Elijah Muhammad leaded of the Black Muslim sect first. I've got things to do in America. If I fight, if won't be for me."

If Ali fights again, it might be for $10 million — twice as much as he received for beating Foreman. He said he has received such an offer but would not say from whom.

"He wasn't American but he spoke English," Ali said.

The guessing was that the unidentified promoter was John Djly, the Englishman whose Hemdale Corp. supplied the initial funding for the Zaire fight.

Meanwhile, former titleholder Floyd Patterson, 39, stopped by Ali in 12 rounds in Las Vegas in 1965 and in seven rounds in New York in 1972, said he would come out of retirement if the champion would meet him again.

"There is no competition around," said Patterson. "Who is there for Clay (Ali) to fight? I still think I can beat him."

Forget That Merger Talk

NEW YORK (AP) — Forget about any possible consolidation between the 55-year-old National Football League and the infant World Football League as long as Pete Rozelle is NFL commissioner.

"There will be no complete or partial merger with any World Football League teams," Rozelle said Thursday. "The league never has considered it. The WFL will have to make it or not make it on its own, without any help from us.

"We have our own expansion plans and there would just be nothing in it for us to take in two of their teams. If we did, there could be all sorts of problems, such as teams in our league holding rights to some players on those teams.

"For our 29th and 30th teams, we are going to stock them with NFL players, just as we are going to stock our 27th and 28th teams with NFL players."

In fact, no NFL teams will be stocked with any more WFL players for the remainder of this season. The NFL owners made that decision Thursday, at the conclusion of their two-day meetings.

In passing such a resolution, the owners broadened a long-standing rule against the signing of Canadian Football League and minor league players.

Thus, when the first WFL regular season ends Nov. 13 and the CFL regular season concludes Nov. 3, none of their players would be eligible to be signed by NFL teams, even if they became free agents at those times.

The NFL apparently took the action after New York Jets signed centre Howard Kindig last week and Dallas Cowboys signed punter Duane Carrell on Wednesday. Both had been members of the WFL's Jacksonville team, which disbanded recently.

"We don't want to let a club load up on players from the WFL," said Rozelle.

Meanwhile, Rozelle said no decision had been reached on awarding of the Seattle franchise. The commissioner said three groups — two from Seattle — were bidding for the franchise, which is scheduled to begin play in 1976, along with Tampa. The commissioner said the decision probably would be made within the next month.

The Tampa franchise was awarded Wednesday to Tom McCloskey.

Rozelle said the possibility of extending the 14-game schedule next season was turned down.

Cash Woes In Portland

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bob Harris, owner of Portland Storm, denied reports Thursday that his Canadian group will inject $600,000 into the World Football League team to pay off bills and bring players' salaries up to date.

"It is not true," Harris said from his London, Ont. home. "We do not have the money. We are working with some people, but nothing has been finalized."

The Oregon Journal reported in its Thursday editions that Harris had raised the $600,000 for an additional investment in the World Football League franchise.

Meanwhile, Storm spokesman Hal Cowan said in New Orleans Thursday that although the money is not in the bank, it has been promised and should be delivered today when the team arrives home.

Cowan said player salaries are two weeks behind and that the players have been told they will receive their back pay when they return to Portland.

The Portland newspaper, quoting informed sources, said the money was the result of a three-week effort to convert some of Harris's property assets into cash, and it would reportedly become available Monday.

Meanwhile, in Orlando, Fla., the financially-troubled Florida Blazers will be sold Saturday with the new owners assuming control of the franchise next week, a team lawyer said Thursday.

"We are typing up the papers today and they will be signed Saturday," said Bob Deutsch, lawyer for Blazers managing director Rommie Loudd. "The deal will be closed and the money transferred next week."

Consumation of the deal was expected to benefit the Blazer players, who have not received a regular pay cheque since Sept. 6. The team leads the WFL's Eastern Division with a 12-6 record.

The financial woes in Portland and Orlando took some of the play off the Storm's 14-0 victory over Shreveport Steamer in Thursday's only game.

Limit Catches of Jacks Provide Needed Relief

Salmon fishermen around Vancouver Island seem to have hit a lull in activities but a few limits of jacks in a number of spots provide some relief from what would otherwise be a dreary picture.

Some good catches of jacks were noted earlier this week off the bluffs between Otter Point and the entrance to Sooke Harbour. Minnows were the preferred bait.

Waters around Church Island and Bedford Island have yielded quite a few limits of jacks and buzz-bombers casting near the log booms in Becher Bay are seldom skunked.

However, there are a lot of undersized grilse in the area and care should be taken to release them unharmed.

Most of the boats going out from Pedder Bay are coming back with jacks weighing from four to eight pounds. Best spots have been the kelp bed and Fossil Point with buzz-bombs, strip and the four-inch 50-50 Tom Mack all producing at any depth.

Oak Bay returns have slowed down considerably in the past week but a few jacks up to seven pounds have been boated near Trial Island and off Victoria Golf Club, mostly on buzz-bombs.

Much the same situation exists near the Deep Cove Marker.

★ ★ ★

Strip, hootchies and number-one Kripple-K spoons fished fairly deep between Bamberton and the Mill Bay Marker are bringing in jacks in the three to five pound range.

Just about everyone on the water was catching jacks between Goldstream Island and Stone House on Tuesday but action tapered off Wednesday.

Both bucktailers and deep-line fishermen are picking up the odd coho in Cowichan Bay but success hasn't been fantastic by any stretch of the imagination.

Further up-Island, coho catches are still good off Black Creek and the Oyster River but elsewhere fishing is at a standstill.

Freshwater anglers, on the other hand, are picking up some excellent catches of trout in Quamichan Lake using lake troll and worm, small flatfish lures, a single egg or paste. Dougan's Lake is also producing and Cowichan Lake has been good near the creek mouths.

A few sea-run cutthroat have been landed in the Nanaimo and Puntledge rivers.

Trout fishing has really started to perk near Campbell River with good success reported from Village Bay Lake on Quadra Island, John Hart, McIvor, Loveland, Upper and Lower Campbell as well as Buttle lakes.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Stylish delivery of Wally Weinberger produced payoff punch in fourth week of 12th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition. Bowling at Town and Country Lanes, Wally scattered lumber for series of 924 on games of 342, 279 and 303 to capture weekly award in men's fivepin division and quality for Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Familiarity Benefits Massengale Brothers

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — "Well," said veteran Don Massengale, "in this kind of competition, it really helps to know your partner, know what he can do, what he's likely to do."

So Don, playing with the man he knows best in the world, younger brother Rik, fashioned a 10-under-par 62 and took the first-round lead Thursday in the $250,000 national team golf championship.

Don, 37, and Rik, 27, teamed perfectly in the event in which scoring is based on the better ball of each two-man team.

Each made an eagle three. Each scored three birdies. They were in danger of making a bogey only twice. Don made a four-foot par-saving putt one time. Rik made a four-foot par-saving putt the other time.

The result was a one-stroke lead over five other teams in this end-of-the-season event that offers $50,000 to the winning two-man team.

Tied at 63, one shot out of the lead, were Bob Murphy and Lee Elder, Gibby Gilbert and Bobb Mitchell, Al Geiberger and Buddy Allin, Steve Melnyk and Dave Eichelberger and another brother combination, Dave and Mike Hill.

Former Masters champions Charles Coody and Tommy Aaron headed a big group at 64 while Sam and J. C. Snead were at 65.

The favored team of Jack Nicklaus and Tom Weiskopf could do no better than a 67, five shots back. Arnold Palmer and Lanny Wadkins had the same. Johnny Miller and Grier Jones had a 68.

Of the teams at 63 or better, only the Massengales and the Melnyk-Eichelberger pair played the longer, tougher, 7,162-yard Magnolia course. The others were on the 6,951-yard Palm course. Both are par 72.

They'll switch courses for today's play, an advantage for the Massengales, and the final two rounds will be played on the Magnolia course.

Basketball, Cross-Country Highlight UVic Weekend

The Canada West University Athletic Association cross-country championships and Vikings' first basketball game of the season highlight weekend activities at University of Victoria campus.

Both events are Saturday with the cross-country races beginning at 2 p.m. on the soccer field next to Centennial Stadium. The women's race is first, to be run over 3,500 metres, followed by the 9,400-metre men's race at 2:30. Both courses include hills, flat grass stretches and some road running. They end at the soccer pitch.

Teams from UVic, UBC, Calgary, Alberta and Saskatchewan have entered and the men's favorite is John Wheeler, a former UVic student now competing for UBC.

The Blue squad will be coached by Don Horwood, who has masterminded Oak Bay Bays to two B.C. senior high school championships the last two years. Former UVic athletic director and Viking coach Bob Bell will guide the Gold team. Current Viking coach Gary Taylor will watch from the sidelines.

On the Blue squad are UVic Jayvee forwards Tim McGovern, a 6-foot-8 Seattle product; Dave Speed, 6-4 from Belmont-Fisher, and Evan Jones, 6-2 from Oak Bay; Viking forwards Jim Duddridge, 6-5, and Lorne Dakin, a 6-5 freshman from Terrace; Varsity guards Doug Mosher, a 5-10 freshman from Mt. Doug, and Robbie Parris, a 5-9 freshman from Oak Bay; and Jayvee guard Homer Hamm, 6-2 from Kamloops.

The Gold squad has Viking forwards Dale McDonald, a 6-1 freshman from Trinity College in the Fraser Valley; Pard Hogweide, 6-3; Dave Mulcahy, 6-7, and Lee Edmondson, 6-5; Jayvee forward Drew Thomson, 6-2, from Campbell River; Viking guards Bert Zethof, 5-10 from last year's Jayvees; Duff McCaghey, 5-10, from London Boxing Club Juniors, and Greig Ross, 6-0, from Terrace.

A highlight of the game will be the first in a series of one-on-one competitions, similar to those on televised National Basketball Association games, between top high school players in Victoria. Reynolds meets Esquimalt at halftime Saturday.

Bruins Top Clippers

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Chilliwack Bruins added to their Coast Division lead in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League with a 5-3 victory Thursday over the Nanaimo Clippers.

Golden Bears Win

EDMONTON (CP) — Bruce Crawford scored two goals and an assist to lead University of Alberta Golden Bears to a 6-3 exhibtion hockey victory over University of Toronto Blues Thursday night.

Deadlock Leaves Two in Top Spot

Esquimalt and Victoria failed to break their deadlock and advanced together into first place in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League by posting a pair of hard-fought victories Thursday night.

Esquimalt scored two unanswered goals in the third period to top Port Alberni of the North Island League 3-1 in an interlocking battle at Esquimalt Sports Centre and Victoria took a 4-1 lead after the second period and held on for a 6-4 decision over Lake Cowichan at Memorial Arena.

Larry Donaldson led Victoria with two goals while singles were added by Garth Cunningham, Larry Hansen, Rob Price and Steve Leatham. Mike Forrest (2), Randy Irving and Earl O'Kelly replied for Lake Cowichan.

Chris Evert Wins Title

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—Chris Evert broke service in the second and sixth games of the opening set, then went on to beat Virginia Wade of England 6-1, 6-3 Thursday for the women's title in the $135,000 World Invitational tennis tournament.

Miss Evert's lobs kept Miss Wade off balance in both sets.

Rod Laver of Australia and Bjorn Borg of Sweden teamed to win the men's doubles finals 7-6, 6-7, 6-2 over Ilie Nastase of Rumania and Stan Smith of the host Sea Pines Racquet Club.

Evonne Goolagong of Australia teamed with Miss Wade to beat Miss Evert and Billie Jean King for the women's doubles title 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Final Spot A Surprise For Rodgers

TOM SCOTT
. . . rookie nominee

MONTREAL (CP) — Slotback Johnny Rodgers of Montreal Alouettes seems a bit surprised that he is one of the finalists for the outstanding player award in the Canadian Football League.

Rodgers, Heisman Trophy winner as the top player in United States college football two years ago and last season's top rookie in the CFL, will be competing with Tom Wilkinson, the No. 1 quarterback for Edmonton Eskimos.

"I figured it was logical that I might be in the running on the first ballot," Rodgers said, adding he thought teammates Jimmy Jones and Steve Ferughelli would be as well.

"The whole league was so tight all year the voting for the outstanding player had to be very close."

Rodgers leads the Eastern Conference with 11 touchdowns—seven on pass receptions and four by rushing.

Wilkinson, who led the Eskimos to a first-place finish in the Western Conference, leads the CFL with a 66-per-cent pass completion mark. He has 13 TD passes and has been intercepted seven times.

Guard Ed George of the Alouettes will compete for the offensive lineman award along with tackle Curtis Wester of British Columbia Lions.

George, who missed the first three games with a suspension, was runner-up in the voting last year to Ray Nettles of the Lions in the former over-all category of lineman of the year. Wester is completing his second year in the CFL.

The offensive lineman award, making its first appearance this year, was established to recognize that often-overlooked position.

John Helton of Calgary Stampeders, the CFL's top lineman in 1972, will compete for the top defensive lineman title along with Wayne Smith of Ottawa Rough Riders.

Rudy Linterman of the Stampeders, who leads the WFC in pass receptions, will vie for the top Canadian award along with Tony Gabriel of Hamilton Tiger-Cats, the No. 1 pass catcher in the EFC.

Gabriel has caught 57 passes for 716 yards and one TD. Linterman has 61 catches for 915 yards and one touchdown.

Linebacker Sam Cvijanovich of Toronto Argonauts is the EFC nominee for rookie honors. Opposing him is wide receiver Tom Scott of Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Cvijanovich has seven pass interceptions this year, while Scott counted six touchdowns among his 37 pass receptions. Scott leads the WFC in kickoff returns, averaging 26.8 yards on 27 runbacks.

The final decisions on all five categories will be announced in Vancouver Nov. 21, during Grey Cup week.

The outstanding player will receive a Canada Savings Bond worth $3,000, while the runnerup gets a bond worth $1,000. The winners and runners-up in the other four categories receive bonds in lesser amounts.

Esquimalt Picks a Winning Pair

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

It looks as if the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, has picked itself a winning combination.

At its election this week the squadron voted in Dennis Reilley as commodore and "Doc" Beaudry as vice-commodore.

Dennis and "Doc" co-skipper Green Teal, which again cleared up in Sailerette competition on Sunday.

But apart from his racing prowess, Dennis has played a major role in reviving club membership and enthusiasm.

Proof of this, apart from a healthy member list, is the squadron now is considering extending its winter keel boat racing season instead of cutting it off, as in other years, after the annual Gear-Buster long-distance race, which is scheduled to start at noon this Sunday.

Backing up Dennis and "Doc" on the executive team this year will be rear-commodore Bob Crouse and Dennis Carlow, who's agreed to carry on the many chores of fleet captain for another year.

★ ★ ★

Centreboarders will also be racing Sunday at Esquimalt, getting their first start gun at 1 p.m.

Thirty-nine boats were on the start line Sunday when the Canoe Bay Sailing Club raced a six-miler in waters off Sidney.

Cam Thonison's Cal-Lorri came first over-all, followed by John Barker's Interlude, Alan Dickinson's Viking, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua, Bert Buchanan's Lairig Ghru, Will Jensen's Tiara, Gordie Inglis' Water Melon, Jack Patterson's Hustler, a Crown 23 that's so new to the club it hasn't been listed yet, and Crosby Smith's Dor Cross.

The CBSA will be out again racing Saturday. Start time is 1:30 p.m.

★ ★ ★

In waters off Oak Bay, the Turkey Head Sailing Association was less lucky. It managed to get in one race in winds so light that more than half the fleet inched over the line almost at once. The race committee is still trying to figure out who finished where on handicap and is trying to get some sort of computer service organized to make this chore a little easier the rest of the season.

Because the wind eventually died completely, THSA had to scrub the second race of the day half-an-hour after the start.

Some of the frustrated crews, however, are hoping for better luck this Sunday when they join members of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club in another of the club's long-distance races.

This one is scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. on a line near Flower Island in Cadboro Bay.

Lakers Continue Undefeated Pace

"Stop the Lakers" is the cry in the Lower Island Big Six Hockey League but the leading candidates couldn't do it Thursday.

Leading and unbeaten Lake Cowichan ran its undefeated streak to nine with a 7-3 victory over second-place Stocker North Americans.

The game was marred by a third-period flareup between fans and players from both teams.

Stockers will move off the Island next week for a three-game exhibition series in Whitehorse. Stockers will play Yukon teams Nov. 8-10.

The series is one of two arranged through the co-operation of the Yukon Amateur Hockey Association, which will send a junior "B" team to Victoria for games on the same dates.

JARRY SENT DOWN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forward Pierre Jarry has been sent to the Detroit Red Wings' Norfolk, Va., farm club after appearing in four of the Wings' eight National Hockey League games this year.

Racetrack Burns

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — James Ferguson, president of the Sydney Sports Centre, estimates the loss at between $400,000 and $500,000 in a fire Tuesday that destroyed a grandstand and track facilities, forcing cancellation of 13 remaining regular-season racing programs.

Brazil Second

LA ROMANA, Dominican Republic (AP) — Three United states golfers, paced by Gary Koch's two-under-par 70, totalled 221 in the second round Thursday to keep first place at the Eisenhower Cup world amateur men's championship.

Koch became the first player to break par in the 72-hole tournament on the Casuiles Country Club course. He had four birdies.

Team-mates George Burns, who shot a 76, and Curtis Strange, who had a 75, helped the U.S. keep its lead among the 35 teams with a two-round total of 445.

The U.S. team had the opening-round lead with a 224, followed by Brazil with 225 and Japan with 226.

Vic High Caps Perfect Campaign

Victoria High completed an 18-game undefeated season by defeating Reynolds 15-10, 15-11 and Oak Bay 15-1, 15-0 in final encounters Wednesday in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Volleyball League.

Spectrum finished runner-up in the league with a 15-9, 15-10 win over Belmont-Fisher and a 15-4, 15-6 triumph over Claremont, edging Mt. Douglas by two points.

Victoria and Spectrum now advance into the Vancouver Island championship Nov. 15 and 16 in Lake Cowichan.

Mt. Douglas, Belmont-Fisher, Reynolds and Claremont meet in a Lower Island tournament Nov. 8 and 9 with the winner advancing to the Island event.

The Lower Island runner-up gets another chance to enter the Island tourney by meeting the Mid-Island No. 2 team and the North Island No. 4 squad to decide the final berth.

Dunsmuir, meanwhile, plays host to a six-team "A" tournament Saturday which includes teams from St. Margaret's of Victoria, Queen Margaret's of Cowichan, Strathcona Lodge of Shawnigan Lake, Port McNeil and Gulf Islands.

Blow Follows Blow On U.K. Economy

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER

LONDON (WP) — Hawker Siddeley, a big aircraft manufacturer confronted with skyrocketing costs, wants to stop producing Britain's one new civil airplane, the HS 146 Air Bus. Several hundred workers are scheduled to be laid off and another 20,000 prospective jobs are threatened.

Jessel Securities, a financial conglomerate with assets of more than $1 billion, has halted trading in its shares. A subsidiary insurance company, crippled by the plunge in stock prices, is broke.

British Caledonian, the nation's second airline, will stop flights across the Atlantic and is dropping other loss-making routes. About one third of its 2,500 staff will be fired.

Truck drivers in Scotland have been defying their own leaders to continue a strike for more pay. As many as 100,000 workers in other industries face layoffs because their firms can't get deliveries of parts and other goods.

Wilson's Warning

Almost every day, Britain's troubled economy staggers from another body blow. In his first speech after his successful bid for re-election, Prime Minister Harold Wilson warned his countrymen that they confront "the most formidable" peacetime challenge in their lives.

Bankers, industrialists, union officials and economists agree that Wilson was not exaggerating. The stagflation that has hit all non-Communist industrial nations has struck here wits an especially virulent force.

The board indicators of economic activity add up to an almost universally gloomy picture. Retail prices are 17.1 per cent above a year ago and the gap widens almost every month. Total output is stagnant, with second quarter production of goods and services this year about 1.2 per cent below the pace in the first three months of 1973. Unemployment creeps up slowly. It took a slight dip in October, but still stands at 643,000 or 2.8 per cent of the labor force as it is measured here and about 4.5 per cent on an American scale.

Trade Debt High

Exports can't match the sharply increased bill for oil and other imported commodities, and the debt for overseas trade is running at an enormous yearly rate of $10 billion. The stock market has suffered a slide steeper than in the depths of the 1930s depression. The Financial Times index of industrial shares has plunged more than 60 per cent since the beginning of last year and companies won't go to the stock market to raise new capital. If firms stick to their present plans, crucial investment in new plants and machinery will fall 3 per cent in the last six months of 1974.

Unsurprisingly, Britons are poorer. Real disposable personal income — the buying power of pay and other income sources after taxes are subtracted — was down nearly 4 per cent in the spring from the level reached a year ago.

"Unless something is done," a major industrialist says in private, "I know several firms — some large — that are one to six months from bankruptcy."

In the city, London's financial district, a leading banker says: "For the first time since the 30s, the banking system is fragile."

A telltale index of Britain's plight was inadvertently disclosed after a bomb exploded the other night in Brooks's, an exclusive London club. Lew Murray, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress or TUC, was found at the scene. He and other union leaders have been dining with financiers at clubs nearby, seeking informal agreement on how to cope with the crisis. This crossing of the class divide may be the most hopeful element in an otherwise doom-laden scene.

Economists, financiers, officials and union men interviewed for this report are painfully aware of the economy's precarious state.

Lumped With Italy

Nowadays, Britain is often lumped with Italy and both are described as Europe's sick economies. But apart from the deep balance of payments difficulties in the two countries, they have little in common. Britain is not plagued by a large population of impoverished farmers. Its workers have not recently migrated from depressed rural regions to live a sullen and rebellious life in unfamiliar and unrewarding urban surroundings. Britain is not suffering from an impotent bureaucracy and a paralysed political system. It is not threatened by bomb throwing fanatics on the right and the left.

The British mail service, for example, may be deteriorating but it still provides more deliveries than in the United States. For all its militancy, the labor force here still regards itself as part of the social order. Even the few British Communists, some strategically placed in union leadership posts, talk of revolutionary change through the ballot box. Britain's bomb

B.C. PAYS $190,000 FOR SURREY MARSH

The provincial government has purchased 145 acres of rivermouth marsh north of Crescent Beach in Surrey for $190,000, Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford said Wednesday.

The minister said the marsh is "extremely important" as a habitat for more than 200 species of birds, two million of which pass through the area each year.

"We must never again be caught underestimating the value of productive marsh areas such as these," said Radford.

"They are absolutely critical to the survival of many species of fish and wildlife."

The area will be maintained in a wild state to preserve existing environmental and recreational activities in the area.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At all levels of play, even the very highest, there are occasions when a defender plays mechanically; as a result, he enables declarer to fulfill a contract that should have been defeated. Such was the case in today's deal, which was played in the 1962 Vanderbilt Cup Championships. Can you find the defensive error?

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

NORTH
♠ A K 8 4
♥ 6 4
♦ A Q 5
♣ Q J 9 3

WEST	EAST
♠ Q J 5 3	♠ 10 9 7
♥ 3	♥ J 10 9 8
♦ 9 8 7 3	♦ K 6 4 2

SOUTH
♠ 6 2
♥ A K Q 7 5 2
♦ J 10
♣ 10 7 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♥	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
2 NT	Pass	4 ♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

Opening lead: King of clubs.

On West's opening lead of the club king, East initiated a high-low signal by playing the eight-spot. West then continued with the club ace. East dropping the deuce. A third club lead was now made, East ruffing dummy's jack.

From here in the defenders were helpless. At trick four East led a trump, which South won; he then gathered in the remaining trumps. On dummy's high queen of clubs declarer discarded his ten of diamonds, and that was that. What was the defensive error?

Probably the most practical signal possessed by the defensive side is the "high-low" signal. This signal, to urge continuation of the suit being led, it initiated by the initial play of an unnecessarily high card, followed by the play of a lo weard on the next lead of the suit. But many situations arise in which the mechanical employment of this signal can result in a most unhappy ending for the user. Such was the case in today's deal.

From East's position, when West opened the king of clubs at trick one, East should not have played the eight-spot. Instead, he should have dropped the discouraging deuce. What did East have to gain by ruffing a third club lead? Not a thing, since he had a natural trump trick that could never be taken away from him.

Certainly East should hav been most desirous of getting West to lead a diamond at trick two; and he could have gotten this message across to West by playing the deuce of clubs on the opening lead. West, looking at the dummy, would then have led a diamond — and once he did, East would have made his diamond king, and declarer would have suffered a one-trick set.

CTC Allows Atlantic Air Fare Hikes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Transport Commission has accepted new North Atlantic air fares filed by airlines belonging to the International Air Transport Association (IATA).

The commission said in a news release that the new fares, settled by IATA members, apply between next Friday and Jan. 31.

North Atlantic fares are negotiated by IATA members and filed with their home governments. The new fare agreement was reached in Geneva last week.

The new tariffs represent an increase of 14 per cent for 22-to-45-day excursion fares, 15.5 per cent for affinity group charter ticket prices and 10 per cent for inclusive tour group fares.

IATA airlines meet again Nov. 6 to discuss fares beyond Jan. 31.

N.B. Election Real Puzzler

By ROB BULL
(Special to The Times)

MONCTON — There are at least two factors, about the Nov. 18 New Brunswick election that have the old political pros here guessing.

This is the first provincial election in which people between the ages of 18 and 21 have had the right to vote.

It is also the first time provincial residents have voted in single-member ridings.

Until now, provincial seats were held by more than one member. This city, near the Nova Scotia-New Brunswick border, for example, had three members elected from a single riding in the provincial house.

"The old system had it's good points," one local observer said. "Each party, for example, would nominate one English-speaking Protestant, one English-speaking Roman Catholic and a French-Canadian.

"That way each interest group could be certain of at least one representative. Now there may not be this kind of spokesman for each group."

But others here feel it is time the old system changed. The opinion has been voiced that sometimes weak candidates who could not have won in a candidate-to-candidate fight, were carried into the house because of their place on a party ticket.

In any case, local party organizations have had to scramble to create new associations within the present framework. After the Progressive Conservative government of Premier Richard Hatfield called the election, the Tories were first off the mark and by Wednesday had 29 candidates nominated in the province's 58 ridings.

The Liberals had 20 nominated. There were two candidates for the Canada Party, two from the Parti Acadian, two New Democrats and one Independent.

Standings in the last house were: Tories 32; Liberals 25; Independent one.

Historically, the north and eastern parts of the province, with a strong French-Canadian population, have voted Liberal while the south and western parts, with a generally English-speaking vote, went Tory. Moncton was one of a few swing areas which determined whether a PC or Liberal government was returned.

However, this also may be changing.

The Tories have been winning by-elections in Acadian parts of the province while looking over their shoulders at possible in-roads the Canada Party may be making on their English-speaking base.

The Canada Party has objected to accommodations made in these parts towards the province's large Acadian minority, which accounts for about 35 per cent of the population.

WITNESSES SUE SURREY

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greater Vancouver Jehovah's Witnesses organization has launched an action in British Columbia Supreme Court against the municipality of Surrey.

In court documents, the religious sect says Surrey council "conceived and enacted maliciously and in bad faith" a bylaw amendment under which the Witnesses were refused a building permit in July.

The Witnesses say the amendment was introduced and passed after they had applied for a permit to build a regional assembly hall with a seating capacity of 1,800 in a residential area. The application complied with the municipality's 10-year-old zoning legislation.

The Witnesses say that the subsequent bylaw change was not zoning legislation but "in the guise of zoning, a prohibition of free exercise of worship in this part of Canada."

At the same time, the Witnesses allege council was seeking "to reserve to itself discriminatory and arbitrary power to permit places of worship for such religious groups as may happen to meet with the approval of council" and, as such, "is based on oppression."

When buying a 1975 car, consider 6 important facts.

Cars equipped with catalytic converters require the use of unleaded gasoline. Unleaded gasoline is not readily available. However, all Ford of Canada carlines have been engineered without catalytic converters and can run on any gasoline—regular, premium or unleaded. Read the full story:

In order to meet the new Canadian exhaust emission standards, some 1975 cars are equipped with a catalytic converter, which is an emission control device that requires the use of more expensive unleaded gasoline.

2 Unleaded gasoline is not readily available.

Although unleaded gasoline may be available at up to 40% of gasoline stations in some major urban centres, it will be substantially less in rural areas. The Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce survey, dated June, 1974, states that on a national basis, unleaded gasoline will not be available at 8 out of 10 stations in Canada, as of October 1, 1974.

3 Government sources had this to say regarding 1975-1976 Canadian emission control standards.

"The Federal Government plans to require emission controls for 1975-model cars in Canada that will produce a further reduction of 5% in exhaust emissions but will neither require use of catalytic converters nor result in any further reduction in fuel economy."

"The new proposed Canadian 1975 automobile emission standards, while they will be more stringent than the present 1973 standards, will not be as stringent as the proposed U.S. 1975 standards."

"The proposed 1975 standards for Canada will not require use of any catalytic converters."

"The federal announcement yesterday said that the 1975 Canadian emission standards 'can be accomplished by the use of such devices as early fuel evaporation, electronic ignitions, and improved carburetors'."

"If catalytic converters are not required on Canadian cars there will be less of a demand for unleaded gasoline in Canada."

—From a news report published in The Globe & Mail, July 20, 1973.

The Ministry of Transport has stated "that the Ministry intends to enforce in the year 1976, the same automobile exhaust emission standards as are being established for 1975."

—Excerpt from a Department of Transport letter to the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, dated February 20, 1974.

4 All Ford of Canada carlines have been engineered to run on any gasoline and meet the new 1975 Canadian emission control standards without requiring catalytic converters.

There's a significant difference between Canada and the United States in exhaust emission standards for 1975 cars.

The Canadian Government decided to adopt more reasonable emission standards than those in the United States, which meant that catalytic converters were not necessary to meet the Canadian standards.

So for 1975, Ford of Canada decided not to follow suit with Ford in the United States—although it would have been much easier (and less costly) to do so.

Ford of Canada's decision to minimize the need for catalytic converters in Canada shows our real concern for you, the motorist.

We decided to offer cars without catalytic converters because a) a catalytic converter could be an extra expense for you, b) the unleaded fuel that's required for catalytic converters is in limited supply in Canada, and, c) unleaded gasoline is more expensive than the lower priced regular.

Now in order to meet the 1975 Canadian exhaust emission standards, without the use of catalytic converters, Ford of Canada invested over $1 million in an extensive program involving significant engineering changes, additional complexity in our assembly plants and other special programs.

The result is that all engines (with the exception of one—the optional 2.8 litre V6), for all 1975 lines of Ford of Canada cars, meet the standards, without requiring catalytic converters, and do so while running on any gasoline—unleaded, premium or the lower priced regular.

Ford of Canada feels that this will mean a lot to motorists who are not able to find unleaded gasoline in their normal driving and fuel-shopping patterns. Particularly, those who live in rural areas, or are travelling to the cottage or ski slopes—where unleaded gasoline availability is substantially less than major urban centres.

5 These "Economy Extenders" have been engineered into every 1975 Ford and Mercury carline.

In addition to the convenience of being able to use any gasoline, anywhere, a number of features, which we call "Economy Extenders", have been engineered into every 1975 Ford of Canada carline. These include: • Solid state ignition that eliminates the points and condenser and improves fuel economy over long periods due to a more stable spark plug performance • Improved engine tuning on many engines which results in better fuel economy and performance • Optimized rear axle ratios that contribute to less engine wear and lower fuel consumption by proper matching to load and use requirements • Steel-belted radial tires that extend tread life and reduce rolling friction for better gas mileage.

In addition, extended service intervals contribute to reduced maintenance requirements, and therefore, lower operating costs.

6 Right now, Ford and Mercury dealers can give fast delivery on cars in stock which run on any gasoline—unleaded, premium or the lower priced regular.

Ford and Mercury dealers can give you fast delivery of a new 1975 car from the large stock they have on hand right now. We're sure there's the model you want, in the colour you want, equipped with the options you want to meet your personal needs. And no matter where you are in Canada or wherever you're going, you can use the gasoline that's available: unleaded, premium or the lower priced regular.

When you choose from a 1975 Ford or Mercury carline, it's nice to know you can settle for any gasoline, anywhere.

Middle-Aged 'Cautious' On Feelings

VANCOUVER (CP) — It's a neighborhood party and a group of middle-aged men stand in a circle at one end of the room talking about things like sports, business and politics.

That is only one example, says Lilly Jaffe, of a middle-aged man's tendency to communicate on safe levels.

"They prefer to discuss something that doesn't really involve them deeply as human beings.

"The middle-aged man will tend to be cautious and not open about his feelings. If he feels anger or fear of displacement, for example, the chances are he won't talk about these things directly. He'll use substitutions about what he's feeling."

Ms. Jaffe said these men are polite and indirect and tend to develop routines in their life.

"After a while, there are no more surprises. It's what I call the routinization of communication."

Ms. Jaffe, who has done extensive work in personal communications, is exploring communication in the middle-aged man in a course this fall at the Vancouver YMCA.

She characterized the middle-agedman as one who is in a rut, has everything planned and channelled, minimizes spontaneity or is fearful of change. He suffers from a sense of aloneness due to his inability to communicate.

She said he tends to use liquor as a crutch for communicating and is unwilling to break out of his cultural environment to experiment with the unknown.

"How often have you known a middle-aged man to try yoga or to inquire into an Eastern religion?"

She said middle age is a state of mind and has little to do with physical age.

"I've met some middle-aged men of 30 and some young men of 50."

Her course tries to help men open up by dealing with ideas such as non-verbal communication, listening skills and responding to other people and not their roles.

EXPO FEATURES SURREY ARTISTS

During the final month at Spokane's Expo '74 the B.C. Pavilion featured the individual and collective talents of nine accomplished artists from the Surrey Art Society. While the nine have distinguished themselves in other related art forms they will for the month of October be working solely with clay.

The group of artists under the direction of David Toresdahl includes such renowned potters, architects and sculptors as Walter G. Dexter, Lance Austin-Olsen, Maurice Elisa Van derBeke, Georgge Casprowitz, Stephen Chitty, Fred Owen, David Zawaduk and David Gobin. Their works which have been displayed in many parts of the world include the use of stone, cement, ceramics and various metals.

In keeping with the environmental theme of Expo '74 this company of artists presented a continuing creative event, each developing his own original artistic statement as the visitors watch. The completed clay works were glazed in the traditional firing methods of the Raku Kiln, which has been built on the B.C. Pavilion site and can be adjusted to fit the requirements of each piece of art.

To maximize the available artistic talent and to minimize waste, the group incorporated the shards of broken pieces into a huge mural. Designed by George Casprowitz the mural combined the ideas of each of the nine artists, and upon its completion the resulting mural will be returned to British Columbia and donated for a worthwhile cause.

Scented T-Shirts, In Banana, Anchovy, Whisky . . .

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American technology is about to unload on an unsuspecting public a new sensation — the scented T-shirt.

Banana. Strawberry. Orange. Anchovy. Oregano. Root Beer. Whisky. You can smell any way you want. If it goes over, the olfactory entrepreneurs are already sniffing around at the underpants market.

The possibilities are endless.

Outfit you date in gardenia instead of buying the real thing. Slip into a garlic to offend an offensive visitor. Thrill your co-workers day long with the lingering essence of freshly baked breakfast muffins.

The nose behind this news is a Miami firm called "Smell It Like It Is, Inc."

It has just started distributing 2 million T-shirts. The initial choices are limited strawberry, floral and orange.

"We think peach is going to be a big one. Banana. Pine. Probably 'chocolate,'" said Dick Fleming, executive vice-president of the company.

"And then we do crazy smells too. We can do whisky, beer, motor oil, cold lamb. We've even duplicated Kentucky fried chicken."

Right now, Fleming says, he has 200 smells on hand, but there really is no limit.

He says the strawberry T-shirt now being sold features a big strawberry and the slogan "smell it like it is." The aroma will last, fleming says, through about 10 washings.

At a recent exhibit for the people who make premiums and other give-away novelty items, Fleming said, his company "even threw in a few pair of scented panties."

"We're talking to the panty industry," he added, "to see if we can work some deal with them."

Seniors' Housing Rapped

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Further construction of senior citizens' high-rise homes will push Canada toward a social catastrophe, a Toronto psychologist says.

Dr. Wolf Wolfensberger, of the National Institute on Mental Retardation, said in an interview that prejudice toward the elderly is growing, causing greater isolation and a loss of hope for that group. One of the main factors in the isolation of the elderly is placing older persons in special homes such as high-rises, lodges and nursing homes.

"We are seeing a massive growth of the alienation of the elderly through more institutions and a denial of less-expensive support systems for them," he said.

He said society's attitudes toward the mentally-retarded have been changing, but many of the prejudices and false impressions of them have been redirected toward the elderly.

"A massive and expensive over-kill" is being directed at the elderly, who are being moved into special homes instead of being helped to live in normal communities, he said.

Dr. Wolfensberger said an alternative would be to help the elderly live in their own homes by helping them defeat the problems which arise.

Debits Listed

TORONTO (CP) — Debits to individual bank accounts for the month of September in Canada amounted to $140,181 million, the Canadian Bankers' Association reports.

Snow Tire Sales Predicted

DETROIT (CP) — W. H. Schmalz, president of Uniroyal Tire Co., predicts that the industry will sell 17.5 million snow tires this fall and winter. He blames inventory accumulation for the projected dfop in sales — from the record 18.6 million in 1973.

No Woes, Until Now

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, whom I'll call Betty, is 26, a college graduate and has never given us a moment's worry — until now. Betty wants to marry Ron, a 34-year-old college professor who has used LSD off and on for three years. She said Ron promised to give up drugs three months ago and she is sure he will keep his promise. (Betty has never used drugs.)

Betty's doctor advised her not to risk having children because of her fiance's history with LSD, so she intends to remain childless or adopt. Naturally, this hurts us deeply.

We think Betty should wait and make Ron prove himself before marrying him. So far we have avoided meeting him, which has made Betty very cool and distant to us.

We don't want to attend her wedding, let alone foot the bill for it. Are we wrong? — Betty's Parents.

DEAR PARENTS: Yes. I can understand your concern and heartache over the fact that your daughter has chosen to marry a man who has been into drugs, but at 26, she's an adult and is entitled to make her own decisions — right or wrong.

Meet Ron. It will improve your relationship with Betty immediately. Don't foot the bill for a wedding if you don't want to, but do attend. It's entirely possible that Ron will stay clean. I hope so. Think positive.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old girl who was born with a large strawberry mark on my right cheek. It's reddish brown and quite conspicuous without makeup. I've been to several outstanding dermatologists and plastic surgeons, and they've all told me the same thing: "It can't be removed, so cover it with makeup and learn to live with it."

The makeup I use does an excellent job of covering the blemish, but it gives me the appearance of being rather heavily made up. (However, it's still preferable to wearing a lighter makeup which wouldn't cover the blemish as well.)

My problem is what to say to well-meaning people who hardly know me, but take me aside and tell me (for my own good) that I'd be much prettier if I didn't use so much markup. STUMPED.

DEAR STUMPED: I think of no better answer than the truth. Try it — you'll be amazed at its effectiveness.

CAVEAT EMPTOR:

Study Picks at Vitamin C Theory

By LYNNE GORDON

It's right about now, before winter hits us, that all the bitter fighting starts over the effectiveness of Vitamin C in dealing with colds. Should we be pumping ourselves full of vitamin C before the cold or do we need it at all?

Even the experts disagree!

The highly respected peace advocate and chemist, Dr. Linus Pauling, in his book Vitamin C and the Common Cold, prescribes large doses of Vitamin C to ward off the cold. Current research at the University of Toronto School of Hygiene, by Dr. T. W. Anderson, will be completed in November and may strike a serious blow to Vitamin C sales.

Meanwhile, consumers are the target of vitamin over-sell as the cash registers in drug stores, department stores and health food stores ring-up soaring vitamin supplement sales.

In his book, Dr. Pauling related his personal story and research. He concludes that 1,000 to 10,000 milligrams of Vitamin C a day are necessary. No one ever mentioned that Dr. Pauling didn't know how his own personal regimen would work for other people.

Then, about two years ago, he wrote a letter to the Canadian Medical Journal, in effect, prophesying that people who took 1,000 milligrams of Vitamin C a day would only have half as many colds. That's about 100 to 200 times the amount needed to prevent scurvy and 20 to 40 times the average adult need.

This letter to the medical journal triggered a study in Canada that has attracted the attention of the medical community all over the world.

There are three phases to Dr. Anderson's study at the University of Toronto. The results of the first two phases are out and the third study will be finished by November.

Dr. Anderson has some very strong opinions on the whole controversy and is quite willing to give some straight answers.

He told me that in the first phase, half of his volunteers received Vitamin C and half received a dummy pill. He found there was absolutely no effect on the frequency of colds but there was some effect on how severe the cold was when the patient did contract one.

In the second phase, the study tried to sort out whether the dose needed to be a large one in order to control the severity of the cold, and the finding was that it didn't need to be a large dose. The same effect was obtained with a small amount.

Now, in the third phase, the researchers are looking at the effect of taking very large doses at the time of sickness, instead of before the sickness sets in. In other words, there may not be the need for a daily dose above the normal requirements, just the need to treat the cold when you have it.

Certainly, according to Dr. Anderson, the very large doses prescribed by Dr. Pauling are not necessary.

If you want to take a supplement, there is no point in taking more than about 100 milligrams a day. This should protect you, even if you are not on a good diet and not getting enough fresh fruit, juice and vegetables. Usually, you can get most of your normal daily requirements from four ounces of orange juice, or a combination of grapefruit juice, enriched apple juice and leafy green vegetables. Even potatoes provide some Vitamin C if you don't cook them too much.

Up to date research indicates that at the moment there is no sure cure for the common cold. If you think you have an ascorbic acid deficiency, eating more Vitamin C enriched foods is the healthiest and the safest way of increasing your Vitamin C intake.

It makes good health sense to be absolutely sure of your requirements — to be ABSOLUTELY sure, check with your doctor.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I read in the "Volta Review" (May, 1974), the journal of the Alexander Graham Bell Association for the Deaf which is devoted to efforts to help deaf persons, that the good results reported by a number of acupuncturists who treated people with nerve deafness appear now to have been based on the hopeful statements of treated persons, often children.

Unfortunately, their hearing before acupuncture treatments was not carefully studied. Now that many patients in several clinics have had their hearing measured carefully before and after treatment, the experts say that they found no improvement, which is sad.

As many people know, nerve deafness is due to the lack of ability of sound to reach the brain, and there is as yet no satisfactory treatment.

Before me is a paper on "Job Stress — Hidden Hazard," by Phyllis Lehmann. It was sent me by the American Academy of Stress Disorders, 103 West Main St., St. Charles, Ill. 60174.

She says that Drs. Robert Rose and Sidney Cobb of Brown University Medical School, on studying the records of 4,000 air traffic controllers and 8,000 second class airmen, found high blood pressure four times as prevalent and peptic ulcers twice as common among the controllers as among the airmen. They found also a similar higher incidence of diabetes.

Back in 1918-1919, I found that just the worry of a university freshman when I took his blood pressure forced it up. Practically all of my thousand patients with a duodenal ulcer got it because of anxiety, worry or stress, and diabetes showed up in a fine friend of mine when she found her husband had taken a mistress. A professor of medicine, also a dear friend, got diabetes when his only son was killed.

In a report from the American Medical Association, I read that the smoke of cigarettes made with dried lettuce or grass (not marijuana) will cause as much respiratory disease as those made with tobacco. Research was done by John P. Gray and John R. Kennedy of the University of Tennessee.

Incidentally, they showed that it is the smoke and not the nicotine that injures the lungs.

I am always glad to help a club or association made up of persons who all have some one form of illness. It gives them much comfort to know many other people with the same illness, and particularly other people who have recovered from it or are living happily in spite of it.

They love to meet fellow sufferers and to swap ideas for treatment and for the handling of their trouble.

I learned a great lesson one day when a woman came to consult me at the Mayo Clinic. When I found a cancer of the rectum I urged an operation, because I thought that could cure her. But she said that she just could not face it, if it meant that she would have to live without her rectum, and have instead an ostomy, or opening in the left side of her abdomen. I pleaded with her, but got nowhere.

Then I had an inspiration; I knew that in my waiting room was a lovely woman who some six years before had had a cancer of the rectum. She had had the operation and had been cured. I asked her to come into my office and talk with my new patient, and soon they were chatting together earnestly and had no more interest in what I had to say.

My new patient was all eagerness to question this woman who was now living happily with an ostomy. She quickly accepted the operation and was cured by it.

Now there is a fine organization, the United Ostomy Association, 1111 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90017, which has many local branches throughout the country, and can give much information and help to an "ostomate" and his or her family.

Another very helpful organization is The Stroke Club. Mr. J. E. Williamson, of 805 12th St., Galveston, Texas 77550, who founded the organization, tells me that there are branches of the Stroke Club throughout the United States, composed of people who are fighting back to health after having had strokes.

Interested people might write Mr. Williamson, enclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelope for an answer.

In a recent column I mentioned a Symptometer, which lists a number of danger signals of schizophrenia. Now I have a letter from Rev. Charles Kovari, S.J., who tells me that the Better Health Centre which I mentioned in my column is closed, but that he will mail a pamphlet entitled "Megavitamin Therapy," which includes the Symptometer, to anyone who sends $1.00 and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to him at 6765 State Road, Parma, Ohio 44134.

Population Grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Census Bureau estimates that the United States population as of Sept. 1 totalled 212,216,000 — an increase of 155,000 over the previous month and 1.5 million, or seventh-tenths of one per cent, over the same month a year earlier.

Controls Said Harsh On Infant Car Seats

TORONTO (CP) — Joy Moon, car expert on children's automobile safety for the Canadian Consumer Association, says regulations effective today to tighten federal controls on children's car seats are so tough they are driving most seats off the market.

She said in an interview that she has surveyed retail stores in Metropolitan Toronto and has found that most are either sold out of the seats or are clearing their stocks at discount prices.

Two major chains — Eaton's and Canadian Tire — have decided not to stock the seats after Friday because they do not want the trouble the new rules may bring, she said.

One difficulty, stores say, is that prices of seats regarded as safe under the federal regulations will rise to about $50 from the current $20.

"What the government is in effect doing with these regulations is saying that only the wealthy people's kids are worth saving," said William Prosser, manager of product research at Eaton's.

Pensioners to Meet

Old Age Pensioners No. 5 will meet Tuesday, Nov. 5, at 1:30 p.m., at the Senior Citizen's Building, Centennial Square.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR
Forecast for Saturday, Nov. 2

ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Be more responsible than some associates who seem willing to fight for nothing, to argue for sake of argument. One who is in authority observes. If you accept overtime, if you display quality, you will not go without reward. Act accordingly. You will comprehend!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): There are paths, byways, labyrinth routes — but you come out with a profit. Know it and refuse to be dissuaded. Get rid of losing proposition. Spread emotional wings. Be willing to let go and begin anew. Aries, Libra figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): You gain new insights. You are better able to cope with unpleasant situations. You gain strength. You build up head of emotional steam. Cycle is high and you land on your feet, dancing, jabbing and walking off proudly, owning the decision. You'll understand, even if boxing is a stranger!

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Tread lightly. Avoid any tendency to force, push, cajole or chide. Accent is on the subtle, behind the scenes, quiet and clandestine. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons walk across the stage of your personal environment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You put out feelers. You sense what is occurring in surrounding areas. Your awareness combines with humor and could make you a popular figure. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Accent is on friends, hopes and wish fulfilment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The climb may be arduous but you are getting to the top. Know it and be encouraged. Legal green light is about to flash. What appears a major hurdle could actually be a steppingstone. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio may be involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your ability to balance, report, synthesize information and come up with complete story — this is emphasized. One who says you are not qualified may be displaying envy. Know it and consider the source. Hold off on long-range commitment or journey.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Practical matters take precedence. Don't attempt to skip the basics. Taurus, Libra persons probably will be in picture. Questions of taxes, insurance policies, investments could arise, more so than in recent past. Delve beneath surface indications.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may not be seeing too clearly. Means you see what you want to see. It is time to be more realistic, especially about home, property and basic values. Time is on your side. You can afford to play waiting game. Do so to your own advantage! Don't be pushed into any deal, agreement.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Much that occurs is low key, subdued. A closed-door meeting could have direct effect on you. Keep guard up without being tense. Be ready to go with tide. You will be handed assignment which could mean overtime. Accept and pace yourself — rewards will be forthcoming.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than begin get "feel of future." You are able now to obtain flash view of what is to occur. You will know what to do. Key is to have courage to follow through on constructive action. Member of opposite sex may be working against your best interests.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): One in position of authority could make offer — you should promise only what you can deliver. Temptation may be to say "yes" before you are ready. Know it and protect yourself from an overenthusiastic reaction. Conservative course will serve your best interests.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are a loyal individual, subject to brooding about the past. Key is to look to future — realize that on horizon is one of your greatest opportunities for happiness and material success. Get rid of defeatist notions, promulgated by recent disappointment in one you placed on pedestal. Cancer, Capricorn persons play significant roles in your life.

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: How do you give a horse worm pills? We live 25 miles from the nearest veterinarian. He gave me these pills to give Bess before he took off for a month — and I just can't get her to swallow the darned things. No matter how far back I put them in her mouth, she manages to spit them at me. F.H.

DEAR F. H.: A veterinarian is the best one to do this job. However, you might try holding Bess' head down and against her neck after administering the pill. That way, it's harder for her to bring the pill up — and she'll be more likely to swallow.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We were having one of those nice, friendly (?) family arguments the other night with my husband taking off on the female of the species (like black widow spiders eating their mates and female birds being so dowdy and biting hardest.) He said the only horseflies that bite people are female horseflies. Is that right? N. M.

DEAR N. M.: Your husband is right. Not only lady horseflies but also lady gadflies, deerflies, and mosquitos are the aggressive biters. Their gentle, tender-hearted mates are content to sip nectar from flowers. (Sorry.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is a square perch better for a parakeet, or a round one? F. L.

DEAR F. L.: The answer to this is easy if you think of what parakeet's feet are designed to grip in nature — that is, twigs and branches. These give more weight-bearing surface as they conform to the natural curvatures of a perching bird's foot. Added advantages to a round perch: It's easier to clean, less liable to be chewed and less apt to cause fallen arches.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Tuxie, our cocker spaniel, has a continuing problem in rainy weather. We're in the country and he gets mud between his toes. This dries and then when he runs around the house he makes a terrible clatter on the hardwood. We could stand that (and the mud that comes off on the floor before it dries) if Tuxie didn't seem to be suffering from it. Sometimes he limps. What should we do? M. O.

DEAR M. O.: Washing out the mud, whether wet or dry, is the short-range solution. But much better is to rid Tuxie of the problem by trimming out the hair between his toes which holds the mud. Once it's trimmed out, Tuxie should be all right. If the limping continues, take him to his doctor.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our Samoyed, Snowy, is very affectionate and is forever licking my face. That would be all right but it really turns my boyfriend off. He says it's unsanitary but I think he just doesn't like Snowy giving me all that attention. Is a dog's "kiss" really unhealthy for me? P. S.

DEAR P. S.: The truth is that a dog's "kiss" normally contains fewer germs than a human's. Perhaps, though, it would be better if you and Snowy just shook hands when your boyfriend is around.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Here's what happened: Blackie went in for his annual booster shots for canine distemper, hepatitis, and leptosirosis. He also got a rabies booster. Less than an hour later he was itching like crazy from a bad case of hives. He had welts and his face was swollen. He looked ridiculous and felt miserable and itchy. We called a doctor about the shot reaction — that's what we were sure it was. Then the doctor asked us if there had been any bees around. Well, there had. So he said he didn't know whether the reaction was due to the shots or a bee sting. We gave Blackie some anthihistamines his doctor prescribed and he felt better in an hour or two and has been all right since. We just wanted to know if it really was the shots, or a bee. How would you tell? — K.A.

DEAR K.A.: The allergic syndrome you describe may rarely be caused by vaccine but is more usually caused by bee sting. The venom from a bee sting would be more likely to cause localized swelling, and you might even find the stinger embedded at the site. Since such an area is not always located, there may be no way to differentiate and determine the actual culprit. Blackie's doctor would have it noted on his record, however, so in the event it did happen to be an allergic reaction to a vaccine, he would be aware of the problem and could prevent a recurrence.

Kick Unnecessary Stress, Find Own Pace—Doctor

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dr. Hans Selye, who has been studying stress for nearly four decades, says people should develop a code of behavior that will enable them to deal with stress.

The 67-year-old physician said it is extra, unnecessary worry that should be avoided, not the stress that comes from living and working normally.

Dr. Selye, director of the Institute of Experimental Surgery at the University of Montreal and the author of 28 books and more than 1,400 articles, gave this advice:

"Try to find out what you really want to do. There are turtles and there are horses. If a turtle is made to run like a horse, it will kill him. And if a horse is made to go slowly, the frustration will kill him.

Dr. Selye, who said he has only recently begun to formulate a theory on how modern man should deal with stress, said stress is a by-product of using energy and can come from good or bad experience.

"It is the response of the body to any demand made upon it. If a mother hears her son was killed, her body reacts. Her heart beats faster, her blood pressure goes up and she is restless and can't sleep.

"If, then, he shows up alive, her body will react in entirely the same way. The specific effect is different — in one case she is sad, and in the other happy — but the non-specific reactions of her body are the same."

Dr. Selye said stress is "the spice of life" and people cannot do without it. "Our aim should not be to avoid work, but to find the kind of occupation which for us is play."

Pythias Head Plans Visit

The Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias in B.C., Walter Shiel of Revelstoke, will make an official visit to the Victoria branch Wednesday at 8 p.m. at a meeting in the Elks Hall.

Local Chancellor Commander Herman Clever will preside at the meeting.

Dangers Eyed in Red Pop

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Ralph Nader research group says a widely used food dye is so dangerous that if a 110-pound pregnant woman drinks more than a third of a can of strawberry soda pop a day she risks either cancer or damaging her baby.

The dye involved is Red No. 2, used for everything from strawberry ice cream and soda pop to lipstick and pill coatings. About 1 million pounds of it was used in food and cosmetics last year.

Nader's health research group asked the Food and Drug Administration to ban the dye in 1971. Since then, it said Thursday, "consumers have eaten over $30 million worth of Red No. 2, exposing themselves to alarming and unnecessary risks."

It said there have been three Food and Drug Administration studies dating back to 1951 which "strongly indicate that Red No. 2 does cause cancer."

A 110-pound pregnant woman, the group estimated, could "safely ingest only about one-third can of (red) soda daily."

"With conflicting results on the fetotoxicity alone, we believe FDA is obligated for the protection of the public to severely limit Red No. 2."

LOS ANGELES, Calif. — A lawyer seeking damage settlements in a DC-10 crash which killed 346 people says he will attempt to prove a safety flaw was discovered in the plane by a subcontractor but was not corrected by the manufacturer.

The lawyer, Lee Kreindler said Thursday he told a U.S. district court in Los Angeles that references to the flaw were omitted in test analyses by the McDonnell Douglas Corp., which built the jumbo jets.

ROME — Former Italian secret service chief General Vito Miceli was under arrest today, accused of helping to organize a secret right-wing group dedicated to armed insurrection

SAN FRANCISCO — Randolph A. and Catherine Hearst, saying a $50,000 reward they have posted for the safe return of their fugitive daughter might jeopardize her safety, have withdrawn the offer.

MEMPHIS — Author William Bradford Huie says James Earl Ray assassinated Martin Luther King Jr. because he craved notoriety. "The fact that he was given special handling and publicity —this is the reason he killed Dr. King," the author of He Slew the Dreamer said in a deposition read Thursday at a federal court hearing into Ray's appeal for a new trial.

SAINT JOHN — J. C. Van Horne, former New Brunswick tourism minister, was found guilty Thursday on a charge of contempt of court.

Mr. Justice J. Paul Barry imposed no penalty after Van Horne made a full apology and advised that he is scheduled to undergo heart surgery Nov. 4 in Phoenix, Ariz.

SYDNEY — Australian journalist Wilfred Burchett today lost an action for libel against former Democratic Labor Party Senator John Thomas Kane. He brought the suit following publication of an article by Kane which said he was a communist agent.

LOS ANGELES — Mrs. Betty Ford, convalescing from surgery for breast cancer, will undergo chemotherapy treatment "to insure more inclusive treatment against any possible remaining cancer," Dr. William Lukash, physician to the first family, announced Thursday.

Cauldron Predictions

WASHINGTON (WP) — The New York City Centre for the Strange has released a survey of 275 witches who predict among other things that Nelson Rockefeller will not be confirmed as vice-president.

Robert Carson, public opinion research director for the group, composed of 18 New York businessmen, joked that Rockefeller had "made his own survey of witches and they say he will be confirmed."

The witches, said Carson, also predict the following:

—There will be no gasoline shortage this winter.

—There will be a severe shortage of scotch whisky and lighter fluid.

—One of America's best-known television news anchormen will make headlines when his affair with a congresswoman is made public.

—A female "superstar" entertainer will undergo a sex change operation.

—President Ford's income tax surcharge proposal will be defeated and Henry Kissinger will resign before July.

Carson said the centre releases the witches' prognostications around Holloween because "It's one of two times the press is interested. The other is New Year's.

Flowers, Books Fall At Seance

Medium Ann Fisher of Albany, N.Y., asked the legendary escape artist just after midnight Thursday "Houdini, make your presence known."

At that point, a pot of flowers and a book on Houdini fell from a shelf to the floor.

The book was open to a page displaying a Houdini poster titled Do Spirits Return?.

It was the seventh and last attempt by the museum to contact Houdini, who died on Halloween 48 years ago. None of the previous attempts established contact with Houdini.

Thursday's attempt came on the 100th anniversary of his birthday.

Mrs. Fisher was the only one who was certain Houdini had visited the room. She spent about 20 minutes repeating things she said Houdini was repeating to her.

But Sidney Radner, a protege of Houdini's brother Hardeen, said the medium had not said anything the general public had not known before.

TANKER FACING ARREST IN U.K.

LONDON (Reuter) — Halcyon The Great, the 227,000-ton supertanker which dodged a chase by Canadian police boats, will be arrested and sold after she docks here today, a spokesman for the owner said.

The tanker, commanded by Captain Brian Greenwood, is on its way up the southeastern coast of England on its way to Tilbury docks in East London to berth.

A special manager for the collapsed Court Line Co., which owns the 1,300-foot ship, said she will be arrested by the British admiralty as soon as she berths and preparations will be made for her sale.

JOBS SNAG DESERTER PLAN

SEATTLE (AP) — The alternative service program for Vietnam War desertrs has run into a snag in the Seattle area—a lack of jobs.

Of the 12 men who have returned here to serve out their time, 11 are walking the streets looking for work.

"They have a real problem," said William R. Orr, co-ordinator of the alternative service program for the selective service system here.

"Jobs are hard to find. And they are restricted in the types of work they can accept."

Under President Ford's amnesty program, which ends Jan. 31, 1975, deserters an draft evaders who wish to clear their records must serve up to 24 months of alternative service and the work must be with non-profit organizations.

The alternative workers must be paid a salary comparable to what a person would receive on entry into the military service. But he does not receive soldier's benefits such as free housing, clothing, food and medical care.

Orr said that more than 200 letters have been sent to Washington State employers who, in the past, employed conscientious objectors in alternative service programs.

"Response has been encouraging," he said. "We have very few outright refusals to hire people. The problem is that the employers just don't have the job openings."

Draeseke Sees Forest Slump Continuing for Long Time

The president of the Council of Forest Industries in B.C. calls for governments in Canada and the U.S. to divert into housing the money going into government bonds and industrial loans.

Gordon K. Draeseke predicted effects of the current slump in the forest industry will continue well past 1975.

"It was a political equation to turn off the money going int the industry and it'll be a political decision to turn it on again," he said during taping of a television commentary.

"The earliest end of the slump in Canada would be the second quarter of 1975," said Draeseke, predicting the slowdown will have "cumulative" effects after that date.

"Unemployment insurance continue peoples' income and there's not the immediate disruption there used to be," Draeseke explained.

Lower interest rates and provincial government moves to act on stumpage taxes meanwhile would ease the situation without providing a cureall, he said.

In an effort to reach some assurance of government action to reduce the burden of stumpage on the forest industry, Draeseke and other CFI representatitives will meet Monday with Premier Barrett and Resources Minister Bob Williams.

Asked about the premier's forthcoming visit to China, Draeseke was not encouraged there would be any benefit to the forest industry. The Chinese are not interested in buying lumber and plywood at this time, he pointed out.

Mine Says Store Was Never Closed

TORONTO (CP) — Fred Hall, president of Canada Tungsten Mine Corp. Ltd., said Thursday that the only food store in Tungsten, the labor-torn community in the Northwest Territories, has never been closed.

"We have never stopped anybody from buying food or milk," Hall said in an interview. "Reports of dwindling food supplies are without foundation."

The store is open and will remain so, he said.

Hall said he has been trying since early Thursday to reach Stuart Hodgson, commissioner of the territories, to invite him to visit the troubled mining community, situated 425 miles west of Yellowknife, on the Yukon-N.W.T. border.

Hall said a number of other reports coming from the minesite and nearby Watson Lake were "taken out of context."

He said the company has fired only three miners, all union officials, because they had "instigated" a walkout at the mine last last week. The rest of the miners quit, he said.

Earlier reports said the company had fired all the miners after the strike.

Hall said approximately 30 families and a few single men remain in the community.

Included among these are the families of five union miners who quit their jobs but decided to stay behind rather than join about 80 single miners who were taken by bus to Watson Lake on the weekend.

The other families are not associated with the union, Hall said.

All miners who quit and are living in company-owned houses have been served with eviction notices to leave within 30 days.

He denied reports that any of the essential services have been cut off or taken over by the miners. The company was continuing to operate the generator and powerhouse.

No one is being forced to go to Watson Lake, he said. The miners and their families could remain in the community and come and go as they please.

Director Of CYC Resigns

OTTAWA (CP) — Dal Brodhead, one of the original volunteers to the Company of Young Canadians (CYC) and its director for the last four years has resigned, the secretary of state announced Friday.

Brodhead said his job had been to get the CYC moving again and build its programs. "I think I've done that."

He took over in 1970 following a federal inquiry into allegations that the CYC was linked to demonstrations, terrorist movements and labor violence.

Following the inquiry, the CYC was allowed to continue its work in community organizing and development.

When Brodhead took over, the CYC had 60 volunteers on 60 projects under a field staff of 16. Now 400 volunteers work on 262 projects with 42 field staff.

The 1969 budget of $1.2 million has expanded to $4 million this year.

Brodhead joined the CYC when it began in 1966, and worked as a volunteer for 2½ years as a community organizer in the fishing village of Alert Bay, B.C.

He is to leave Friday for Hong Kong to lead a one-month community development seminar for a United Nations group for volunteer services.

A new CYC director is expected to be named next week, he said.

EXTRA SERVICE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Men who sought a date for a $65 evening on the town through Dale's Escort Service were afforded another service under the blankets for an additional $75 a police spokesman said Thursday.

Police said they arrested the proprietor of the company, Dale Eric Shelstad, 27, of Vancouver, after one of the girls, Jane Ruth Livingston, 20, also of Vancouver, allegedly tried to solicit an undercover officer at a city motel.

Shelstad, charged with procuring and living off the wages of a prostitute, and Livingston, charged with soliciting, were remanded in provincial court Thursday without plea for one week.

Equal Shares Urged in Marriage Break-Ups

REGINA (CP) — The Saskatchewan Law Reform Commission today called for legislation to give husbands and wives an equal share in proerty acquired during their marriage.

In its first recommendations since being organized last February, the commission made three major proposals for new laws:

—Courts should have wide discretion to order division of all property between spouses.

—Each spouse should have an equal share in the matrimonial home.

—Spouses married after the new law is passed should share equally in all proeprty acquired during the marriage.

The commission emphasized that oday's recommendations are tenative and subject to change depending on public reaction. Its final recommendations are to be given to the provincial government some time next year.

The commission said one of the major problems on which it wants public reaction is cover all existing marriages or just marriages that start after the laws are passed.

Its first two recommendations would cover all marriages, while the proposed would not apply to marriages that started earlier.

In recommending judicial discretion, the commission says "the court should be empowered to divide the property as it sees fit in order to provide a fair and just division, according to the circumstances of each case, regardless of how title to that proeprty is held or when it was acquired."

It suggests that the court could be brought into play upon application by either spouse when the marriage is breaking up.

Two of the three commissioners, however, were against allowing persons divorced before the date the propsoed law may be passed to make use of the recommended procedure.

The commission emphasizes that all proeprty would be subject to the court's discretion.

"We see no reason to exclude any property from the court's consideration, whether it was acquired before the marriage, by way of gift, or after separation of the parties."

It also says that morality should not be a factor in the court's decision. The property would be divided without regard to "sexual misconduct, cruelty and related kids of behavior."

The court however, would not be able to use discretion under the proposed law if both spouses had a formal aggeement on property division.

In discussing the recommendation that the matrimonial home be owned equally, the commission suggests three exceptions: where the home was bequeathed to one spouse only, where the spouses have agreed to a contrary arrangement or where the principle would make such division "unconscionable."

As an example of the last category, the commission says when one spouse owned the home prior to marriage and the mariage last only a few weeks, the original owner should keep the home.

Another example would be "economic misconduct," as when one spouse takes or squanders all the savings of the marriage.

Prospectors Again Pouring Into Yukon

WHITEHORSE, Yukon Territory (NYT) Prospectors are again pouring into the Yukon, scene of the fabled Klondike gold rush of 1898. Using helicopters where the old-time sourdoughs slogged through the Northern wilds on foot, today's scientific mineral hunters are opening up vast new areas for mining development.

Mining people are talking in bigger figures than anyone has heard here in many years.

At the turn of the century, when gold fever was at its height in the Yukon, the output from the Klondike reached $20 million a year, a fabulous figure for the time. By last year, with many sites abandoned, production had slipped to less than $400,000 in the cheapened money of the 1970's.

With the price of gold now four to five times what it was a few years ago, the decline in activity has abruptly reversed. In the first five months this year, the number of claims registered in the Yukon climbed 55 per cent above the figure for the corresponding period last year.

"There's hardly a creek that ever produced gold where someone isn't out taking another look," a mining executive said recently.

However, the biggest action in the Yukon today is in lesser minerals like copper, lead, zinc and tungsten.

The investment in the Yukon for mineral exploration is expected to reach $13 million this year, nearly three times the $4.5 million spent in 1973, according to official estimates.

Encouraged by indications of substantial deposits of lead, zinc, copper, tungsten and other metals, besides gold and silver, more than 100 companies are involved, including most of the major mining corporationsin North America.

The new mining activity and a growing tourist industry 311,000 visitors, mostly Americans, spent $25-million in the territory last year, making tourism second to mining have contributed to making the Yukon "the most affluent part of Canada," declared an official.

The population of about 20,000, including 5,000 to 6,000 Indians, has the highest per-capita income in the country. A survey in January showed that average weekly earnings were $230.34, compared with a national average of $163.07.

IT'S SURVIVAL OF THE FIERCEST. AND THE FUNNIEST.

"THE LONGEST YARD" is a movie that cracks a lot of jokes. And a lot of bones. Burt Reynolds stars—tough, sassy—and always that fire.

The wrath of a woman scorned starts his trouble. However, he's got some wrath of his own. And the last 45 minutes of the film is unlike anything you have ever seen.

It's bound to provoke controversy . . . cheered by some as a new classic in the mold of "Treasure of Sierra Madre" . . . cursed by others as a bloody and brutal hymn to machismo. On one point, all can agree. Like its maker, Sam Peckinpah, "Bring Me The Head of Alfredo Garcia" is uncompromising, unyielding, uncensored. In short, it's got guts.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

WE WOULD LIKE TO EXPRESS our heartfelt thanks for messages of sympathy, beautiful floral tributes in the passing of a beloved father, grandfather, and great-grandfather, William George Burch.
Thanks also to Drs. McGregor, McFarland, staff of 4A at Victoria General Hospital. Special thanks to Saanich Fire Dept. for their prompt and kind attention. Grayham and Torrey McCall for their expression of sympathy in the passing of a lifelong friend.—Marjorie, John, William, Thomas and Michael Ilott.

GRAY — We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks and appreciation for the acts of kindness, messages of sympathy, memorials, and beautiful floral offerings received from our kind friends, neighbours and relatives during our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved husband and son, Randy Lee. We especially thank the Pallbearers and Rev. Father Powers.
— Mrs. Carrie Gray, Mrs. Elizabeth Greenwood and Mr. Gerald Gray.

I WOULD LIKE TO EXPRESS my heartfelt gratitude to my friends for their many expressions of kindness and sympathy shown to me by way of cards, letters and flowers, in the loss of my dear wife Florence. Special thanks to the staff of Sands and Archdeacon Hendy for his words of comfort.—George H. Jennison.

9 IN MEMORIAM

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

GARDENING

Three Starting Points for Garden

A plot of ground for a garden has three starting points from the new owner's viewpoint, a hedge, a path, and a place to sit while comtemplating the next steps.

Some of these suggestions apply equally to, or may be adapted by, gardeners who are redesigning an existing garden.

Take hedges first since they are seldom wholly understood before being planted.

Hedge plants which grow quickly have root systems which spread quickly, and the top growth just as quickly gets out of control. On a corner lot, the hedge must be low enough not to obstruct the view of drivers approaching the intersection. Between properties, the hedge must not encroach on the neighboring lot. From three to five feet from the boundary is needed according to the type of plants chosen. You must always be able to work from the other side for shearing, trimming and other attentions.

Think of these points before putting in a hedge.

Some gardeners decide to erect a post and wire fence and then plant groups of appropriate shrubs and the occasional small tree at the points where a screen for any purpose is wanted.

A solid hedge of laurel, privet or a fast-growing coniferous evergreen will eventually encroach on your neighbor's property as well as reduce the fertility of the soil. A solid hedge of one type of plant is monotonous at best and a hazard to all gardening projects attempted nearby. The roots reach out further each year to new soil, requiring more watering and more fertilizer to keep the nearby plants growing. This in turn, stimulates the hedge growth.

In contrast, consider a group of three of one kind of flowering shrub, such as Forsythia, Viburnum opulus, or one winter flowering Hamamelis mollis—a Witch-hazel that is practically a tree in a few years—these will grow into a pleasant screen at a specific point. The open areas between allow the planting of entirely different material as part of the garden scheme, and their varying root systems and requirements are more easily handled than those of one kind all around the boundary.

Usually there is one particular place on the boundary which an owner notices as being objectionably open. Why not deal with it first? Plant something there this fall; let it grow while you work on the rest of the garden.

At another point, a sturdy trellis may be the answer as a screen. On it grow Russian-fleecevine (Polygonum baldschuanicum) or a couple of clematis to flower at the same time if you don't mind waiting two or three years for coverage.

If one tree exists on the property you have a ready-made sitting area. Or you may need to select a space and work out a scheme for natural shade in the future and contrived shade until those plants grow sufficiently to fulfill their purpose.

Of more immediate need is the laying out of a path or two, so you are tramping over unused soil while it is wet. Don't try fancy curves or angles; for you are likely to want the paths for wheelbarrow or garden cart. Gravel now, and grass later is a good idea.

Lay out one path alongside the vegetable plot so that access is pleasant in winter. Another path should lead to a section which you will want to develop as a winter garden. Then you can get on with its planting as you see things flowering in the nurseries during the next months. And what you plant now will be well started before spring brings work in other parts of the garden.

OUR CHILDREN NEED GRANDparents and a small farm or a large garden. Instead of giving up your place and moving into an apartment or guest house. Let's talk about staying in your home and sharing the load. We'll do the work if you'll show us how. We're a happy family and in these days of inflation, we need each other. Please call 383-3093 so we can discuss the matter. Thank you.

Lieutenant-Governor

CANADA
PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA

ELIZABETH the SECOND, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom, Canada and Her other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.

To all to whom these presents shall come
GREETING

J. LORIMER
Minister of Municipal Affairs

WHEREAS by section 786(1) of the Municipal Act it is provided, inter alia, that in addition to the functions conferred by that Act, a regional district has such functions as are provided by Letters Patent or supplementary Letters Patent, and for this purpose the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Minister, provide in the Letters Patent or supplementary Letters Patent such further objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations and conditions in respect to any or all functions requested pursuant to this section.

AND WHEREAS the Regional Board of the Capital Regional District has requested that an amendment be granted to the regional district in respect to the function of Regional Parks:

AND WHEREAS the provisions of section 786 of the Municipal Act have been met:

NOW KNOW YE THAT We do order and proclaim that on, from, and after the date hereof, the following be added to the objects, powers, obligations, duties, limitations, and conditions of the Capital Regional District and the Letters Patent of the regional district be amended as follows:

1. To provide for the member municipality of the Electoral Area of Sooke to share in the function of Regional Parks by striking out the word "Sooke" in paragraph 1 of Division III — Regional Parks, of Letters Patent dated the first day of February, 1966, as amended by supplementary Letters Patent dated the seventeenth day of October 1967, so that the paragraph reads as follows:

"1 Only the member municipalities of Saltspring Island and Outer Gulf Islands do not participate or share in the costs incurred pursuant to this Division."

2. By striking out paragraph 3 of Division III — Regional Parks of Letters Patent dated the first day of February 1966, as amended by supplementary Letters Patent dated the fifteenth day of January 1971, and substituting the following therefor:

"3. The annual budgeted expenditures commencing with the year 1975, for the development, operation and maintenance of said parks shall be in an amount as approved by the Board and subject to the limitations as set out in the Municipal Act and the Regional Parks Act."

AND THAT the Letters Patent as amended of the Capital Regional District be deemed to be further amended accordingly.

In testimony whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of Our said Province to be hereunto affixed.

WITNESS, the Honourable Walter S. Owen, Q.C., LL.D., Lieutenant-Governor of Our said Province of British Columbia, in Our City of Victoria, in Our said Province, this Twenty-seventh day of September in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and seventy-four, and in the twenty-third year of Our Reign.

Convict Dies Of Wounds

MONTREAL (UPI) — An escaped convict shot by police in an abortive bank robbery Thursday with three other gunmen died of his wounds in a Montreal hospital Friday.

Jean-Paul Mercier, 30, had been in critical condition since the wild shootout with police at a Royal Bank of Canada branch in the city's east end.

Another man, Robert Frappier, 27, shot down by police with Mercier, was listed in satisfactory condition at another hospital. Two other men who took part in the robbery escaped.

Mercier and Frappier were among five convicts who shot their way out of Montreal's St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary last week with arms smuggled to them through the visitors' room. The five were supposed to have been held under maximum security.

Police later arrested two women, Carole Moreau, 24, and Jocelyn Deraiche, 26, on a variety of charges including smuggling the weapons to the prisoners.

Mercier, who was serving a life term for the shooting deaths of two Quebec game wardens, had suffered multiple gunshot wounds to the head, shoulder and arm.

Frappier and the other escapees were all serving various terms for armed robbery.

Movies

The Demi-Paradise (xxx), on 5 at 1:30. A wartime English-made propaganda film highlighted with a fine performance by Laurence Olivier as a Russian engineer visiting London in 1939 — when the USSR was our ally.

Night of the Quarter Moon (x), on 13 at 1:30. Julie London and John Drew Barrymore star in this trashy 1959 drama about socially prominent man who marries a woman, unaware that she has Negro blood in her background.

Bright Eyes (xx), on 11 at 2. Shirley Temple sang and made famous, The Good Ship Lollipop, in this 1934 drama about an orphan who hero-worships a daredevil pilot.

My Gal Sal (xx), on 13 at 3:30. An entertaining 1942 musical set during the Gay 90s about a song writer's romance with a beautiful stage star, starring Victoria Mature and Rita Hayworth.

Dragnet (xx), on 7 at 6 p.m. A 1967 mystery based on the Jack Webb series.

For a Few Dollars More (xxx), on 4 at 8. Third in the triology of stylized Italian-made westerns starring Clint Eastwood as the steely-eyed "man with no name". In this 1967 sequel to Fistful of Dollars, Eastwood teams again with Lee Van Cleef (playing a good guy this time around) to track down a vicious bandit gang.

Hornet's Nest (xx), on 6 at 8:30. A predictable 1970 Second World War drama starring Rock Hudson as a paratrooper on a mission to destroy a vital dam behind Nazi lines. We'll - mounted but you've seen it all before.

The New Centurions (xxxx), on 5 and 8 at 9. Excellent performances by George C. Scott and stage actor Stacy Keach highlight this 1972 film adaptation of Joseph Wambaugh's best-seller. Filmed on-location in Los Angeles the story revolves around two police officers whose devotion to duty is beginning to undermine their personal lives.

Night Caller from Outer Space, on 13 at 9. No rating available on this 1965 English-made science-fiction tale about a visitor from one of Jupiter's moons who is kidnapping earth women. John Saxon stars.

Bullitt (xxxx), on 2 at 8. A superb chase finale highlights this entertaining 1968 crime-drama starring Steve McQueen as a tough San Francisco police detective involved in the middle of Mafia dealings and political intervention. Well-directed with a competent supporting cast that includes Jacqueline Bisset and Robert Vaughn.

The Comic (xxx), on 7 at 11. Dick Van Dyke is superb in this 1969 comedy-drama that follows the career of a silent-film star, from his vintage years in the early days to his comeback doing TV commercials. Authentic, hilarious silent-film scenes blend with pathos as Van Dyke offers a perceptive portrait of a star who could not handle his success, cope with family problems, or adjust to "talkies."

The Desperate Hours (xxxx), on 11 at 11. The suspense runs high in this taut 1955 drama about three escaped convicts who hole up in the home of a respected family and use them as hostages. Humphrey Bogart as his last hoodlum role is excellent as are the rest of the cast that includes Fredric March, Martha Scott and Gig Young.

The Unearthly (x), on 13 at 11. Another "mad doctor" thriller, this one made in 1957 and starring John Carradine.

The Green Berets (x), on 5 at 11:15. This is not just a bad film — it is more than two hours worth of Hollywood claptrap about a complex and once profoundly important question — the American role and presence in Vietnam. It is a depressing commentary on the American movie industry that this insulting film, which apparently reflected John Wayne's (he co-directed and stars) attitude and glorifies America's part in the War, is the only film specifically dealing with Vietnam that has been financed by a major Hollywood film company — they have the money and the talent to do so much better.

Those Daring Young Men in Their Jaunty Jalopies (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Vintage automobiles highlight this 1969 English-made comedy re-creating the 1920 Monte Carlo Rally — a 1500-mile trek across Europe. Cast includes Tony Curtis, Susan Hampshire, Peter Cook and Terry-Thomas.

Ride the Tiger (xx), on 4 at 11:45. Routine 1970 crime-drama about a night-club owner who goes after his partner's killer, starring George Montgomery.

Inherit the Wind (xxxx), on 8 at midnight. A superb 1960 film version of the powerful Broadway play about the famous trial in the twenties in which a school teacher was arrested and tried for teaching Darwin's theory of evolution. Spencer Tracy as Clarence Darrow and Fredric March as William Jennings Bryan (as defender and prosecutor) are flawless, as is the fine supporting cast that includes Gene Kelly. Recommended.

Torn Curtain (xx), on 6 at 1:20. This 1966 "golden" Hitchcock 50th is badly tarnished and sub par for the master of spy-chase films. Paul Newman plays a science professor who gets involved in a fantastic espionage mission while attending a convention in Denmark, and Julie Andrews portrays his secretary-lover. It's all very predictable with the only noteworthy highlight an excellent cameo role by famed character actress Lila Kedrova.

McLintock (xx), on 8 at 2:40. Don't be fooled by the western setting and the presence of John Wayne in this 1963 film — it's primarily a battle-of-the-sexes comedy with Wayne and Maureen O'Hara pulling no punches.

Today's Highlights

Story Theatre, on 8 at 10. Friends and Lovers star, Paul Sand, stars in The Blue Light, a Brothers Grimm tale for children. (30 mins.)

Western Canada Lottery, on 2 and 6 at 4:30. The eight top lucky-ticket winners in the Western Canada Lottery are drawn today in Winnipeg's Playhouse Theatre. (30 mins.)

Evening at Symphony, on 9 at 8. Famed Japanese conductor Seiji Ozawa conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Schoenberg's rarely performed Concerto for Violin and Orchestra. (60 mins.)

World at War, on 12 at 8:30. The Desert War — North Africa 1940, as the British victories are reversed when Rommel sweeps across the sands. Films follow the fierce victor-retreat-victory cycle of El Alamein, Tobruk and Benghazi, and interviews with officers from both sides reveal the hardships and unique problems encountered. (60 mins.)

In Performance at Wolf Trap, on 9 at 9. An all-jazz concert with Sarah Vaughan and Buddy Rich. (60 mins.)

Carol Burnett' Show, on 7 and 12 at 10. Carol and her regulars Harvey Korman and Vicki Lawrence welcome comedian Alan King and 10-year-old singing sensation Lena Zavaroni. (60 mins.)

Caught in the Act, on 9 at 10:30. Accompanying themselves on traditional instruments. The boys of the Lough perform native Scottish and Irish songs. (30 mins.)

MICK JAGGER
. . . on 7 at 1 a.m.

Don Kirshner's Rock Concert, on 7 at 1. Highlights of tonight's concert is a film clip from England of Mick Jagger and the Rolling Stones in performance. (90 mins.)

Saturday Night Movie

George C. Scott and noted stage actor Stacy Keach star in the 1972 film version of Joseph Wambaugh's powerful best-seller, The New Centurions, about the dangers and pressures of police work. The focus of the drama is on two partners (Scott and Keach) whose devotion to duty is beginning to undermine their personal lives. This movie will be shown on both Channels 5 and 8 at 9 p.m.

Impressive PBS Line-Up for November

Jean Paul Sartre's Roads to Freedom, a reprise of An American Family, the magnificent Upstairs, Downstairs, the outstanding Hollywood Television Theatre drama The Lady's Not for Burning, the musical exploration of Soundstage, and the entertaining star-studded Feeling Good are all just a sampling of the multi-faceted new programming KCTS-9 offers in November.

November presents an impressive lot of programs; and because of the continued variety, every viewer will find many hours of entertaining and interesting enjoyment by setting the TV dial on 9 and keeping it there throughout the month.

Set in Paris in June 1938, Roads To Freedom is a 13-part dramatization written by Sartre as a trilogy. The Age of Reason, The Reprieve, and The Defeated. The novels from which the series is taken are a study of the manner in which people seek their own personal freedom, the assertion of self.

The three characters Sartre used are Mathieu, Daniel and Brunet. The three types of consciousness portrayed by these characters are the ineffective intellectual (Mathieu), the pervert (Daniel), and the Communist (Brunet). Mathieu is incapable of taking positive actions because he is extremely rational; Daniel the homosexual — seeks freedom by doing the opposite of what he wants; and Brunet, by identifying himself with the Communist Party acts, but does not reflect on his actions.

Paris, a city famous for its characters, is a city between the Spanish Civil War and the rise of Hitler. It's where Mathieu lives . . . and Marcelle (his mistress of seven years) exists. The series premieres on Channel 9 November 16 and promises to be strictly adult entertainment.

An American Family, the unprecedented and controversial series of 12 one-hour color documentaries following one family's day-to-day live over a seven-month period, returns to KCTS-9 November 23.

Hollywood Television Theatre's The LADY'S NOT FOR BURNING stars Richard Chamberlain and Eileen Atkins (of Upstairs, Downstairs fame). It's a tale by Christopher Fry of a young misanthrope who wants to die and a young woman who persuades him that life is worth living.

A feeling of spontaneity, intimacy and musical exploration will pervade all of Soundstage's shows for this season. Featured on the premiere are Blues Summit in Chicago, the best blues artists in the world who got together for this program to pay tribute to the all-time blues great, Muddy Waters. Joining bluesman Waters on the program are Johnny Winter, Dr. John, Mike Bloomfield, Paddy Miles, Junior Wells, Willie Dixon, Nick Gravenites and Koko Taylor.

Jose Feliciano and Harry Chapin will be featured on the second and third programs respectively.

Children's Television Workshop presents its first series for adults, on health care titled Feeling Good, premiering November 20.

Public affairs series come into the spotlight with the return of the popular World Press and Behind The Lines.

Journalist-historian Harrison E. Salisbury will host the return of Behind The Lines, public television's Emmy award-winning journalism review.

This season, Behind The Lines consists of 13 half-hour programs, five to be all film with the remaining eight, studio discussion-critiques of the media. The season premiere, an all-film program, will examine the relationship between the press and President Ford, November 3.

World Press will continue in its usual style of presenting a panel of international specialists with expertise in the political, economic, social and cultural events of a particular country. They will analyze the foreign press for a balanced and thoughtful perspective on how the world outside, the United States views international issues.

The Life of Leonardo da Vinci is examined in a new series beginning November 20.

With more science mysteries to intrigue, puzzles to unravel, and startling facts to amaze, Nova returns with a 23-part series of one-hour programs November 3.

Walsh's Animals is about animals you own and love and want to take better care of; it's about wild animals, and endangered species and some you'd probably never want to meet.

And it's about John Walsh, 33-year-old field officer for the International Society for the Protection of Animals — the host, star, and virtual stunt man of this new series debuting Sunday, November 10.

Another popular series returns to public television in November, namely, Soul! Featured this month are Billy Preston who rocks, rolls, sings and shouts; providing an hour of pulsating fun; guest host Felipe Luciano presents the Latin sounds of Willie Colon and Tito Puente for Shades of Soul, Part I and II; the songwriter/performing team of Nick Ashford and Valerie Simpson appear in concert.

Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen returns to television, after nearly two decades to present social commentaries on the attitudes and ideas that prevail in American society. Watch for it November 7!

Play Bridge With The Experts lets the viewers at home pretend they sit at the card table with master-players as partners and opponents, and after bidding, dummy-play and defensive problems are clearly presented, viewers are given solutions.

Music lovers will feast on the many music programs on Channel 9 in November, including Herbert Von Karajan conducting the Berlin Philharmonic in Bach Suite No. 2 and Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 November 17; In Performance at Wolf Trap will feature Yehudi Menuhin and the Preservation Hall Jazz Band; Maestro Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in a program of classical music favorites on the special Ormandy International.

A new addition to KCTS-9's children's series is Zee Cooking School. Teacher and hostess of the series is an effervescent Frenchwoman named Colette Rossant. The guests on the program (children ranging in age from 8 to 16 years) will learn to prepare gourmet specialties.

KCTS/9's purchase of the series, Hollywood Television Theatre, Soundstage, America in Transition, and World Press, in the Station Program Cooperative were partially funded by contributions from the Members of Channel 9.

Movies

David and Bathsheba (xx), on 5 at 10. Mediocre Biblical epic with all the cliches—lavish sets, sumptuous costumes, posing actors and wooden dialogue, filmed in 1952 with Gregory Peck and Susan Hayward.

The Great Ice Rip-Off, on 6 at 2:30. An unpreviewed 1974 made-for-TV crime-drama, with a hint to comedy. Gig Young portrays the brains behind a gang of diamond thieves, who pulls a superheist, then calmly boards a bus for his getaway. One of the bus passengers is a Yeomen police detective (Lee J. Cobb) who is slowly catching on to the crime.

Billy the Kid vs. Dracula (x), on 11 at 2. A 1966 thriller in which the title speaks for itself.

Wake of the Red Witch (xx), on 11 at 4. John Wayne plays a rugged sea captain fighting for gold bullion and the love of a girl, in this routine 1948 adventure.

Against All Odds, on 13 at 4. No rating available on this 1969 English-made adventure starring Christopher Lee as arch-criminal Fu Manchu, plotting to take over the world by poisoning heads of state.

The Man from Colorado (xxx), on 7 at 5. A 1948 psychological western with Glenn Ford in the offbeat role of a sadistic army officer who gets himself appointed a federal judge so that he can control post-Civil War Colorado. William Holden co-stars.

Midnight Cowboy (xxxx), on 4 at 9. Be prepared for some heavy editing in this 1970 Academy Award-winning movie—the first X-rated film to come to TV. Although some 25 minutes of deadpan has been removed, this excellent movie still retains strength in the fine performances of Dustin Hoffman and Jon Voight. The setting is the underside of New York City with Hoffman portraying the crippled Ratso Rizzo, a petty hustle with fantasies of a new and better life in sunny Miami Beach. He meets and teams with Joe Buck (Voight), a handsome, naive Texan who dreams of making his fortune as a high priced gigolo—a dream that quickly and ruthlessly fades. At the core of the story is the unlikely bond that develops between the two, a pair of classic losers. Recommended but not for the whole family.

The Hallelujah Trail (x), on 12 at 9:30. A muddled 1965 western with a clumsy plot that stumbles down a long, banal path that has been much explored. Burt Lancaster, looking understandably bored, plays an Army officer assigned to protect a valuable liquor shipment which attracts a band of thirsty Hollywood-caricature Indians and a wandering chapter of the ladies temperance league.

Weekend of Terror (xx), on 5 at 11. A 1976 made-for-TV melodrama about three nuns held hostage for a pair of kidnap-murderers, starring Robert Conrad, Lee Majors and Carol Lynley.

Stand-In (xxx), on 4 at 11:30. A well-acted, amusing 1937 comedy about a Wall Street executive who tries his hand at ruining a Hollywood movie studio. An excellent cast includes Leslie Howard, Joan Blondell and Humphrey Bogart.

Belle of the Nineties (xxx), on 2 at 11:15. Vintage Mae West (1934) as she portrays a burlesque star who takes New Orleans—and most of its diamonds—by storm.

Inherit the Wind (xxxx), on 6 at 11:50. A superb 1960 film version of the powerful Broadway play about the famous Scopes Monkey Trial of the twenties in which a school teacher was arrested and tried for teaching Darwin's theory of evolution. Spencer Tracy as Clarence Darrow and Fredric March as William Jennings Bryan (as defender and prosecutor respectively) are flawless, as the fine supporting cast that includes Gene Kelly. Recommended.

SPENCER TRACY
. . . on 6 at 11:50 p.m.

See No Evil, on 7 at midnight. No rating available on this 1971 thriller starring Mia Farrow as a blind girl terrorized by persons unknown.

Torn Curtain (xx), on 8 at midnight. This 1966 "golden" 50th Hitchcock film is badly tarnished and sub par for the master of spy-chase melodramas. Paul Newman plays a science professor who gets involved in a fantastic espionage mission while attending a convention in Denmark, and Julie Adrews portrays his secretary-lover. It's all very predictable with only noteworthy highlight an excellent cameo role by famed character actress Lila Kedrova.

The Angel Wore Red (xx), on 12 at 12:20. A 1960 love story set against the turmoil of the Spanish Civil War of the 1930's. Dirk Bogarde portrays a Catholic priest who gives up his beliefs for the war's cause, and Ava plays the woman he loves.

Today's Highlights

Country Canada, on 2 and 6 at 4:30. A preview of the upcoming UN-sponsored World Food Conference, with a discussion on the proposal for a world food bank. (30 mins.)

Engelbert Humperdinck, on 12 at 6. A musical-variety show with host Engelbert Humperdinck and his guests Dusty Springfield, Jonathan Winters and Buddy Greco. (60 mins.)

National Geographic, on 4 at 7. Repeat of a 1969 documentary, Siberia: The Endless Horizon, that examines the opening up of Russia's huge wilderness area. (60 mins.)

Dr. Seuss, on 12 at 7. Three Dr. Seuss cartoon favorites—The Sneeches; The Zax; and Green Eggs and Ham. (30 mins.)

The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman, on 7 and 12 at 7:30. Repeat telecast the acclaimed, award-winning TV drama starring Cecily Tyson in a role that takes her, from age 19 to 110. She portrays a fictitious character named Jane Pittman, who was born in slavery and lived to see the civil-rights movement of the early 1960s. Her story, set against a backdrop of racial intolerance and violence, unfolds in flashbacks, as Miss Pittman recounts her life to a journalist. Recommended. (2 hrs.)

Nova, on 9 at 7:30. This popular science series returns with a program that looks at birds that reportedly sing in regional dialects. Examining why birds sing, ornithologists reveal that some species may learn tunes handed down from parent to offspring. (60 mins.)

The Waltons, on 2 and 6 at 8. The 1930s dance marathon craze sets the theme for tonight's episode, that finds John-Boy entered in a week long contest. The test of endurance becomes one of independence as John-Boy enters the dance marathon in defiance of his mother — who has scorned the event. Guest star Deirdre Lenihan (star of last season's Needles and Pins) plays John-Boy's partner. (60 mins.)

Masterpiece Theatre, on 9 at 8:30. Upstairs, Downstairs begins a new 13-part series where last season's Emmy-winning one left off. It's 1910, Edward VII has died, and class barriers are beginning to fall throughout England, perhaps next at 165 Eaton Place, an elegant London town house where the Bellamy family and their servants live. Champter 1 finds members of the downstairs domestic staff furious over serving lunch to James Bellamy — and his father's secretary. (60 mins.)

Marketplace, on 2 and 6 at 10. Hosts Joan Watson and George Finstad look at the safety factors of toys and their value as play objects, in tonight's edition of this popular consumer program. Also, a look at the practice of hair restoration. (30 mins.)

Midnight Cowboy

X-Rated Movie Tamed for TV

Midnight Cowboy, the Academy Award-winning Best Picture of the Year that opened new areas of reality in American filmmaking, comes to television for the first time on the ABC Television Network's The ABC Sunday Night Movie, Nov. 3 (9:00-11:00 p.m.).

This new PG-rated version has been carefully edited by the network, with the cooperation of the Oscar-winning director, John Schlesinger, and producer Jerome Hellman, to assure suitability for the home-screen while still maintaining the integrity and power of the frankly innovative film.

The movie also earned an Academy Award for Best Screenplay From Another Medium (for screenwriter Waldo Salt) and nominations for stars Jon Voight, Dustin Hoffman and Sylvia Miles.

Los Angeles Times critic Charles Champlin found the movie "unusually moving . . . as an exercise in filmmaking. Midnight Cowboy is dazzling," and said of stars Voight and Hoffman, "the success of their collaboration, as actors, has few parallels that I can recall in recent times."

Judith Crist called the movie a "brilliant and faithful film version of James Leo Herlihy's compassionate and comic novel about the lonely ones who walk faceless in the crowd, living their nighttime lives in the terrible isolation of the unloved . . . a film that should not be missed."

Buck and Rizzo, hapless products of very different worlds, become friends almost in spite of themselves, sharing their fantasies and a room in a building as condemned as their lives.

UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS — The Emmy award-winning series returns for 13 new episodes beginning on Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 9. There will be some significant cast changes as well as additional conflicts into the delicate social system personified by the upstairs Bellamy family and the downstairs domestic staff. Keeping a stiff upper lip are (l. to r. top) Rose (Jean Marsh), Hudson (Gordon Jackson,) Mrs. Bridges (Angela Baddeley), Edward (Christopher Beeny); (second row) James (Simon Williams), Ruby (Jenny Tomasin) and Richard Bellamy (David Langton).

Layers of Foam Rubber Help Age Emmy-Winning Actress

Cicely Tyson, who won an Emmy Award as actress of the year for her performance in "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," prepared for that starring role for several months before filming began. "I have to 'soak up' a character, slip into her skin, before I can 'play her,'" she explained.

Another skin was exactly what was called for in Miss Tyson's portrayal of Jane Pittman, the fictional 110-year-old former slave who recounts her lifetime of struggle in the drama, to be rebroadcast Sunday, Nov. 3 (7:30 - 9:30 p.m.) on the CBS Television Network. The special was first presented on the Network on Jan. 31, 1974.

Four months before filming started, make-up artists Stan Winston and Rick Baker began working with Miss Tyson to create her make-up, made from wafer-thin layers of foam rubber, that would "age" the actress. For their work, Winston and Baker also won an Emmy, bringing to a total of nine the Awards bestowed on the special by the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

To create the make-up, Winston and Baker first made plaster casts of Miss Tyson's young, natural face and models of the faces she would assume as Jane Pittman at 70, 90 and finally 100 years of age.

Then they designed the thin overlays that would be applied to each part of the actress' face, as well as to her hands and wrists. Other individual touches included separately applied eyebrow and facial hairs, yellow contact lenses that darkened and dulled her eyes, and a gold tooth. Application of the make-up during filming took six hours each day, starting very early in the morning.

To test the authenticity of the make-up, Miss Tyson first went before the cameras as a 90-year-old woman.

"I was nervous about seeing myself looking so realistically old," she said later, "But as I started to be Jane for the first time, I began to feel what it's like to have had such a long, hard life behind you.

"The make-up not only made me look old, but actually helped me feel old. As the application of its went on each morning I could almost feel the years seeping into my bones . . . and experience seeping into my head and hearts."

Movies

Brigham Young (xx), on 13 at noon. Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell and Dean Jagger star in this 1940 drama about pioneer Mormons and their trek from Illinois to Utah in search of a spiritual home.

Separate Tables, (xxxx), on 8 at 12:45. A faithful 1957 film version of Terrence Rattigan's two one-act plays about the lonely and eccentric guests at a British seaside resort. Deborah Kerr and David Niven (he won an Oscar for this performance) head a fine cast that includes Burt Lancaster, Rita Hayworth and Wendy Hiller (who also won an Oscar for her work in this film).

About Mrs. Leslie (xx), on 10 at 1. When a wealthy industrialist dies and leaves a boarding house owner some money, her secret love affair with him is recalled, in this 1954 melodrama starring Shirley Booth and Robert Ryan.

The Slender Thread (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. Anne Bancroft and Sidney Poitier are excellent in this gripping 1965 drama about a volunteer worker at a "Crisis Clinic" trying to keep a would-be suicide on the phone while the police trace the call.

Midnight Lace (xx), on 13 at 8. An over-produced 1960 mystery-thriller in which most of the footage finds a beautifully costumed Doris Day being terrorized by a mysterious unknown caller. Rex Harrison and John Gavin co-star. You're sure to guess the culprit about midway through.

The Greatest Gift, on 5 at 9. An unpreviewed 1974 made-for-TV drama starring Glenn Ford as an impoverished small-town preacher struggling to provide for his young family, while leading a dwindling congregation that is being intimidated by the town's bullying sheriff. Julie Harris and Lance Kerwin co-star.

Houseboat (xxx), on 11 at 9. An amusing, sophisticated 1958 comedy that benefits greatly from the presence of Cary Grant and Sophia Loren in the leading roles. Grant plays a widower living on a house boat, who hires a maid (Loren) for his children, little realizing that she is the daughter of a noted Italian symphony conductor. She neglects to tell him this little piece of information, of course, and the fun begins when Grant's fiancee snows up and takes one look at Sophia.

Woman of Straw (xxx), on 4 at 11. A well-dressed murder mystery starring the 1964 sex symbols Gina Lollobrigida and Sean Connery. However the two smoldering stars are completely upstaged by veteran pro Ralph Richardson, who plays the stuffings out of a wheel-chair bound millionaire with some eccentric views on life.

The House of the Seven Hawks (xx), on 12 at 11:30. A straight-forward 1959 espionage yarn with touches of legitimate suspense. Robert Taylor plays a charter boat captain who, gets involved with international thieves and the Dutch police when a mysterious man dies on his vessel. Nicole Maurey and Linda Christian are the two females in the case, and the British and Dutch locales add to the interest.

Coffee, Tea or Me (xx), on 7 at 11:45. Karen Valentine plays an airline stewardess who's juggling two husbands — one at each end of her Los Angeles to London run — in this 1973 made-for-TV comedy. John Davidson and Michael Anderson play the spouses.

Man of the West (xx), on 6 at midnight. A good cast (Gary Cooper, Julie London and Lee J. Cobb) makes this otherwise routine 1958 western tale about a reformed gunslinger facing his last shootout, better than average.

A Matter of Innocence (xx), on 8 at midnight. A sentimental, badly written 1968 tale in which a grown-up Hayley Mills actually has an affair with a dashing Indian gigolo, played with slick charm by Shashi Kapoor. Borrowed from a short story by Noel Coward, the plot follows the transformation of plain Polly (Miss Mills) to sexy Polly, thanks to the death of her wealthy aunt. Trevor Howard is totally wasted as Polly's ne'er-do-well uncle.

Bang! Bang! You're Dead (xx), on 6 at 2:05. Tony Randall, Senta Berger and Terry-Thomas star in this predictable 1966 English-made spy spoof, set in Morocco. There are more villains that you can keep track of and the laughs are few and far between.

Fort Yuma (x), on 8 at 2:10. Mission Impossible star Peter Graves would probably rather forget he ever starred in this routine 1955 western about the U.S. Cavalry vs. the Indians.

Today's Highlights

Not for Women Only, on 4 at 9:30. Guest host Jerry Lewis looks at the art of comedy, in part one of a part discussion of the subject, with various guests from the comedy field appearing throughout the week. (30 mins.)

Luncheon Date, on 2 at noon. Host Elwood Glover talks with noted fashion designer Hardy Amies. (60 mins.)

Mike Douglas on 12 at 2:30 and 7 at 6:30. Film and tapes from Mike's recent rip to the Soviet Union dominate this week's programs. In Moscow co-host Joseph Adamov joins guest Ivan Sourgickov, and in Philadelphia, co-host Jim McKay welcomes film historians Mert Koplin and Charles Grinker. (90 mins.)

Dinah Shore Show, on 7 at 3:30. In a rare talk show appearance, Walter Cronkite joins Dinah for a discussion of his early ambitions, and answers questions from the studio audience. (90 mins.)

Inheritance, on 9 at 8. A documentary special that profiles a vanishing breed—the American craftsman. Filmed in rural New York State, some of the artisans featured are a 90-year-old tinsmith, still working at his craft; and an 87-year-old blacksmith, who recalls the days of the first automobile. (60 mins.)

Ormandy International, on 9 at 9. Eugene Ormandy conducts the Philadelphia Orchestra in a program that includes selections from Grieg's Peer Gynt; and Sousa's Stars and Stripes Forever. (60 mins.)

Book Beat, on 9 at 10. Host Al Capp talks with author Edwin Newman, who talks about his book, Strictly Speaking, about the death of the English language. With characteristic dry wit, the veteran newsman (Newman) offers examples of poor grammar and misuse of word meanings by speakers ranging from statesmen to weather forecasters. (30 mins.)

People of Our Time, on 2 and 6 at 10:30. A profile of virtuoso vocalist Mabel Mercer. Top performers such as Frank Sinatra and Peggy Lee credit Miss Mercer as 'the master' from whom they learned lyric interpretation. Miss Mercer has rarely appeared outside New York since she arrived there from Paris in 1938. (30 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 11:30. Guest-hostess Debbie Reynolds welcomes Liberace, as one of her guests. (90 mins.)

Soviet Television Programs Eliminate the Bad News

Unless It's In Another Country

By LYNN OLSON

MOSCOW — The CBS Evening News, the ABC Evening News and the NBC Nightly News constantly battle for ratings and sponsors in the United States. But Vreemya doesn't have to worry about either.

It is the only major television news show in town or country here. Its name means "Time" and it starts at a time — 9 p.m. — most American channels are filled with gunsmoke, comedy or family dramas.

Vreemya viewers do not learn about car wrecks, dissident demonstrations of Moscow's most recent murder. What they do learn is the status of the harvest, which factories are meeting what production quotas and the names of the latest official visitors to the Soviet capital.

Television news in the Soviet Union isn't burdened by the charge often made against U.S. network news — that it presents a steady diet of doom, turmoil and conflict on the home front.

Even more than the Soviet print media, television here stays away from bad news, unless it happens in another country.

The editorial policy was neatly summed up when a Soviet, watching TV report on the harvesting of corn in Novosibirsk, was asked by a visitor if the harvest had been successful.

Vreemya, like its American network counterparts, lasts 30 minutes each night. It is beamed throughout the Soviet Union on the country's main TV channel.

For those who miss the prime time news, there also is a pair of 10-minute newscasts which appear at 6 p.m. and shortly before the midnight sign-off each night.

Filmed reports also are shown, with reporters often pictured interviewing their subjects or simply standing before a particular scene, giving a summary of the matter at hand.

Unlike the American networks, there are more women on the air in the commercialless brand of Soviet TV news.

The anchorman on Vreemya is joined by an anchorwoman in delivering the nightly report and at least half the reporters on all three Soviet news shows are women.

The anchormen tend to resemble the American breed — relatively good-looking, dressed more fashionably than other men and possessed of deep, resonant voices.

Here, as in the United States, television news folk are well-known names. Unlike most of their American counterparts, they often appear as masters of ceremonies or announcers on other Soviet TV programs.

"Happy - talk" news, a fixture on many local stations in the United States, is nyet-nyet here, the news is considered a serious subject and is delivered seriously.

For viewers used to American newscasts, in which any story longer than two minutes is considered an epic, TV news here might seem extremely slow of pace and long of wind. It concentrates heavily on wreath-layings, speeches and factories which overproduce their quotas.

Five minutes of a recent news program, for example were devoted to a report on the production of animal feed, complete with a long list of statistics and a film report.

Unless it concerns Eastern Europe, news about other countries usually focuses on conflicts or problems. The recent turmoil in Mozambique and the Cyprus fighting received big play on Moscow TV.

Sports and weather news are by no means ignored on Vreemya. They get a total of five minutes at the end of each night's program."

MABEL MERCER famed singer and master of lyric interpretation is the subject of a film essay to be telecast on People of Our Time, Monday at 10:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

Movies

Deadwood '76 (x), on 13 at noon. Routine 1964 western about a Civil War veteran who is mistaken for the outlaw Billy the Kid, starring Arch Hall Jr.

Story of a Woman (xx), on 8 at 12:45. Swedish actress Bibi Andersson stars in this romantic drama about a woman torn between love for her U.S. diplomat husband (Robert Stack) and her former lover (James Farentino), an Italian soccer player.

The Trap (xx), on 11 at 1. A fairly suspenseful 1959 crime drama about a crime syndicate boss trying to flee the country who isolated himself in a small desert town. A competent cast includes Lee J. Cobb, Richard Widmark and Tina Louise.

The Gun, on 8 at 7:30. The controversial problem of gun control is at the core of this unpreviewed 1974 semi-documentary that follows a 38-calibre revolver from its production in a factory through a succession of owners — all of whom have a different purpose in mind for the weapon.

Shadow of a Doubt (xxxx), on 13 at 8. Superb performances by Teresa Wright and Joseph Cotten highlight this gripping 1942 suspense drama, directed in the grand tradition by Alfred Hitchcock. The story revolves around a young woman who begins to suspect her favorite uncle of being the Merry Widow murderer.

The Flim-Flam Man (xxx), on 7 at 8:05. George C. Scott and Michael Sarrazin star in this 1967 comedy-drama about the adventures of an aging con man and his protege, a young Army deserter. An excellent supporting cast includes Harry Morgan, Jack Albertson, Alice Ghostley and Slim Pickins.

King Kong (xxx), on 11 at 9. Years after its release, this famous 1933 shocker about a giant ape captured and displayed in New York, only to escape and wreak havoc in the city, remains a marvel of technical achievement with the bizarre, imaginative special effects still considered fascinating. Cast includes Fay Wray, Bruce Cabot and Robert Armstrong.

The Unsinkable Molly Brown (xxx), on 7 at 11:30. An excellent 1964 film version of the raucous Broadway musical hit about a tough backwoods girl who goes after money, social position and love with non-stop energy. Debbie Reynolds in the title role has seldom been better, and Harve Presnel as Molly's gold-prospecting husband has a good voice, and cuts a good romantic figure.

An Act of Reprisal, on 12 at 11:30. No rating available on this 1965 modern-day Romeo and Juliet tragedy about a Greek Cypriot girl who falls in love with a British officer, starring Ina Balin and Jeremy Brett.

Two Women (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. A deeply moving 1960 Italian-made drama featuring an Academy Award-winning performance (and deservedly so) by Sophia Loren as a mother who faces hardship and tragedy with her daughter while trying to survive in Second World War-torn Italy. Miss Loren's intensity and conviction was a revelation in this beautiful film. Recommended.

Whatever Happened to Baby Jane? (xxx), on 5 at midnight. An unusual 1962 thriller highlighted by a chilling performance by Bette Davis as a faded former child movie star who lives in seclusion with her intimidating crippled sister, well played by Joan Crawford. One of the best of the grand Gugnol type of films, with virtuoso direction by Robert Aldrich, and an admirably nasty acting job in a supporting role by Victor Buono.

Sitting Bull (x), on 6 at midnight. A ridiculous inaccurate 1954 western tale about Sitting Bull vs. the U.S. Cavalry, loaded with phony action and dreadful performances by Dale Robertson and Mary Murphy.

Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Thanks to the thoughtful screenplay and excellent direction by Abraham Polonsky, this 1969 western becomes an exciting chase story, but more importantly, one of the few major Hollywood films that has ever dealt sensitively with the question of the American white man's treatment of the Indian. The plot, set in 1909, finds sheriff Robert Redford hunting down a young Paiute Indian, well played by Robert Blake. Polonsky is a gifted filmmaker who was blacklisted by Hollywood for nearly 20 years and his triumphant comeback is heralded by this absorbing drama.

The Shakiest Gun in the West (xx), on 8 at 1:55. A 1968 comedy starring Don Knotts as an Eastern dentist whose misadventures make him a hero of the Old West.

The Nightfighters (xx), on 6 at 2:15. Robert Mitchum, Richard Harris and Anne Heywood star in this English-made 1960 drama about the IRA fight to drive the British from Northern Ireland in 1940.

Today's Highlights

U.S. Election Coverage, beginning at 4 p.m. ABC (Channel 4) and NBC (Channel 5) begin coverage of today's election results at 4 p.m., with CBS (Channel 7) beginning at 6 p.m. and KVOS (Channel 12) picking up coverage at 6:30 p.m. Most regular programming on those channels will be pre-empted throughout the evening as coverage continues until all major races are decided. At stake in this off-year election are 435 seats in the House of Representatives, 34 seats in the Senate and 35 govrernorships. Most channels, however, will carry their regular scheduled newscasts. (Live)

CBC Coverage of U.S. Election, on 2 and 6 at 7. A report on today's U.S. election with anchorman Lloyd Robertson and Ron Collister, and guest analysts Pierre Salinger and former Vice Presidential press secretary Vic Cold. Also included are interviews with candidates and U.S. political specialists. (60 mins.)

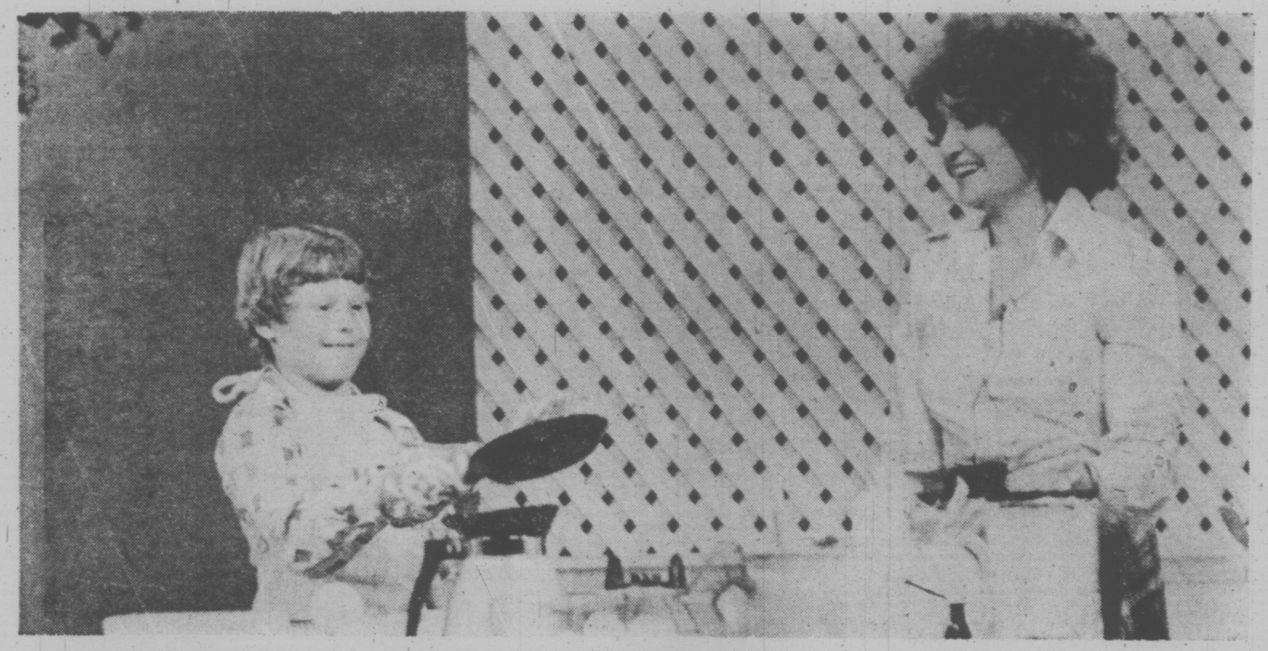
America, on 9 at 9. Host Alistair Cooke continues with his award-winning series, with tonight's focus on the formation of the U.S. Supreme Court and Thomas Jefferson's role in the framing of the Bill of Rights. (May be pre-empted for U.S. election coverage). (30 mins.).

Police Story, on 2 and 6 at 8:30. Guest star Tony Musante (Toma) plays a cop whose father, a Yugoslav immigrant, may know more than he's telling about the apparently motiveless slaying of a fellow immigrant. (60 mins.).

Evening at Symphony, on 9 at 8:30. Erich Leinsdorf conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra and soprano Beverly Sills sings the leading role in this special performance of the Strauss opera, Ariadne auf Naxos. The opera combines character from the Greek myth of Ariadne with a troup of commedia dell-arte clowns. (May be pre-empted for U.S. election coverage). 90 mins.).

Heritage Italy, on 8 at 9. This second of three programs in the Heritage series examines the customs and traditions of the Italians. The program provides glimpses of life in Toronto's Italian community, but deals primarily with life in present-day Italy. (60 mins.).

Harry O, on 8 at 10. Stefanie Powers guest stars in tonight's episode that finds Harry (series star David Janssen) involved with a blind psychic who not only predicted the death of his client, but is known for writing murder stories that seem to come true. (60 mins.).



Cooking Lessons For Kids

Colette Rossant, hostess and teacher of Zee Cooking School admires the pancake-flipping technique of one of her young pupils, when this new gourmet cooking series for children and teenagers premieres on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Radio Play Offers Modern Treatment of Lilith Legend

According to ancient legend, Adam's first wife was not Eve, but Lilith, whose determination to be his equal proved too much for her given mate, and so she was expelled from Eden, and replaced with Eve, who was created in a gentler, more submissive mold. Down through the ages, Lilith has represented Adam's first love, the fallen woman, the other woman, constantly plagued by disaster, and treated badly by both sexes.

Fascinated by this myth, ACTRA Award-winning playwright Len Peterson used it as the central theme in his play Women in the Attic, commissioned by Regina's Globe Theatre for staging there in 1971. The play marked homecoming year, and Peterson, one of our most prolific playwrights, was chosen because he grew up in Regina.

Peterson has adapted Women in the Attic for presentation on CBC Tuesday Night, Nov. 5 at 8:03 p.m. EST (on CBC-FM's Encore, Thurs., Nov. 7 at 8:03 p.m.). "Lilith," he says, "is usually painted in black and red. I've treated her sympathetically, something that's not been done to often. I've shown two aspects of the same woman, contending with each other; each is seen from the other's viewpoint."

NONNIE GRIFFIN
. . . young Lilith

Re-creating their original roles are Sue and Ken Kramer, directors of the Globe Theatre, who play Old Lil (Lilith) and Bruno, the reporter.

The story begins with Bruno finding Old Lil, an ugly old bawd, dead on Toronto's Queen Street. Her shopping bag contains some scrolls of wallpaper, on which she has written about her life. He goes to her attic room where Old Lil materializes as he pieces together her story.

During the flashback scenes, the action moves to the northern bush, where the young Lilith (Lillian) is played by Nonnie Griffin, and her lover Tom Howser, by Colin Fox. Others in the cast are E. M. Margolese, Malachi the tailor; John Scott, Hank; Sandy Webster, Mr. Dobie; Ruth Springford, Mrs. Howser, Tom's mother; Lynne Gorman, Monica; and Mary Barton, Francois Klanter, Gillie Fenwick, Leslie Yeo, Jim Brewer, and George Robertson.

Heritage: Italy

The lure of Italy is strong. The past lingers on, is preserved and revered. To those raised in Western Civilization, Italy gives a sense of homecoming. In recent years, there have been more people visiting Italy than there are people in Canada. By 1980, Italy is expected to accommodate more tourists than there are even natives. But Italy is a country of extreme and a potentially dangerous imbalance exists between the rich and the poor. Producer Bill Fruet travelled to Italy to examine the lifestyles and cultures of the land and the people who are the subject for the next fascinating Heritage episode entitled Italy, airing Tuesday, November 5, 9:00 - 10:00 EST on the CTV Television Network.

Canada is the country that lured many native Italians from their villages seeking the chance to work and profit by their labour. There are many who remained. Servilio Leali is one who stayed behind. For seven years now he has been working to restore the monastery of San Bernedetto Po back to its original form. He relies on his knowledge of construction and his instinct as a mason and bit by bit he has unravelled the mysteries concerning this monastery that many scholars before him were unable to answer. Working by his side is his oldest son, Givilano, who shares the same passion for discovery. They are the kind of men so totally immersed in their work, that they think nothing of driving a hundred miles on a Sunday to study the architecture of some church, rather than spend it as a day of rest.

They, like so many of their countrymen, believe that it is work that gives life its scope, giving satisfaction and definition to what they do.

PAYDAY LOOKS AT CLC

The Canadian Labor Congress is subject of the CBC television network program Payday on Sunday, Nov. 3 at 1 p.m.

Prior to the CLC's tenth annual convention in Vancouver last May, the rank and file sentiment was that the CLC executive was "out of touch with the reality of today's society and its needs" and the outgoing executive was accused of being "almost senile".

The big issue for Canadian labor is nationalism. Can or should the unions try to exist apart from the "internationals," mostly based in the United States? This question is constantly before the CLC these days.

Department of Labor figures recently showed that union membership in Canada last year reached 2.5 million workers — 35.6 per cent of the non-farm labor force. The majority of unions in Canada have fewer than 10,000 members and there are many unorganized workers who don't wish to join unions despite provisions of the Rand Formula.

Appearing on the program is Marc Zwelling-pubicist for the United Steel Workers Union. Producer is Eric McCleary, executive producer is John Lackie.

Claudia (xxx), on 13 at noon. An excellent 1943 film version of Rose Franklin's almost classical story of a child bride who grows up, with a delightful performance by Dorothy McGuire in the title role. Funny, sentimental and thoroughly entertaining. Robert Young co-stars.

The Mouse on the Moon, on 8 at 12:45. Margaret Rutherford and Terry-Thomas star in this 1963 sequel to, The Mouse That Roared, that finds the mythical duchy of Grand Fenwick joining the space race.

A Most Unusual Woman, on 11 at 1. No rating available on this 1964 Italian-made drama about a small-town promoter who marries a pathetic girl whose face and body are covered with hair.

Cleopatra (xxx), on 5 at 3:59. (Part 1) As a spectacle, this elaborate 1963 production has few equals, but as historical drama it leaves something to be desired. The acting runs from brilliant (Rex Harrison as Caesar) to uneven (Elizabeth Taylor as Cleopatra), however she is a feast for the eyes. Richard Burton (as Mark Anthony) fluctuates between good and bad. (Conclusion tomorrow, same time and channel.)

The Private War of Major Benson (xx), on 13 at 8. An enjoyable 1955 comedy about a hard-bitten army officer forced to accept a transfer to a boy's military academy run by nuns. Cast includes Charlton Heston, Julie Adams and Tim Hovey.

The Great Ice Rip-Off, on 4 at 8:30. An unpreviewed 1971 made-for TV crime-drama with a light touch of humor about a gang of diamond thieves who pull a heist in Seattle and then calmly board a bus to San Diego for their getaway. Trouble comes in the person of a retired police detective who is a passenger on the bus. A competent cast includes Gig young and Lee J. Cobb.

Winning (xxx), on 8 at 8:30. Film footage from the harrowing 17-car crash during the 1968 Indianapolis 500 highlights this 1969 drama that follows the off-track rivalry of two racers in love with the same woman. Paul Newman shows his skill as a competent race driver, and the remainder of a good cast includes Joanne Woodward, Richard Thomas and Robert Wagner.

Cast a Giant Shadow (xxx), on 11 at 9. A highly romanticized but still interesting 1966 account of the Israeli-Arab conflict in the days when Israel first became a state. Kirk Douglas is cast as Col. Marcus, the legendary American soldier who helped shape israel's fighting force in 1949. Remainder of the cast includes Senta Berger, Angie Dickinson, Tpol (Israel's top movie star) and cameo appearances by John Wayne, Frank Sinatra and Yul Brynner.

The Devil's Daughter (xx), on 12 at 10. Shelley Winters and Belinda Montgomery star in this 1972 made-for-TV thriller about a young woman hounded by a Satanic cult determined to possess her soul.

Code Name: Red Roses (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Predictable Italian-made drama about an American Second World War spy who parachutes into Nazi territory to recover stolen military secrets. James Daly and Pier Angeli star.

The L-Shaped Room (xxxx), on 7 at 11:45. A beautifully directed Brit British-made drama about a pregnant girl taking lodgings in a rundown boarding house, and the struggling young writer who meets, helps and falls in love with her. Leslie Caron is flawless in a sensitive performance backed by an equally fine one by Tom Bell, American stage actor Brock Peters is also excellent in the role of another boarder who aids Miss Caron. Recommended.

The List of Adrian Messenger (xxx), on 2 at midnight. A gimmicky but entertaining 1963 whodunnit about a crafty murderer who resorts to disguises to eliminate nearly a dozen people. George C. Scott and Dana Wynter star, but the fun here is to see if you can spot the guest cast — Kirk Douglas, Robert Mitchum, Tony Curtis, Burt Lancaster and Frank Sinatra — cleverly disguised in brilliant makeup.

The Gallant Hours (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1960 biography of Adm. William F. "Bull" Halsey, based on actual events in the South Pacific campaign during the Second World War. James Cagney plays the title role.

Odds Against Tomorrow (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Robert Ryan, Harry Belefonte and Shelley Winters star in this tense, well-directed 1959 drama about a group of bank robbers who plan a big job that will put them all "in easy street". Ryan is excellent as the ex-con who resents having Belefonte in the group, but Harry's just very good in a straight acting role.

Huk (xx), on 8 at 2. Huks are marauding fanatic guerrillas terrorizing and plundering plantations in Manilla, and George Montgomery plays an American who arrives to sell his inherited land, but decides to stay and fight.

Centennial Summer (xx), on 6 at 2:25. Jerome Kern tunes highlight this otherwise routine 1946 musical about a Philadelphia family attending the 1876 Centennial Exposition. Jeanne Crain and Cornel Wilde star.

Today's Highlights

Mike Douglas Show, on 12 at 2:30 and 7 at 6:30. In Moscow, broadcaster Joseph Adamov joins Mike and his wife Genevieve for a look at a Russian supermarket and a visit to the University of Moscow. (90 mins.)

Dinah Shore Show, on 7 at 2:30. Dinah's guests today include syndicated columnist Erma Bombeck, comedienne Kay Ballard, Ronny Cox (Apple's Way) and comic Henny Youngman. (90 mins.)

ABC Afterschool Special, on 4 at 4:30. Winning and Losing: Diary of a Campaign, a made-for-TV drama about two teen-age girls who volunteer as campaign workers in the U.S. Senate race in South Dakota between incumbent Democrat George McGovern and Republican Leo Thorsness. The story details grass-roots politics — the canvassing, the motorcades — but the heart of the drama is the experience each girl gains by her involvement in the political process. (90 mins.)

Nature of Things, on 2 and 6 at 8. Traveller From an Antique Land — a study of the disease environment of an ancient civilization to learn how diseases have evolved. Highlight of the program is an autopsy of an Egyptian mummy some 2000 years old. (30 mins.)

Tony and Lena, on 7 at 8. Tony Bennett and Lena Horne in a musical salute to composer Howard Arlen. Songs include, Over the Rainbow, Stormy Weather and Let's Fall in Love. (60 mins.)

Musicamera, on 2 and 6 at 8:30. Music and documentary footage blend in this profile of the outstanding Russian cellist Mstislav Rostropovitch. The program focuses on Rostropovitch's life both on and off the stage, and includes reminiscences about his early musical training and how he met his wife, soprano Galina Vishnevskaya. (90 mins.)

David Castle in Concert, on 9 at 9:30. Singer-composer-pianist David Castle in a program of classical and pop music. (30 mins.)

Borodin Quartet, on 2 and 6 at 10. Music performed by the Borodin Quartet, including Alexander Borodin's String Quartet No. 2 in D Major, which contains melodies used in the Broadway musical Kismet. (30 mins.)

Festival Films, on 9 at 10. Broadway Babies, a documentary shot in a New York City automat recalling the days of vaudeville. (30 mins.)

First Person Singular, on 2 and 6 at 10:30. Part 3 of the Lester B. Pearson memoirs titled, To War and Back (1915-18). Filmed interviews show the profound influence the First World War had on the youthful Pearson. (30 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 8:30. David Frost hosts this third edition of The Guinness Book of World Records, which includes a look at the world's largest ice-cream sundae. (90 mins.)

MSTISLAV ROSTROPOVITCH — acknowledged as the world's greatest cellist, is the subject of a documentary on CBC-TV's Musicamera series, to be telecast on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6. Rostropovitch will be appearing in Victoria this coming February.

ABC Loses Heavily In the TV Ratings

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

Thus far the season has been a disaster for ABC-TV. In the early A. C. Nielsen Co. ratings the network moved from a strong third and occasional second place into a very weak third place.

In those same early ratings ABC-TV ranked first on not a single night of the week. NBC was winning on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday nights. CBS was winning on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

The early ratings reports shocked the network into making the kinds of changes that haven't been seen since the Tammy Grimes Show was cancelled after three episodes and Turn On (an electronic imitation of Laugh In) was discontinued after one episode.

Unexpected suddenness was the way Kodiak and The Texas Wheelers ended, and John Wayne or Clint Eastwood movies were rushed into the Friday-night schedule. This demonstrated once again the reliance of network television on motion pictures to solve scheduling problems and worse, demonstrated the dismal quality of TV entertainment programming.

The second week of September brought 25 new programs to network television. Five of them can be called successes, but none of them can be called new.

The most successful, Chico and the Man, is only a slight variation on the theme that carried Sanford and Son to high ratings. Rhoda is a spin-off from Mary Tyler Moore; Little House on the Prairie is the upper-Midwest, 19th-century version of The Waltons; The Rockford Files re-works the material used five years ago by Darren McGavin in The Outsider, and Policewoman is very familiar material.

WEDNESDAY MOVIE OF THE WEEK — Gig Young portrays a mastermind of disguise (right) and of a series of diamond thefts in the 1974 made-for-TV comedy-drama, The Great Ice Rip-Off, Channel 4's Movie of the Week at 8:30 p.m.

More Warts—Less Treacle For Apple's Way TV Star

By VERNON SCOTT

All his life Cox never earned more than $8,000 per annum. He scrimped and scavenged in New York City with his student wife and two young sons, squeaking by with television guest shots, off-Broadway plays and stock.

Then the thunderbolt! a top role in Deliverance.

Instant recognition. Agents clamoring to handle his affairs. Movie and television offers. Even instant riches — which he blew.

Cox was the guy who played guitar with the retarded hillbilly boy in Deliverance. But — the hit song, Dueling Banjos, was recorded in the film by Eric Weisberg and Steve Mandel.

"That cost me a quarter million dollars," said Cox during a lunch break from his series. "I'll know better next time."

This from a man whose household furniture was rejected by the Salvation Army when he departed his New York apartment to move to California. He had to pay junk men to haul his possessions to the dump.

RONNY COX

Now with his series, a new recording contract and movie deals, if everything works out well Cox could earn a million dollars within the next couple of years. Perhaps more.

He has purchased a home in the San Fernando Valley (his first) and is building a tennis court on the property.

Cox has espoused far left-wing politics and causes all his life. He continued to identify himself as ultra liberal. But he is a capitalist now. In addition to home and tennis court, he has horror of capitalistic horrors, even incorporated himself.

Last year Apple's Way almost smothered viewers with treacle. Cox is aware the series must improve despite its respectable showing against Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color and the FBI last season.

"Apple will have more warts on him this year," said Cox. "I predict he will become the most multi-faceted character on the tube.

"This year he will take on fewer social issues. The stories will deal more with family relationships. I know because I have a lot to say about Apple and what he does.

Movies

The Tall Lie (xxx), on 13 at noon. A hard-hitting 1952 melodrama about a college professor who exposes the brutality and foul-play behind the respected school fraternity, produced, directed by and starring Paul Henreid.

Pork Chop Hill (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. A stark, well-directed 1959 drama about the last hours of the Korean War focusing on a courageous U.S. infantry unit, starring Gregory Peck, George Peppard and Harry Guardino.

Honeymoon, on 11 at 1. Ballet star Ludmilla Tcherina and Anthony Steele star in this 1959 English-made drama about a newlywed former ballerina who is pursuaded to return to dancing, much to the displeasure of her husband.

Cleopatra (xxxx), on 5 at 3:30. Conclusion. (See yesterday, same time and channel for details.)

The Far Country (xxx), on 13 at 8. James Stewart and Ruth Roman star in this like-ly 1955 western adventure about cattle-rustling, Alaskan style. Stewart pulls all the stops as a peaceful cowpoke who gets trampled on at every turn until he just explodes. Walter Brennan, as Stewart's sidekick, gives a fine supporting performance.

DIRK BOGARDE
. . . on 2 at midnight

How Sweet It Is (xx), on 7 at 9. A predictable 1968 battle-of-the-sexes farce about two married couples involved in extramarital complications on the Italian Riviera, starring Debbie Reynolds and James Garner.

The Thomas Crown Affair (xxx), on 12 at 9:30. Steve McQueen and Faye Dunaway star in this well-directed 1968, comedy-drama about a super-cool millionaire (McQueen) who masterminds a heist for fun — and a little profit. Miss Dunaway, gorgeously costumed, plays an efficient insurance company investigator who falls prey to his undeniable charm. Recommended.

The Cobra, on 12 at 11:30. No rating available on this 1968 Italian-made adventure about U.S. T-men trying to track opium sources in the Middle East, starring Dana Andrews and Anita Ekberg.

Cry Rape! (xxx), on 7 at 11:45. An excellent and informative 1973 semi-documentary that takes an adult look at one of the most common, and least reported crimes in America. (Since the release of this film, and several others like it in both Canada and the U.S., there has been considerable inquiry, and some legal changes, in the laws that allowed victim intimidation in the courts.)

Victim (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. A thoughtful, well-acted and well-directed 1961 British-made drama that heretofore deals with the forbidden screen subject of homosexuality. Dirk Bogarde is excellent in the role of a lawyer who becomes involved in a case with homosexual implications, jeopardizing his own past and career. A tasteful film that made an ernest plea for changing the antiquated law making homosexuality a crime.

The Seventh Dawn (x), on 6 at midnight. An insipid 1964 adventure set in Malaya following the Second World War, starring William Holden as a wealthy American plantation owner who finds himself caught in the web of guerrilla warfare and romantic upheaval. Capucine and Susannah York co-star.

Jessica (xx), on 8 at midnight. When a glamorous mid-wife turns men's heads in a small Italian village, the women of the town pull a "Lysistrata," and go on strike, in this slow-moving 1962 comedy starring Angie Dickinson and Maurice Chevalier.

Lonelyhearts (xx), on 8 at 2:20. Montgomery Clift, Robert Ryan, Myrna Loy and Maureen Stapleton star in this 1958 story about an "advice to the lovelorn" columnist who gets too involved with his job and ends up questioning himself about values in life and love. The cast flounders with a badly written script, but Miss Stapleton fares best as the wife of a cripple who hungers for a passionate love.

Monkey on My Back (xxxx), on 6 at 2:35. Cameron Mitchell stars in this hard-hitting biography of war hero and boxing champion Barney Ross, whose toughest fight was against drugs.

Today's Highlights

What Now, America? on 8 at 7:30. Debut of a new series of talks by Archbishop Fulton J. Sheen on the attitudes and ideals of America. (30 mins.)

Carol Burnett Show, on 2 and 6 at 8. A spoof of beauty pageants highlights tonight's show with Carol, her regulars Harvey Korman and Vicki Lawrence and special guest comedian-impressionist John Byner. (60 mins.)

DICK VAN DYKE
. . . on 4 at 11:30 p.m.

The Way It Was, on 9 at 8. The second of two shows on the 1947 World Series between the New York Yankees and the Brooklyn Dodgers. (30 mins.)

Paper Moon, on 4 at 8:30. Name-dropping could prove fatal for Moze (Christopher Connelly) — he's leading people to think that he's the advance man for the notorious killers Bonnie and Clyde. (30 mins.)

Soul!, on 9 at 9. The return of this black-culture series begins with a repeat of the show featuring composer, singer and pianist Billy Preston. (60 mins.)

Maclear, on 8 at 9:30. The Wired-In World of Zen, a documentary study of the Eastern philosophy's influence and relevance in today's world, with host-correspondent Michael Mclear. (30 mins.)

Adrienne At Large, on 2 at 10. A nostalgic visit to Hong Kong, hostess Andrienne Clarkson's birthplace. (30 mins.)

Wide World Special, on 4 at 11:30. Harold Lloyd's World of Comedy, as host Dick Van Dyke looks at the life of the daredevil movie comic who never used a double. Van Dyke tours Lloyd's 44-room Beverly Hills Mansion and shows excerpts from many of his comedy classics, ranging from pre-1920 one-reelers to his chase films of later years. (90 mins.)

Johnny Carson Show, on 5 at 11:30. Johnny's guests tonight include British actress Susannah York, comedian Shecky Green and singer Johnny Mathis. (90 mins.)

TV Journalist Returns To Hong Kong Birthplace

On Adrienne at Large, her series of personalized journalism on CBC-TV, Adrienne Clarkson "goes home again" for the program of Thursday, Nov. 7, at 10 p.m. — home to her birthplace, Hong Kong.

Having left the beleaguered British crown colony as a child, during the Japanese occupation of the Second World War, Adrienne last visited her famous hometown in 1962, when refugees from the People's Republic of China were surging across the border and into the Hong Kong shanty towns stacked on the hillsides overlooking the harbor.

Adrienne Clarkson

Now, Adrienne rediscovers Hong Kong in 1974, its 33 square miles of land a seething mass of free enterprise and free trade activity.

"It is," says Adrienne, "the last bastion of super-capitalism." Every street hawker dreams of becoming a millionaire, and some of them might make it.

With a population 99 per cent Chinese, Hong Kong is a superficially Western city, an anachronism of politics and economics — Oriental in its character, tradition and ideas, but, at the same time, an outpost of British colonialism.

The British lease on the colony runs out in 1997, but that is the least of the worries of the city's residents. The Republic of China has never recognized the validity of the lease, and, at any time, the Chinese could sweep down from the hills and overrun the small territory. It is, at best, a tenuous, precarious existence.

BCTV to Show The Godfather

British Columbia Television today announced the purchase of the television rights to the motion picture, The Godfather. The controversial feature will be seen in one showing on Saturday, November 9, commencing at 9 p.m.

American rights to The Godfather were earlier purchased by the NBC network who will air it later in November over a two-evening span.

Lloyd Colthorp, BCTV Vice-President in charge of programming, reports that any editing decisions to be made on the film will be made here at BCTV. He stated, "We intend to make deletions only where absolutely necessary so that our version will be almost identical to the theatre version. Of course, we will air an announcement prior to the telecast that it is an adult feature."

The Godfather will be seen on both stations operated by British Columbia Television; one in Vancouver and CHEK in Victoria.

Movies

The Day the Hot Line Got Hot (xx), on 13 at noon. Charles Boyer, Robert Taylor and George Chakiris star in this 1969 espionage drama about a baggage mix-up that catapults a young man into an intergational crisis.

Happy Go Lovely (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A pleasant 1951 English-made musical about a chorus girl who gets her big chance to be a star when it's rumored she is engaged to a millionaire, starring Vera-Ellen and David Niven.

Girl on the Run (xx), on 11 at 1. Routine 1938 private eye thriller about a detective who tries to help a singer who has become the target for a professional killer. Cast includes Efrem Zimbalist Jr.

Operation Crossbow (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. An exciting finale highlights this 1965 Second World War espionage adventure crammed with as much action as possible. Although Sophia Loren has top billing, she has only a brief role — it's really George Peppard, Tom Courtenay and Jeremy Kemp as a trio of agents assigned to destroy a heavily guarded Nazi munitions depot who keep things buzzing.

The Egg and I (xxx), on 13 at 8. An entertaining 1947 film version of Betty MacDonald's best-seller about the misadventures of city folk who move to a chicken farm. This picture introduced the characters of Ma and Pa Kettle (Marjorie Main and Percy Kilbride) and also stars Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray.

The Man From Laramie (xxx), on 7 at 9. An above average western about a man who proves he is a tower of strength against the evil forces of a small town. Filmed in 1955 with an excellent performance by James Stewart.

The Devil's Brigade (xx), on 11 at 9. William Holden, Cliff Robertson and Vince Edwards star in this 1968 action-filled drama about a group of misfit American GIs who join with efficient Canadian commandos for a special mission into Nazi-occupied Norway.

Giant (xxxx), on 12 at 9. An entertaining 1956 film rendering of Edna Ferber's epic saga about the growth of the Texas cattle and oil empires of two fascinating men — Rock Hudson and James Dean — and their mutual love for the beautiful Elizabeth Taylor. The story covers two generations and paints a fascinating portrait of the people who struck it rich in Texas. The personal drama and love stories are kept in check and the sentiment is kept to a minimum under the sure hand of director George Stevens. Mercedes McCambridge is excellent in a supporting role.

ELIZABETH TALYOR
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

Spirits of the Dead, on 7 at 11:15. A 1968 European-made fantasy combining three tales by Edgar Allan Poe, starring Jane Fonda, Peter Fonda, Alain Delon, Terence Stamp and Brigitte Bardot.

The Black Sleep (xx), on 6 at midnight. Basil Rathbone plays a mad doctor conducting inhuman experiments in 1870 London, in this gruesome thriller, filmed in 1956.

Circus of Fear (xx), on 8 at midnight. A brutal murder under the big top sets the scene for this 1967 English-made mystery starring Christopher Lee and Leo Genn.

The Great Race (xxxx), on 12 at 1. Tony Curtis, Jack Lemmon, Natalie Wood and Peter Falk star in this extravagant 1965 farce which chronicles the first New York-to-Paris car race in the early 1900s. Lemmon is delightful as the most dastardly screen villain to ever hide behind a cape and Peter Falk as his side kick is hilarious.

NATALIE WOOD
. . . on 12 at 4 p.m.

The Golden Mistress (xx), on 6 at 1:45. Voodoo magic and treasure hunting in the West Indies are the key elements in this 1954 adventure starring John Agar and Rosemarie Bowe.

The Horse Soldiers (xx), on 8 at 1:55. John Wayne and William Holden portray union officers who have contrasting viewpoints on the Civil War in this sprawling 1959 western, directed by John Ford.

Today's Highlights

Not For Women Only, on 4 at 9:30. Conclusion of a five-part discussion on the art of comedy with guest host Jerry Lewis. Guests include a psychologist who studies comics' personalities. (30 mins.)

Dinah Shore Show, on 7 at 3:30. Dinah's guests today included British actor Peter Finch, Lawrence Welk, Art Carney, Diahann Carroll and Dr. Alex Comfort. (90 mins.)

All in the Family, on 2 and 6 at 8. In the second of a three-part episode, Archie is still missing, and the family begins to think he has run away with the factory's most attractive secretary. (30 mins.)

Masterpiece Theatre, on 9 at 8:30. The Emmy-winning Upstairs, Downstairs returns for a new 13-episode series. There will be some significant changes in the cast this year. Absent from the series are daughter Elizabeth, who has gone to live in America, and Sarah, the under parlormaid, who has settled in suburbia with her husband Watkins. Lady Marjorie (Rachel Gurney) will also be leaving the cast after the first episode. The newest cast addition will be Meg Wynn Owen (who plays Richard Bellamy's secretary Miss Forrest. In tonight's episode, the middle-class secretary attracts the attentions of young James Bellamy (Simon Williams) and provokes a near-revolt among the downstairs help. (60 mins.)

McMillan and Wife, on 8 at 9. Jose Feliciano, Barry Sullivan and Donna Mills guest star in tonight's episode that finds Mac (Rock Hudson) enlisting Sally's (Susan Saint James) aid in the investigation of the murder of an old friend, an undercover intelligence agent. (2 hrs.)

Dialogue on World Oil, on 13 at 10. Part 1 of a discussion moderate by Melvin Laird, with guests Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's Oil Minister; Sen. Henry Jackson, and Donald Macdonald, Canada's Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources. (60 mins.)

Wide World in Concert, on 4 at 11:30. Keith Moon of the Who is the host of two consecutive 90-minute segments celebrating the second anniversary of this music series. Highlights from past shows are combined with new performances with featured performers Chuck Berry, Edgar Winter Group, the late Jim Croce, Rod Stewart, and Seals and Crofts among others. (3 hrs.)

Midnight Special, on 5 at 1. Sanford and Son's Redd Foxx hosts this late night special featuring Little Anothony and the Imperials and rock groups Golden Earing and Orphan. (90 mins.)

Fretz of Conrad Grebel College, Waterloo, Ont., talks about traditional Mennonite customs, and the changes occurring among Ontario Mennonites. An item on Monkman's Chinatown which appears doomed for expropriation. An interview with Joe Zuken of Winnipeg, one of the few Communists who has ever held public office in Canada. Of Ukrainian background, he is a radical lawyer and fighter of causes. An examination of Dr. Evelyn Kallen's theories on racism as related in her book, The Anatomy of Racism: Canadian Dimensions.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — The 1974 Massey Lectures — Nostalgia for the Absolute: A series of five talks given by Dr. George Steiner, essayist, author, critic and scholar. Dr. Steiner is professor of English and Comparative Literature at the Universite de Geneve, Switzerland, Extra-ordinary Fellow at Churchill College, Cambridge, England and chief literary critic of the New Yorker magazine. Tonight: No. 1 — The Secular Messiahs: General theme — the vacuum after the decline of formal religions. The evolution over these past 100 years, of powerful world-systems or mythologies. These seek to fill the vacuum left by the absence of religion and, in so doing, take on the idiom and dramaturgy of theological constructs. Talk touches on some of the explicit theological-messianic symbolism in Marx.

10:30 (AM) Great Canadian Gold Rush — A special on rock performer Valdy, including a live concert. With host Terry David Mulligan.

TUESDAY

8:03 (AM) CBC Tuesday Night — Women in the Attic, by ACTRA Award winning playwright Len Peterson. This is a modernized version of the Lilith myth: Lilith was Adam's first wife, and down through the ages has represented his first love, the fallen woman, the other woman, plagued by disaster. Peterson treats her character sympathetically in his story which begins with a reporter, Bruno, finding Old Lil, an ugly old bawd, dead on Toronto's Queen Street. Her shopping bag contains some scrolls of wallpaper on which she has written about her life. He goes to her attic, room where old Lil (Lilith) materializes as he pieces together her story. Eventually as he begins to understand her suffering, via the catharsis of someone else's pain, he comes to terms with his own past and his fate. Music is composed and conducted by Morris Surdin. The play was commissioned by Regina's Globe Theatre and staged there in 1971. Sue and Ken Kramer, directors of the Theatre, play Old Lil and Bruno, re-creating their original roles.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — The 1974 Massey Lectures — Nostalgia for the Absolute — No. 2 — Voyages Into the Interior: The mythology of psychology and psychoanalysis. How the quarrel with Jung is a false quarrel, an artificial search for "heresy" (such false quarrels are characteristic of a religious system).

10:30 (AM) Touch the Earth — A concert by singer-songwriter David Wiffen, from CBC Camp Fortune '74, the Ottawa summer music festival, held in the open-air stage in the Gatineau hills.

WEDNESDAY

7:03 (FM) Themes and Variations — Hosts: Harry Mannis and Karen Kieser. The program looks at the Shaw Festival-Camerata School of Music — a summer school for gifted young performers which has as its patron the eminent violinist, Yehudi Menuhin. The students are heard in some of the repertoire prepared during their two-week session. Hosts Karen Kieser and Harry Mannis talk to Tom Burrows, General Manager of the Shaw Festival and members of his staff, to Camerata and the students.

8:03 (AM) Concern — A number of Canada's poor from Halifax to Vancouver discuss the frustrations of their lot. They talk about coping with middle-class bureaucracy, endless legal hassles, high interest loans, child custody battles, social problems, inadequate housing and the psychological and physical tensions that occur when there isn't enough money. This segment of Concern was written by Alan Anderson.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — The 1974 Massey Lectures — Nostalgia for the Absolute — No. 3 — The Lost Garden: Anthropology promises a complete, rational 'Science of man'. It also sets out to elucidate the vital role of myths in the mental and social organization of human experience. In the work of Levi-Strauss, all our themes — 'mythology', the understanding of human evolution as a transcendent force, the problem of belief — are drawn together. But in the process of diagnosis, a myth of extreme power is generated. Religious-ethical aspects of the current ecology movements, communes and 'radical pastoralism'.

10:30 (AM) Country Road — Ninety minutes of the best in country and western music presented in an informative and entertaining style, combining not only country and western in the traditional manner but also the contemporary sound that has swept the country in recent years. The show will be co-hosted by Vic Mullen, one of Canada's best-known performers in the field, and by Halifax staff announcer Frank Cameron. Country Road will include interviews with top name artists, nominations for country hit of the week, and a smattering of humor weekly by Jim Bennet. The program will mainly feature recordings but from time to time live performances by Canadian artists will be heard.

THURSDAY

6:30 (FM) Opera Time — Host: Ruby Mercer. Madame Butterfly (excerpts) (Puccini) (Victoria de los Angeles, Jussi Bjoerling; Orchestra and Chorus of the Rome Opera House, conducted by Gabriele Santini). Intermission guests: Irving Guttfan, stage director; Robert Nagy, tenor.

8:03 (AM) Themes and Variations — The program looks at the Shaw Festival-Camerata School of Music — a summer school for gifted young performers which has as its patron the eminent violinist, Yehudi Menuhin. The students are heard in some of the repertoire prepared during their two-week session. Hosts Karen Kieser and Harry Mannis talk with Tom Burrows, general manager of the Shaw Festival and members of his staff, to Camerata and the students.

8:03 (FM) Encore — Women in the Attic, by ACTRA Award-winning playwright Len Peterson. This is a modernized version of the Lilith myth: Lilith was Adam's first wife, and down through the ages has represented his first love, the fallen woman, the other woman, plagued by disaster. Music is composed and conducted by Morris Surdin. The play was commissioned by Regina's Globe Theatre and staged there in 1971. Sue and Ken Kramer, directors of the Theatre, play Old Lil and Bruno, recreating their original roles. Others: Lillian (the young Lilith), Nonnie Griffin; Tom Howser, Colin Fox; Malachi the tailor, E. M. Margolese; Hank, John Scott; Mr. Dobie, Sandy Webster; Mrs. Howser, Tom's mother, Ruth Springford; Monica, Lynne Gorman; and Mary Barton, Francois Klanfer, Gillie Fenwick, Leslie Yeo, Jim Brewer, George Robertson.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — The 1974 Massey Lectures — Nostalgia for the Absolute — No. 4 — The Little Green Men: A funny look at the waves of superstition and irrationalism now engulfing us. In all these the "nostalgia" for the ancient gods and terrors verges on obsession.

10:30 (AM) Jazz Radio Canada — Concerts featuring the Paul Horn Quintet from Edmonton and the Ian McDougall Big Band from Toronto. Park two of the interview with Randy Weston. Also a profile of trumpet player Miles Davis.

FRIDAY

6:30 (FM) Radio International — Hosts: Jan Tennant and Harry Mannis. The Caretaker, by Harold Pinter, the play that made his name as a dramatist. It was his second full-length play, produced when its author was 30, in 1960, first at the Arts in London (a club theatre) and then at the Duchess. The scene is a junk-filled room. Aston takes Davies in and gives him a bed. Aston is, perhaps, mentally disturbed, and has a terrifying speech about what people did to him in a mental hospital. Aston also has a brother, Mick, with a strange sense of humour. Davies loathes all "aliens," and his language is strong, as is that of the other characters. Cast: Bill Fraser, Davies; Michael Harbour, Aston; Nigel Anthony, Mick. Produced for the BBC by Guy Vaesen.

8:03 (AM) Between Ourselves — The Politics of Sanity: The story of a group of former mental patients in Vancouver who use unorthodox methods to help the mentally ill and those recently released mental patients to readjust themselves to society. Produced in Vancouver by John Edwards, interviews by Jurgen Hesse.

9:03 (FM) The Bush and the Salon — William Henry Drummond, The Habitant Poet by R. A. Duncan, second of a two-part documentary based on the unpublished biography of Dr. Drummond written by his wife.

10:03 (FM) Ideas — The 1974 Massey Lectures — Nostalgia for the Absolute — No. 5 — Does the Truth Have a Future? Dr. Steiner asks whether the pursuit of objective truth, as it is codified in the natural sciences, will persist. Is the western-objective ideal, as it flourished since the 16th century, coming to a close, and are we entering a new phase of "religions" or pseudo-religious? Was it an illusion to believe that the human species could "live with individual death" without compensating heaven?

10:30 (AM) Major Progression — A weekly 90-minute rock music show from Winnipeg. The program will have a variety of features covering almost every aspect of the music scene and will feature to a high degree music by Canadian artists. There will be a weekly billboard of musical events with information about the major concerts across the country; reviews of new record albums; and interviews with musical personalities. The program will also have commentaries on various aspects of the music industry; record companies and publishers; and how a record is promoted to hit status. Hosts: Jim Millican and Lee Major.

TV Station Wins Award

Canada's Television Station of the Year went to British Columbia Television, based in Vancouver. C.A.B. Chairman Phillipe de Gaspe Beaubien remarked that the award was made "for the station's continued contribution to the Variety Club in Vancouver with special emphasis on its twenty hour Telethon. He added, "The judges were very impressed with the imaginative planning that British Columbia Television put into this project. The Telethon raised almost half a million dollars for handicapped children."

BCR Men Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) Shopcraft workers at British Columbia Rail walked off the job just after 8 a.m. today but a union spokesman said unions will set up picket lines only if a contract has not been agreed on by Sunday midnight.

Norm Farley, chief negotiator for the shopcrafts, said the unions are giving B.C. rail three days to come up with a better contract offer, but added picket lines will go up if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Farley said he met with management negotiators late Thursday night but no progress was made.

Some workers in Prince George began walking off the job at midnight but most other workers stayed on the job until 8 a.m., he said.

B.C. Rail employs 320 shopcraft workers in North Vancouver and Squamish and 120 in Prince George and other northern areas.

A B.C. Rail spokesman said the workers had left the job but no picket lines had been set up.

In anticipation of the walkout, B.C. Rail embargoed all shipments at midnight Thursday.

The embargo coincided with expiration of the corporation's contract with the shopcraft unions which represent carmen, firemen, oilers, machinists, electricians and pipefitters. The term of government-appointed mediator Charles Stewart also expired at midnight Thursday.

The railway operates a freight system from North Vancouver to Fort Nelson in northeastern B.C. and a passenger service to Lillooet and Prince George in central B.C.

The strike was scheduled after union spokesmen said railway negotiators refused to improve an offer of an 87-cents-an-hour pay increase.

The contract which expired at midnight had a journeyman rate of $5.79 an hour.

Farley complained the only offer the government corporation made on a seven-page fringe benefit demand was "a pair of work boots for the guys."

On Thursday a B.C. Rail spokesman denied the company withheld an offer on fringe benefits. He said that when negotiations broke off early Wednesday, the railway's offer, including wages, fringe benefits and catch-up increases for several classifications, was 19.5 per cent.

The railway spokesman said the offer would be the highest Canadian wage settlement ever for shopcrafts, $1.39 an hour higher than the wage paid for similar classifications by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

B.C. Rail also said in a statement that union demands have not moved away from the 75-per-cent wage increase and 264-per-cent increase in fringe benefits demanded when talks began July 5.

WAGES UP 14% IN YEAR

OTTAWA (CP) — Collecly-bargained wage settlements produced average annual increases of 14.5 per cent in the third quarter of this year compared with 12.7 per cent in the second quarter, the labor department reported Thursday.

Shouting Match Sees MLAs Back

By LINDA HUGHES and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

British Columbia Legislature reconvened today and immediately erupted into a shouting match across the floor as the Opposition attempted to open emergency debate on the "crises" in the forest industry.

Speaker Gordon Dowding ruled out of order the motion for debate by Opposition leader Bill Bennett and after a short 45-minute sitting, the government moved to adjourn over Opposition protests.

Three government bills and a legislative committee's report on property taxation were introduced at the morning sitting and indications were given that legislation would be introduced "within a few days" to deal with the slump in the forest industry.

The bills include a new marketing act which will give the B.C. Marketing Board new powers to exercise control over all the individual commodity marketing boards in the province. The board will be representative of the community in order to give consumers and producers the right to question and examine marketing board operations.

Labor Minister Bill King introduced a bill which will impose a collective agreement to end a two and a half year dispute between four elevator companies and the International Union of Elevator Constructors Local 82 in B.C.

An amendment bill, introduced by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, will facilitate re-organization of his department, by giving him greater signing powers and repealing an old provision that the deputy minister must be a physician.

But the focus of attention at today's sitting was the report from the municipal matters committee which was assigned to investigate real property taxation during the spring sitting of the legislature.

The report recommends property taxation assessments in 1975 remain the same as rates in 1974. The committee concluded that "it is better to live with an imperfect assessment roll" than proceed rapidly to implement actual value assessment at 100 per cent "without sufficient time to study the implications of such a move."

Legislation passed last spring introduced 100 per cent assessment of all properties in the Province and the committee's task had been to recommend a tax policy to go along with the new assessment levels.

The report, recommending a return to the old system, will be used as the basis of taxation legislation to be introduced later in the sitting. It was not signed by four committee members, Socred MLAs High Curtis (Saanich and the Islands), Alex Fraser (Cariboo), Don Phillips (South Peace River) and Liberal Allan Williams (Howe Sound).

After the bills and reports were introduced, Education Minister Eileen Dailly moved the house adjourn to 2 p.m. Monday as opposition members shouted it was time to get down to work.

"You have your homework to do for this weekend," she told them, after suggesting there was no need for emergency debate on the forest industry because legislation dealing with the slump would be brought in by the government shortly and would provide an avenue for debate.

Bennett had pressed for immediate discussion of unemployment in the industry, arguing it has reached "crises proportion."

HOUSING GRANTS $500

OTTAWA (CP) — Effective today, the government will give $500 cash grants to first-time buyers of moderately-prices houses, Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson announced in the Commons.

Maximum cost of a moderately-priced house in Victoria has been set at $38,247.

The minister said the legislation, once passed, will make the grants available for a one-year period retroactive to today.

Danson said the definition of moderately-priced houses will vary with market areas. In Regina, where prices were lower than in some areas the maximum house price qualifying under the program would be $31,580. It would be $44,915 in Toronto where housing prices were higher.

Danson said the program is designed to help families buying their first home.

"Rather than wait until legislation can pass through the House, I wish to make this benefit available to families immediately, and to remove any uncertainty on the part of home buyers or the housing industry."

The announcement was applauded by opposition parties who have pressed repeatedly for details since Parliament opened Oct. 30.

The payments are expected to cost about $2 million for the remainder of 1974 and approximately $28 million in 1975.

Angry Firemen Axe Fire Hoses

MONTREAL (UPI) — Striking firefighters turned the city of two million residents into turmoil today, defying a court injunction ordering them back to work in a cost-of-living dispute with city hall.

Only about 55 supervisory personnel were on duty to protect the city and authorities asked suburban fire departments to stand by.

Police summoned riot squads to at least three blazes in the city during the night to protect working firemen from strikers who axed hoses and stoned crews as they fought the fires.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, campaigning for re-election in a poll set for Nov. 10, said his administration would issue a major announcement on the situation this afternoon.

Drapeau's principal opponent, worker-priest Jacques Couture, accused the mayor of treating the firemen unfairly and said Drapeau's own salary had been increased 92 per cent in the past two years.

The long-smouldering Montreal Firemen's Association feud blew up Thursday night when the 2,400 firefighters began walking off their jobs, leaving only small crews made up of fire chiefs and district supervisors to cope with 10 major blazes during the night. No serious injuries were reported.

Fire department officials accused strikers of setting some of the blazes, most of which occurred in vacant buildings. Spokesman for the firemen denied responsibility and blamed it on "a pyromaniac that is playing around."

The fireman ignored a superior court injunction served at 3 a.m. today ordering them back to work. It called on association president Jean L'Abbe and his executive council to order the men back on their jobs.

But L'Abbe said he had tried and failed to persuade them return and said there was nothing the union executive could do.

"I tried," L'Abbe said. "It don't seem to work."

Provinces $1B Over Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — The 10 provinces have budgeted to spend almost $1 billion more than they take in during the current fiscal year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Provincial spending is projected to rise by 21.1 per cent during the 1974-75 fiscal year while the estimated increase in revenue is 19.8 per cent, Statistics Canada said in its annual survey of provincial budgets tabled in legislatures earlier this year.

The statistical agency has developed what it calls a "financial management system" to present balance sheets of the various government levels. The system attempts to account for the fact that governments have different budget methods.

Included in the Statistics Canada analysis are both operating expenditures and spending on capital projects, such as construction of buildings and highways. Not included are the operations of "government enterprises," such as Crown corporations and utilities.

Six provinces are responsible for the combined deficit of about $1 billion; two have

MORALE BOOST VISIT BY FORD TO NIXON

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — President Ford visited the bedside of Richard Nixon today after doctors told him it would be a great morale booster for the man Ford succeeded in office less than three months ago.

Ford broke off a barnstorming political tour briefly to go to Long Beach Memorial Hospital where the 61-year-old Nixon was still in critical condition following phlebitis surgery and a brush with death Tuesday.

The visit was the first time the two had met since Nixon resigned under fire in the Watergate scandal Aug. 9 and then was given a pardon by Ford, whom he had picked as vice-president.

Ford's call was scheduled for only 20 minutes.

White House News Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford made the decision after word from Dr. John Lungren that "the former president is in the best condition since his operation ... a visit from President Ford would be a tremendous boost for his morale."

Rich Face Tax Hike

TORONTO (UPI) — Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde Thursday warned well-off Canadians to be prepared for higher taxes to give the poor a better deal under an "incomes redistribution" program.

He said one million families — 20 per cent of the total — had incomes of less than $3,156 in 1972. About 345,000 families received less than $3,000 a year.

"This means that one-fifth of all families were required to live on incomes of less than one-half of the national average family income," he said.

"The job of governments, in the course of a social security review this fall and winter, will be to try to determine the kind of income distribution or redistribution, would be consistent with the community's values."

Lalonde admitted the decisions will be difficult.

Nanaimo Man Crash Pilot

NANAIMO (CP) — A 29-year-old native of Nanaimo was identified Thursday as the pilot of the four-engine lockheed electra owned by Pan-Arctic Oils Ltd. of Calgary that crashed Wednesday near Rea Point, N.W.T., killing 32 persons. Brian Thomson was one of those killed when the plane crashed through sea ice off Melville Island.

Treason Charged To Papadopoulos

ATHENS (UPI) — A Greek judicial council today charged former dictator George Papadopoulos and other protagonists of the 1967 military takeover with high treason, an appeals court spokesman said.

The spokesman said an official statement on the judges' decision to press treason charges would be used shortly.

First National Drops Prime Rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today lowered its prime interest rate for the third consecutive week in response to easing money and credit conditions.

The bank, second largest in the U.S., dropped its rate from 11 to 10¾ per cent, lowest for a major bank and lowest since last spring.

U.K. Trade Deficit With ECM Worsens

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's trade deficit with the European Common Market is worsening steadily and may reach a record $3.99 billion this year, an official estimate published Thursday says.

The department of trade's magazine, "Trade and Industry," says the visible trade deficit of imports over exports had widened from $314 million in 1971 to $2.73 billion last year.

Food Wastage Erupts Into Debate

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The mass wastage of food in Canada over the past few months erupted into emergency debate in the Commons Thursday amidst warnings that Canadians are eating and throwing away too much food.

Federal and provincial health authorities, farmers, ranchers and fishermen have been saying and showing that waste is becoming a distressingly commonplace fact of life in Canada. A four-hour debate, following the ritual killing of 600 calves by financially hard-pressed Quebec farmers, took place a few hours after a special Commons committee ended another day of hearings on the spoilage of 28 million eggs. (See also Page 7.)

New Democratic Party MP Max Saltsman said outside the House Thursday he is drafting a bill to present to the House of commons to make destruction of food a criminal offence.

It would provide for the jailing of Agriculture Minister Gene Whelan for his prt in the destruction of millions of surplus eggs, he declared.

The Waterloo-Cambridge MP said he is horrified at reports out of Quebec that farmers are slaughtering calves and burying them in mass graves because low returns for beef mean they can't afford to feed them.

"It's bloody immoral," he said angrily. "No matter what the reason for it."

If Whelan were found guilty under his bill he would like to see the minister thrown in jail, he added.

"If I had my way, I'd have him put behind bars," he snapped.

"Huh," said Whelan when informed of Saltsman's move. "Everybody in Canada will be in jail because we're all guilty of wasting food."

Plumptre Says 'Nonsense'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Beryl Plumptre dismissed as "nonsense" complaints that retail beef prices are too high at a time when farmers are selling cattle for less than it costs to raise them.

Current retail prices merely reflect the increased cost of feeding cattle, she said in one of two reports released today.

Although retail prices were higher now than a year ago, there is no evidence to indicate that consumers are paying too much.

In fact, Mrs. Plumptre said, beef is a bargain at current prices.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, meanwhile, stood firm on a commitment made Thursday night to hold a full-scale inquiry into the beef industry if he finds the report is unsatisfactory.

He told irate Commons questioners he has not had time to study the report in detail because it had been released only 90 minutes earlier.

He wanted to consider the board's report carefully before making a decision, he added.

Outside the House, he said he hopes inter-departmental distussion of the report will take place while he is attending a United Nations food conference in Rome next week.

According to the report, farmers are selling top-grade beef cattle for 53 cents a pound when it is costing them 57 cents a pound to raise them.

But board economist Gordon Burton, a Claresholm, Alta., rancher, suggested consumers may be paying considerably higher prices in the future.

Burton said he expects a lot of ranchers to sell off cows during the next month in an effort to reduce the size of the country's cattle herds.

The board was concerned what effect this would have on future beef supplies.

The slaughter of 600 calves in the Lac St. Jean region of Quebec "had no economic significance," he added.

Many dairy calves are killed and thrown away each year anyway.

Farmers have no use for them in their herd, particularly if they are bulls, and they do not grade as top quality veal.

It is a common practice to dispose of a number of such calves.

SUGAR UP AGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wholesale price of sugar in B.C. increased $3 a hundredweight Thursday to $54 a hundredweight.

Price increases this week totalled $5.30 a hundredweight.

Wholesale price in eastern Canada was $56.90.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young announced in Victoria Thursday that her department is conducting a study into the reasons for the increases.

She said her department has no power to control or rescind the increases, but would study the matter and present a report to the federal government.

Bill Davies, general sales manager for B.C. Sugar, said the most recent flurry in world sugar prices has been caused by reports of poor sugar beet crops in Eastern Europe.

Retail prices in lower mainland stores have not gone up as a result of the wholesale price boosts, but were expected to rise next week when current stocks run out.

An Excercise in Public Relations

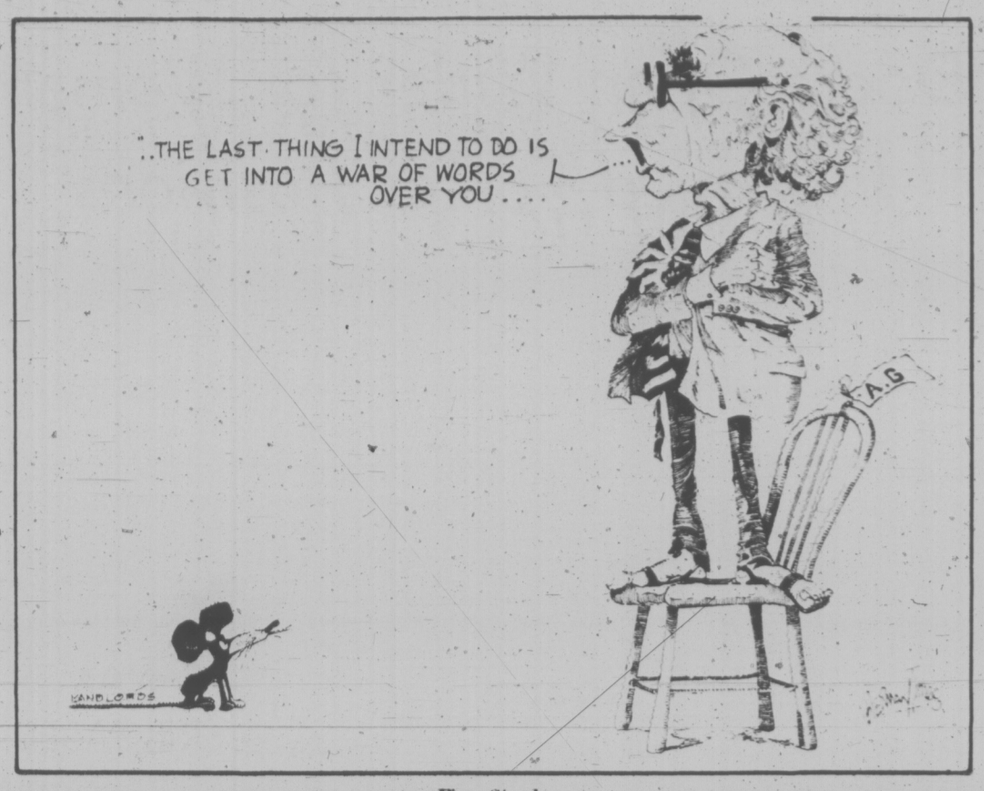
That was a cowed group of premiers who emerged from 24 Sussex Drive Wednesday after a five hour federal-provincial discussion on inflation. Only a few weeks ago the premiers, almost to a man, were harshly critical of Ottawa's loose anti-inflationary philosophy and demanded a full-blown federal-provincial conference on inflation in order to deal with pressing regional problems. Ottawa appeared about as interested in that idea as it is in wage and price controls.

But suddenly the federal mind did an about-face. Finance Minister John Turner had been out in the wild west laying a little groundwork with the feisty western premiers on resource taxation. And now Ottawa was saying yes, come down and see us, and we'll kick the problem around for one day. One day? The whole western world has been trying to come up with solutions to rampant inflation for nearly two years. The one-day Ottawa conference had a powerful odor of facile public relations. Let the boys get it off their chest, we'll toss them a few goodies and tensions will be eased all round, seemed to be the philosophy.

"Seemed" is the only word we can use because the discussions were held behind closed doors. The premiers reportedly came away brimming with confidence that the economy can be stabilized. That's very nice, but what about the people in this country who are faced with inflation every day? They are not brimming with confidence about the economy. In fact they are having a difficult time making ends meet. To have a secret meeting on a subject that concerns every person in this country is an insult to Canadians. Inflation is public business and meetings on the subject at the highest government levels should be conducted in public.

But the new sweetness and light between Ottawa and the provinces is also unnerving. Politicians with widely varying constituencies and philosophies are rarely in accord except when a problem becomes extremely grave. Yet premiers physically and philosophically as far apart as our own Dave Barrett and New Brunswick's Richard Hatfield are saying essentially the same thing: the economy is in good shape, don't worry, we'll see this thing through. A reassuring pat on the head is not enough as unemployment rises, housing starts decline by 30 per cent and B.C.'s forest industry talks of laying off 28,000 men this year.

These are not the indicators of a healthy economy. Closed meetings, paternalistic utterances and the official communique do nothing to lighten the gloom. It is time all levels of government laid it on the line, rather than staging contrived public relations exercises. From the public point of view, the one-day federal-provincial discussion was a bad joke.



Firm Stand

Privacy for Public Figures

Margaret Trudeau is certainly the most ingenuous and free-spoken of political wives to have lived at 24 Sussex Drive, the official residence of the prime minister of Canada. In an extraordinary television interview broadcast on Sunday night by CTV, she described herself as "pretty much an out-front, straight forward chick." To use a similar phrase, she let it all hang out.

At the same time, there seems to be a paradox of huge proportions buried in her revealing and sometimes touching comments on life in a fishbowl. She complained of a lack of personal freedom, of being a "prisoner" in her role, dogged by two RCMP bodyguards whenever she goes shopping.

Yet she made the complaints on television, an all-seeing, often pitiless medium of communication. Probably half the population of the country either saw the actual program which featured her as its "star attraction" or read the front-page stories in the newspapers the next day which quoted her at length.

But politicians — and politicians' wives — should remember publicity is hard to control. News coverage doesn't submit to the mechanical laws of plumbing or the sausage-making business. It can't be turned on and off like a tap; now on for election campaigns, now off for the between times. It's a bit like asking a camel to poke his head only so far into the tent and no further. Where should the line be drawn and who should draw it?

— Whet the public curiosity with candid remarks about what a wonderful guy your husband is, who also happens to be prime minister of Canada, and, understandably, there may come the reply, "Tell us more."

Mrs. Trudeau's efforts in her husband's behalf played no small part in his re-election to the highest office in the land. She became a public figure in her own right, yet shied away from any press interviews during the campaign.

She said on Sunday she is trying to decide whether to remain "just" a wife and mother or to "reach out a bit and try and do something in Canada on a more . . . professional level . . ." If Mrs. Trudeau opts for the latter she may expect more, not less, public scrutiny and interest in herself.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Save Museum

There was so much evidence of civic pride and citizens were most helpful and obliging towards their visitors.

Your provincial museum is superb as is the maritime museum, which, in both cases, are extremely fascinating and instructive.

The former of course is in perpetuity, but what of the latter? This is a most important exhibition and should be perpetuated in like manner, and every effort should be made to do this while there are dedicated and knowledgeable people around to advise.

The history of beautiful Victoria is so closely associated with the sea, the ships and the brave men who sailed them that it seems appropriate to display the city's traditions through an expanding maritime museum.

I heartily agree with the sentiments expressed by the following quotation (from Canadian Historical Review) which is featured at the provincial museum: "No self-respecting society can neglect or wantonly destroy the records of its own development without living to regret it."—Cyril L. Hume, Marine Historian, Neutral Bay, Australia.

Praise for Dave

In the Times you published a letter written by "Victoria Home-owner and O.A.P." concerning increases of assessments and taxes on his (or her?) home since 1953.

He blames the provincial government for the 300 per cent increase but forgets that assessments and municipal taxes are the responsibilities of the local municipal authority.

He was fortunate in having an increase of only 300 per cent in 21 years. My city taxes have gone up around 450 per cent since 1950, but thanks to the present provincial government I have no cause for complaint. Neither has the writer of the above letter when you examine his figures.

He states that he paid $129.32 for 1953 taxes which this year were $395.52. But he was allowed by the provincial government this year, including a special grant for those over 65 years of age, the amount of $262.95 according to the tax notice. Subtract that from his figure of $395.52 and the result is $132.57 for his 1974 city taxes. When you compare that with his 1953 taxes of $129.32 you see that he only actually paid $3.25 more this year than in 1953. Most home owners would envy him.

Instead of worrying and criticizing Premier Barrett and the provincial government he should be appreciative of his favorable tax situation as well as other benefits to us O.A.P.s like free prescribed drugs and medication, bus passes with no restrictions, Mincome, ambulance service at a low cost, $80 rental grant to tenants. These needed reforms show that the premier is well aware of O.A.P.s' problems and will help to remove or at least ease the burden.

Concerning inflation, my fellow OAP repeats a truth obvious to all on which there is no argument. When he asks: "Where will we all end?" The only reply is: "No one knows." To his other question: "When is it going to stop?" I suggest the answer is: Not until people face and accept the full facts and reject half-truths and misrepresentations. Meanwhile, thanks a lot, Dave. — W. Wood, 1518 Haultain.

CBC-CRTC Fight Brewing Over Ads and Canadian Content

By RICHARD GWYN

OTTAWA — A six-month-old confrontation between the Canadian Radio-Television Commission and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that is about to break to the surface has in it the making of a tragedy.

Pierre Juneau, chairman of the CRTC, and Laurent Picard, president of the CBC, are two of the ablest public servants in the country. Picard has taken a CBC that was moribund and demoralized and brought it back to life. Juneau probably saved Canadian broadcasting from being destroyed by the American programming that flooded in with cable television systems, and he has infused Canadian broadcasting with a sense of mission: "Either we have a country or we don't. Let's decide."

The tragedy is that Juneau and Picard now are locked in a personal battle. Unless they find a way out the broadcasting of one or other could be destroyed.

"This musn't, needn't, become a win or lose situation," says Picard. He pauses, then adds: "But I am not a loser. The CBC cannot afford to lose any more. It will kill the CBC if we go back to where anyone can kick us whenever they want to."

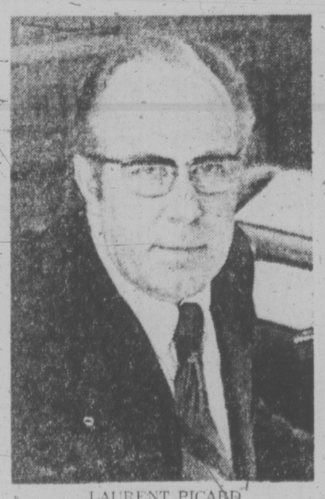
Juneau: "Our views may be wrong, but they are deeply-felt and they are there to be judged." Again a pause. "The commission has lost fights before, that is not important in itself. But let me make it clear that we cannot afford to, and do not intend to, lose too many fights."

The debate between Juneau and Picard stems from a CRTC report of last April which extended for five years — this was a formality — the CBC's licence to broadcast but, in an unprecedented step, attached "proposed conditions" to the licence renewal. The commission warned the CBC to "guard strongly against considering itself as a mass medium, and particularly against considering its audience as mass." As steps to that goal the CRTC directed the CBC to cut its advertising commercials by roughly half by 1978 and to fill prime-time starting a year from now from 8 to 9 p.m. with a minimum of 50 per cent Canadian content, compared to less than 30 per cent at the time of the report.

The report earned the CRTC its first critical reviews in half a decade, of almost unprecedented public applause for a regulatory body. Editorials denounced the CRTC for lecturing the CBC and for dictating to parliament which would have to advance extra funds to the CBC to make up for its lost ad revenues.

Since April the CBC board of directors and the commission have met once, and Picard and Juneau have met together a dozen times. Neither side has conceded an inch. In private each man speaks about the other with great bitterness.

The CBC intends to ignore the commission's directives. The CBC budget for next year, submitted to treasury board last week, makes no provision for the lost ad revenue. Although the CRTC directed the CBC to end commercials on radio by next January 1, the commercials will be carried to the end of March, at which time the CBC planned to drop them anyway.



LAURENT PICARD
. . . Juneau should read Mao

These details are trivial, and could be settled in a half-hour session between the two men. Picard, for example, agrees fully with the CRTC's goal of 50 per cent Canadian programs in prime time, but rejects the right of the CRTC to tell the CBC "how to manage the corporation."

If Juneau and Picard cannot settle their differences, then Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier will have to do it for them. "I'm just about to start finding out why nothing has happened," he told me. Pelletier is a personal friend of both men. "I'm not particularly looking forward to it, but I've told both of them that if I have to arbitrate they'll get a decision, and that'll be it." Among the innumerable ironies in the affair is that the main thing Juneau, Picard and Pelletier, all Quebeckers, are arguing about is the quality and content of English-language television.

The specific CRTC directives to the CBC are only the surface of the debate. Its substance is shaped by two competing philosophies, about the nature of public broadcasting, about the condition of Canada and about ways to achieve an excellence that both men seek. The debate is shaped also by politics and by personalities.

The starting point is the character of the two men. Neither stands alone. Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the CRTC and before that with the CBC, contributed almost as much to the controversial report as did Juneau. Picard's executives are more hawkish than he. They urged him to take the confrontation directly to parliament and the cabinet, a tactic Picard so far has refused to follow.

Few men could have less in common — their qualities are almost a reverse-image of the other's. Juneau is a lone, long-distance runner, a private, driven man who has devoted his entire life to films and to broadcasting convinced that in the flickering images on the screen lies the survival of the nation. Juneau is a poor administrator and can be brutal in his backroom dealings. Yet he has a physical presence, a quality of coiled strength, and incisive intellect that commands respect even from private broadcasters (whom he has slapped down) and something like devotion from those who work with him.

Juneau is pure Gallic, intense, logical, contained. Picard on the surface seems almost the model of an English-Canadian business executive. He's one of the best administrators in the country and this year passed up an offer to become chairman of Canadian National Railways because he thought the job lacked challenge. Picard moves from challenge to challenge and conquers them with management, with graphs, and charts and "modules," with easy self-confident humor. "Being president of the CBC is always having to say you're sorry," he once remarked. He has a candor and frankness that leaves listeners helpless to separate out artless innocence from artful calculation.

Picard is far more than a manager. Before the CRTC hearings early this year, Picard immersed himself in English-Canadian literature "to find out about the rest of the country." He once taught business administration at the University of Montreal, and used as a textbook The Revolutionary War by Mao Tse-tung. A generation of rising executives learned from that book "all there is to know about timing and about preparing your resources before you attack a target."

Picard believes Juneau should read Mao. "You can kill the CBC with exaggerated expectations just as you can kill a child's growth if you demand too much from him or her."

"Sure, I'd love to replace Maude and M.A.S.H., but you can't do that until you have the Canadian programs to replace them. We need three more years to build; then attack us for everything we have failed to do."

Picard's mood is exasperation ("if we abandon American programs now we lose our audience and there's no way parliament will fund minority network"), half-controlled anger ("the CRTC report was imprudent. No. Yes, let the word stand"), and sheer bafflement ("sure I'd like to reduce the commercials, but where's the money to come from? Commercials are simply not a priority").

PIERRE JUNEAU
. . . CBC no mass medium

Juneau's concern isn't timing. "The dates we proposed aren't important — they all can be changed," he said. (In practical terms, even if the cabinet agreed with Juneau, no money is available.) His concerns are the goals and directions of Canadian broadcasting. His eyes are on the horizon.

"There is a contradiction in the CBC that must be faced and debated. It won't go away, and it will become worse. Many of the most popular U.S. programs on the CBC are available, or could be available, on other channels (Canadian private and U.S. stations via cable TV).

"There is a contradiction between the CBC's public service pre-occupations, which are the reason for its existence, and its marketing pre-occupations, that is the link between mass audiences, certain types of imported programs and commercials." An example of the contradiction, says Juneau, is the CBC's decision to run baseball's world series instead of a Canadian Football League game.

Juneau's model for the CBC is not the U.S. Public Broadcasting System's educational network with its fragmentary audiences but Britain's BBC. "A corporation that is financed by public funds and gets marginal revenues from advertising should not be influenced so forcefully by the marginal part of its revenues," he says.

To each man's argument there is a counter-argument. U.S. programs are needed, says Picard, to build audiences for the Canadian programs that follow them. Juneau replies that it is not mass audiences that count but the combined size of smaller audiences all watching different programs.

An answer, though not a solution to the confrontation, is that either Juneau or Picard, or both, may move on to new jobs. Juneau is the more likely to stay, and become chairman of the new commission that will regulate both broadcasting and communications. His name has been suggested also as under-secretary of state, a post he almost took two years ago.

Picard told a commons committee he would "move aside for new blood in two or three years." The new blood will arrive much sooner than that and Picard's private goal is to step down next summer.

Before January a new CBC executive vice-president will be appointed to replace Lister Sinclair, who steps down to become vice-president of program innovation. Sinclair's successor will succeed Picard.

Under Picard's leadership the post of CBC president has become a plum. The search for a successor is one of the most massive undertaken. The first list contained 500 names. These now have been cut to eight. The short list includes Claude Bissell, former president of the University of Toronto; Douglas Fullerton, former chairman of the National Capital Commission; Allan Gotlieb, deputy minister of manpower and formerly of communications, and Peter Newman, editor of Maclean's magazine.

Picard in fact won't step down until both his succession and the CRTC dispute are resolved. And he's in a mood to fight: "The CBC missed the boat once. We drifted. If we do that again we're finished, and we deserve to be. We have to keep the people we've just attracted, like John Hirsch. This is life or death for us, just give us time."

Juneau's views deserve respect. The contradiction he has identified is real. The CBC cannot ride forever on the back of U.S. programming. But Picard deserves the time he pleads for.

Somewhere, just out of reach today from two proud men, must be a point where both can say to the other, "you're right."

The answer is that both men are right. Both are fighting for the CBC's survival. Picard for today, Juneau for tomorrow. Juneau's ideas are right: Picard's immediate needs are real. The difference between them finally isn't ideology, but time. And pride.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of November 1, 1914.

NAPLES — Mount Vesuvius is again in eruption and the inhabitants of the vicinity have become greatly alarmed. Special prayers were made today and processions of people went to favored shrines as a repetition of the disaster of 1906 is feared. The activity of the volcano first became manifest by deep detonations and rumblings. This was followed by gigantic columns of smoke and soon thereafter an abundant eruption of lava began. In the last serious eruption of 1906, several villages were destroyed and the property loss was estimated at $20 million. About 500 persons were killed and 50,000 were rendered homeless.

No Clear Trend At Toronto

Volume by 2 p.m. was 1.17 million shares, down from 1.42 million at the same time Thursday.

Advances outnumbered declines 150 to 133 with 184 issues unchanged.

Mercantile Bank fell ⅝ to $15⅝, Falconbridge Nickel ⅝ to $30½, Acklands ½ to $11½, Texasgulf ⅜ to $28½ and Alcan ½ to $21⅜.

Westeel-Rosco rose ⅞ to $21, Domtar ⅜ to $20½, Third Canadian General Investment ½ to $11⅞, Fairview ⅜ to $12 and Southam A ½ to $22.

Campbell Red Lake was up 1½ to $39½, McIntyre 1½ to $32 and Dome Mines 1 to $56. Pato Consolidated Gold lost 2⅜ to $8 and Pamour 1⅜ to $10½.

Pan Ocean was down ¼ to $8 and Siebens ⅛ to $7. Ranger added 2⅛ to $20.

New York

The market wavered indecisively in New York today in the face of continued declines in interest rates and counter-balancing recession worries.

Analysts said the market drew some support from a prime rate reduction by New York's First National City Bank, from 11 to 10¾ per cent effective Monday.

But there was also some evidence of concern over how deep the country's economic slump might be heading.

Diebold was the most-active NYSE issue, slipping ¼ to 13⅛. A 123,200-share block of the issue changed hands at 12⅛.

Gold stocks advanced a bit on the strength of rising world bullion prices. Homestake Mining was up 2 to 51, Dome Mines rose ⅝ to 56 and Campbell Red Lake Mines gained ¾ to 39⅞.

Montreal

Prices were generally lower in light trading at Montreal today.

Volume at 1 p.m. was 381,600 shares, compared with 244,300 shares at the same time Thursday.

Canada Forgings fell 1½ to $6½, Alcan ⅞ to $21½, Molson Industries class "A" ⅞ to $14½, Toronto-Dominion Bank ½ to $34⅛, Royal Bank ¼ to $28½, Power Corp. ⅛ to $8½, Canadian Javelin ⅛ to $8¾ and Canadian Pacific Ltd. ⅛ to $14.

London

The Financial Times index was unchanged at 197.6 in mid-session trading.

Canadian issues were fractionally lower.

$ EXCHANGE

In Victoria today purchase of U.S. funds in terms of Canadian dollars was .9790 U.S. by the Royal Bank with .9795 for cheques and .9690 for coins. Selling rates were .9895 for cheques and .9900 for cash.

Tanaka's Critics Smell Blood

By DON OBERDORFER

TOKYO (WP) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's financial dealings have slowly developed into a serious political issue following an extensive magazine report on the subject two weeks ago.

In the past several days, all four opposition parties have announced plans for their own investigations into the premier's extensive assets and lucrative operations. Several opposition lawmakers have taken the floor in parliament committee hearings to demand an official inquiry into Tanaka's tax returns.

Perhaps more serious, the premier's opponents within the ruling Liberal Democratic Party have become increasingly vocal in asking for a public accounting by the party chief. The leaders of a small group of young conservatives, the Seranak have decided to demand his resignation.

In what appears to be an effor to shore up his position, Tanaka has held a series of unusual meetings with his major allies within the party, with the presiding offices of both houses of parliament and with his predecessor in office, Eisaku Sato.

Tanaka is reported to be taking the charges and demands seriously, and after one meeting several Tokoyo newspapers published speculative reports that the premier had decided to resign. That story was denied by the chief cabinet secretary, Tanaka's senior aide and spokesman.

The Japanese daily press all but ignored the lengthy report in a widely circulated monthly Bungei Shunju, when it was published a little over two weeks ago. Tanaka initially waved away requests for comment from newsmen regularly assigned to cover him.

The magazine revealed, among other things, that Tanaka has massive financial holdings including five acres of downtown Tokyo real estate valued at $8 million, three resort villas, major stock holdings in half a dozen chemical and transportation companies and several hundred francq carp, valued at up to $3,000 each, given him by well-wishers and favor-seekers.

It also detailed some irregular-appearing dealings in government real estate, in which Tanaka apparently made several million dollars. After several foreign publications printed stories on the magazine report, which was much discussed in political circles here, the Tokyo mass-circulation dailies began giving increased coverage especially after Tanaka was forced to answer questions on the subject at a meeting with foreign correspondents Tuesday. Political reaction mounted sharply.

Even before the revelations which suggest but do not document illegality on Tanaka's part, the premier was in trouble. His foremost rival within the ruling party, Takeo Fukuda, quit the cabinet following the party's poor showing in national elections in July. Another senior factional leader, Takeo Miki, also quit the cabinet with a blast at the premier's leadership.

It is plain that they and their followers will organize a challenge at next summer's party convention, where Tanaka is expected to run for another three-year term. (Leadership of the majority-liberal Democrats is tantamount to selection as premier.)

Tanaka's public popularity has been steadily sinking, largely because of this country's serious inflation. A public-opinion poll taken a month ago by the Mainichi Shimbun reported only 18 per cent support for his administration, an all-time low for any premier since the paper began such surveys. Tanaka is so unpopular with ordinary Japanese that some of them shut off their television sets or change the channel whenever his face appears.

Nonetheless, incumbency is a great asset in Japanese politics, as in American politics, and Tanaka is by no means defenceless. He has let it be known that he plans a cabinet reshuffle in late November, and could use the bargains over reforming the cabinet to advantage within his party.

Radio Starts At Camosun

CAMO, Camosun College students' own closed-circuit radio station, starts Monday.

The station, which will be operated by a studeni radio society, will broadcast to the college cafeteria, library and counselling centre with music, discussions, interviews and campus news.

It will operate from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. each school day.

General manager of the station will be Bob Brophy, and students will take turns in the control room.

Meeting Set On Discipline

Student discipline will be the subject of a public meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. sponsored by Greater Victoria school board.

The meeting will be in the library of George Jay elementary school, 1118 Princess, and will be attended by school board trustees and administrators.

YUGOSLAVS GOING HOME

BELGRADE (WP) — In what seems to be the beginning of a new European migration precipitated by economic uncertainty, about 100,000 Yugoslav migrant workers have been forced to return home during the first eight months of this year because of layoffs and production cutbacks in the industrialized countries of Northern Europe.

Yugoslavia is one of the principal suppliers of migrant labor for Northern Europe. About a million Yugoslavs are still employed there; 60 per cent of them in West Germany.

The prospect of growing unemployment in the industrialized nations coupled with recessionary pressures had led to a drastic decline in demand for foreign labor. According to Yugoslavia's state employment office, this demand has declined more than 90 per cent from 1973.

Other main laber-exporting countries — Italy, Greece, Spain, Portugal and Turkey — are experiencing the same difficulties as Yugoslavia. Italian officials, for instance, report that tens of thousands of Italian migrant workers have returned home this year, although specific figures have not been published.

Indications are that the present trend will continue in the coming months and that this can only bring fresh difficulties to the poorer nations of Southern Europe already beset by massive inflation, high energy costs and the prospect of domestic unemployment extended beyond tolerable levels.

These countries have come to rely on the migrant labor system as a safety valve with which to relieve their serious unemployment problems. Moreover, they not only face the problem of reabsorbing the returning workers but are likely to suffer significant losses in foreign exchange.

Yugoslavia's unemployment rate has been hovering around 9 per cent, with more than 400,000 persons out of work. A massive return of the million workers employed in Western Europe would create explosive economic and social problems.

The situation is particularly serious because unemployment is high among young workers entering the labor force. Many of these workers have sought employment in Western Europe during the past year. Official unemployment official statistics, published in the weekly Ekonomska Politika, indicated that average monthly job placements of Yugoslavs in Western Europe this year was 650 workers. The average for 1973 was about 7,000.

The newspaper commented that highly skilled Yugoslavs can still find employment in Western Europe, indicating that Yugoslavia's brain drain continues. About 7,000 doctors alone have migrated to West Germany and Switzerland in the last few years. The reverse migration is also causing balance-of-payments problems.

Sea Saga Scuppered

Financial woes and ice floes have scuppered plans to put B.C. on the marine industry map.

Heavily backed by provincial funds and private industry, the schooner Arctic Dogwood left Victoria in 1973 with plans to become the first sailing ship to make the Northwest Passage west to east. The sea saga was to circle around the world.

She's now back, the fanfare muted, mission incomplete and her owner, Bob Masters is in rough financial straits.

Masters said Thursday there is a strong possibility the 53½-foot ferro-cement vessel that provincial officials once envisioned would be a "floating trade fair" for the province, will end up as a training vessel for sea cadets.

He said Bill March, president of the Victoria branch of the Navy League of Canada, sponsors of the cadet and wrenette corps, was interested in negotiating a deal.

When the Arctic Dogwood was christened in the Inner Harbor the ceremony was attended by many dignitaries, including Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk who dubbed the boat "Chatelaine of government." The traditional bottle of champagne was cracked over her bow by the wife of Lieutenant-Governor Walter Owen.

In contrast, there was nobody on hand when the Arctic Dogwood returned in late August, Masters having decided to call the venture off because of unusually heavy ice conditions.

He said he had made the decision to return when the schooner was tied up at Dutch Harbor in the Bering Sea.

"The ice was absolutely impenetrable," he said, "stretching for 220 miles."

He said the Arctic Dogwood Society, formed so that the provincial government could offer financial input to the venture, had now been dissolved.

When in existence, it had on its directorate such notables as deputy economic development minister Les Hempsall (the department had chipped in with $25,000 in cash), provincial secretary Laurie Wallace, Herbert Buchanan of Vancouver, regional director of ministry of transport's Pacific marine services, and Rear-Admiral Dick Leir.

The society had sold memberships on the understanding members would receive a photographic reproduction of the ship's log after she had made the final leg into Halifax.

Garden Plots Of 'Beautiful Dirt' to Rent

The project is modelled on the 160-plot operation run by the provincial department of agriculture near Saanich's municipal hall.

Plots were rented all summer to people who had no access to other land, giving them a chance to raise their own vegetables and flowers.

"They've had a marvellous summer out there," said Hilda Beastall, Times garden columnist who pushed the government to start the project.

Gardeners ranged in age from 18 to 80, she said.

Nelson has pensioners in mind for the plots on Torquay, and said Friday, "let's get some of these people out of their apartments."

Twelve of the 90 gardens, each measuring 20 by 30 feet, are already rented for next season.

Price is a minimal $15 per plot per season, and that price inclues the cost of water used.

$80,000 FOR COVE IN GORGE

Saanich will receive $80,000 from the provincial government to spend on beautification of the Bathhouse Cove area of the Gorge at Gorge Road and Tillicum.

The municipality has been notified by Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace that the money will come from Capital Improvement District Commission funds.

Municipal administrator Bill Tremayne said today most of the money will probably be spent on reforesting the area between Gorge Road and the waterfront.

Tremayne said that an ecologist with Associated Engineering Services Ltd., the company that made a study of the area for Saanich in 1973, had warned that the trees in the area are dying because of changes made through sewering and other work.

NEW PRESIDENT of the 2,000-member Canadian Institute of Forestry is Victoria's William Young, assistant chief forester of resource management in the B.C. Forest Service headquarters. Young's 25-year career began in Victoria where he first worked on forest surveys.

Bargaining To Continue

Bargaining representatives for 1,100 B.C. civil servants have agreed to resume negotiations with the public service commission Nov. 7 following rejection of a proposed agreement last week.

Talks are on behalf of the administrative, fiscal and regulatory component of the B.C. Government Employees Union, whose executive met this week to decide what steps to follow in view of rejection of the government's proposal.

ARRESTED WITH KNIVES

Two Girls Rob Goblin

☆☆☆

Victoria Times
FRIDAY, NOV. 1, 1974 21
SECOND SECTION

A 12-year-old boy trick or treating in the Carey Road-Kent area was held up at knifepoint by two 13-year-old girls at 7 p.m. Thursday.

The girls threatened him, took $2 from his pocket and ran off with a UNICEF can containing $5.67 which he had strung around his neck.

Saanich police later recovered the money and arrested the two girls and a 14-year-old girl accomplice. The trio will appear in juvenile court today, two charged with robbery, the other with possession of stolen property.

Police said they seized two kitchen knives the girls were carrying.

The incident was the most serious Halloween happening in the greater Victoria area. Most police departments reported the night was less eventful than the usual Halloween night.

The situation was different in Courtenay, however. There, pranksters are blamed for setting a fire at McConochie's Furniture and Appliance store causing damage estimated at several hundred thousand dollars.

Two blocks from the fire, at the Civic Centre complex, about 200 youths hurled shrubs and plants at passing cars while across the street eggs and tomatoes were thrown.

A group of about 60 youths splattered cars and stores in Cordova Bay. Isolated incidents were also reported in Victoria and Colwood.

In Esquimalt four fire hydrants were opened but quickly turned off. Shutting off hydrants kept Sidney and Victoria firemen busy for a time as well, but in all cases no damage resulted.

Two children, trick or treating in the area of Piercy and Ardwell, Sidney, found razor blades in apples given them, but this activity was down from former years.

Some Treats 'Sabotaged'

Three cases of sabotaged treats were reported in Victoria — two in the James Bay area where a four-year-old youngster received an apple containing three pins and an 11-year-old boy got a candy bar with a large pin in it. The other was in the Hillside area where a child was given a candy coated with nail polish.

Victoria firemen were called to the Colony Motor Inn after a smoke bomb exploded in the men's washroom at about 9:45 p.m.

Four 15-year-old boys used the night's confusion to break out of the juvenile detention home. A Victoria youth detail spokesman said the boys smashed a window early in the evening to make their escape. They are still at large.

In Sooke and Central Saanich, police and firemen had as quiet a halloween as any could remember.

In Oak Bay, where a man reported a "foolish experiment" with human nature showed that trick or treaters are thoughtful and unselfish.

Gerry Elliott was faced with a dilemma. He had to go to night school at 7 p.m. but had no one to call upon to hand out treats to tiny goblins tripping up the walk to his home.

He said he decided to conduct a "foolish experiment" and strung out 12 packages of raisins on his front door step of his Oak Bay home.

When he returned at 9:30 p.m., seven had been taken and the five neatly left behind . . . apparently for other callers.

Navy Diver Recovering

AB David Lemieux, who is at the National Defence Medical Centre, is making excellent progess in regaining the use of his limbs — far ahead of normal expectations, medical specialists say.

He is climbing stairs with a minimal amount of assistance. He will soon be driving a car, at first using hand controls, although doctors expect he will eventually be able to drive a normal car.

"David Lemieux's positive attitude and determination have been major factors in his recovery," said Capt. D. J. Kidd, senior surgeon of Maritime Forces Pacific, who was responsible for the diver's initial treatment, adding they serve as a "model to others having the same experience."

He and another diver had been examining the Provider's anchor cable when Lemieux blacked out at about 50 feet.

His companion didn't notice and Lemieux sank to the ocean floor, a depth of about 180 feet.

He spent more than 24 hours in a recompression chamber before being rushed to hospital.

Lemieux is using his spare time in Ottawa improving his education, knowing there are still many hard months ahead but confident he will eventually lead a full life.

Not So Sick But No Place to Go

More than 10 per cent of beds at Victoria General Hospital are occupied by patients who don't need the $90-a-day care there but have no place ELSE TO GO.

Executive director Jim Fair told the hospital's board Thursday night there were 47 patients needing only extended or intermediate care in the 428-bed acute care hospital at mid-October.

Where extended care beds are available, care for these kinds of patients is provided for about a third the cost of looking after acute care patients.

Directors decided to send Health Minister Dennis Cocke a monthly report on the number of acute care beds occupied by patients needing less expensive care.

The pressure for acute care beds was underlined by a report that the waiting list for elective (not urgent) surgery has climbed from 745 a year ago to 902, despite the hospital's maximum use of day-care surgery, an early discharge program and daily case reviews.

Patients are admitted and discharged from hospital the same day under the day-care surgery program. Nursing in the home is provided to send patients home sooner under the early discharge project. Case reviews by doctors are conducted to ensure patients don't stay in hospital longer than they need to.

While all these steps have helped, there's a need not only for more acute care beds but for a major modernizing of existing facilities, said Dr. Jim Duxbury, the hospital's chief of staff.

Directors also heard about continuing problems plaguing expansion of the hospital's extensive care unit, which is being updated and enlarged from four to eight beds.

Telemetry equipment ordered in the spring is now expected to arrive from the U.S. later this month. Wiring in the unit has been replaced for a second time, but is still showing some current leakage. There are problems with the flooring and air conditioning will have to be adjusted.

Board chairman Art Saunders said these probelms occur again and again when an architect charged with overseeing work does not have a local office. The board hired a Vancouver architect for a $13,000 fee.

The ICU, which provides care for critically ill patients, was to have opened in September and may now open later this month.

Transplants Successful

Kidneys taken at Victoria General Hospital last July from a youth killed in a traffic accident have been used in two successful transplants, the hospital's board learned Thursday night.

A Vancouver surgeon wrote the board to compliment the hospital staff on its assistance in the procedure.

He said he came to Victoria General to assist in removing the kidneys from the 19-year-old donor.

The transplants were completed in Vancouver within 12 hours and the recipients were two young men in chronic renal failure who were not doing too well on artificial kidney machines.

The transplanted kidneys have functioned well and both recipients "are enjoying a better quality of life," the surgeon wrote.

Prospectors Again Pouring Into Yukon

WHITEHORSE, Yukon Territory (NYT) Prospectors are again pouring into the Yukon, scene of the fabled Klondike gold rush of 1898. Using helicopters where the old-time sourdoughs slogged through the Northern wilds on foot, today's scientific mineral hunters are opening up vast new areas for mining development.

Mining people are talking in bigger figures than anyone has heard here in many years.

At the turn of the century, when gold fever was at its height in the Yukon, the output from the Klondike reached $20 million a year, a fabulous figure for the time. By last year, with many sites abandoned, production had slipped to less than $400,000 in the cheapened money of the 1970's.

With the price of gold now four to five times what it was a few years ago, the decline in activity has abruptly reversed. In the first five months this year, the number of claims registered in the Yukon climbed 55 per cent above the figure for the corresponding period last year.

"There's hardly a creek that ever produced gold where someone isn't out taking another look," a mining executive said recently.

However, the biggest action in the Yukon today is in lesser minerals like copper, lead, zinc and tungsten.

The investment in the Yukon for mineral exploration is expected to reach $13 million this year, nearly three times the $4.5 million spent in 1973, according to official estimates.

Encouraged by indications of substantial deposits of lead, zinc, copper, tungsten and other metals, besides gold and silver, more than 100 companies are involved, including most of the major mining corporations in North America.

The new mining activity and a growing tourist industry — 311,000 visitors, mostly Americans, spent $25-million in the territory last year, making tourism second to mining — have contributed to making the Yukon "the most affluent part of Canada," declared an official.

The population of about 20,000, including 5,000 to 6,000 Indians, has the highest per-capita income in the country. A survey in January showed that average weekly earnings were $279.31, compared with a national average of $216.86.

BCR Men Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) Shopcraft workers at British Columbia Rail walked off the job just after 8 a.m. today but a union spokesman said unions will set up picket lines only if a contract has not been agreed on by Sunday midnight.

Norm Farley, chief negotiator for the shopcrafts, said the unions are giving B.C. rail three days to come up with a better contract offer, but added picket lines will go up if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Farley said he met with management negotiators late Thursday night but no progress was made.

Some workers in Prince George began walking off the job at midnight but most other workers stayed on the job until 8 a.m., he said.

B.C. Rail employs 320 shopcraft workers in North Vancouver and Squamish and 120 in Prince George and other northern areas.

A B.C. Rail spokesman said the workers had left the job but no picket lines had been set up.

In anticipation of the walkout, B.C. Rail embargoed all shipments at midnight Thursday.

The embargo coincided with expiration of the corporation's contract with the shopcraft unions which represent carmen, firemen, oilers, machinists, electricians and pipefitters. The term of government-appointed mediator Charles Stewart also expired at midnight Thursday.

The railway operates a freight system from North Vancouver to Fort Nelson in northeastern B.C. and a passenger service to Lillooet and Prince George in central B.C.

The strike was scheduled after union spokesmen said railway negotiators refused to improve an offer of an 87-cents-an-hour pay increase.

The contract which expired at midnight had a journeyman rate of $5.79 an hour.

Farley complained the only offer the government corporation made on a seven-page fringe-benefit demand was "a pair of work boots for the guys."

On Thursday a B.C. Rail spokesman denied the company withheld an offer on fringe benefits. He said that when negotiations broke off early Wednesday, the railway's offer, including wages, fringe benefits and catch-up increases for several classifications, was 19.5 per cent.

The railway spokesman said the offer would be the highest Canadian wage settlement ever for shopcrafts — $1.39 an hour higher than the wage paid for similar classifications by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

B.C. Rail also said in a statement that union demands have not moved away from the 75-per-cent wage increase and 264-per-cent increase in fringe benefits demanded when talks began July 5.

WAGES UP 14% IN YEAR

OTTAWA (CP) Collectively-bargained wage settlements produced average annual increases of 14.5 per cent in the third quarter of this year compared with 12.7 per cent in the second quarter, the labor department reported Thursday.

Shouting Match Sees MLAs Back

By LINDA HUGHES and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The B.C. Legislature reconvened today and immediately erupted into a shouting match across the floor as the Opposition attempted to open emergency debate on the "crisis" in the forest industry.

Speaker Gordon Dowding ruled out of order the motion for debate by Opposition leader Bill Bennett and after a short 45-minute sitting, the government moved to adjourn over Opposition protests.

Three government bills and a legislative committee's report on property taxation were introduced at the morning sitting and indications were given that legislation would be introduced "within a few days" to deal with the slump in the forest industry.

The bills include a new marketing act which will give the B.C. Marketing Board new powers to exercise control over all the individual commodity marketing boards in the province. The board will be representative of the community in order to give consumers and producers the right to question and examine marketing board operations.

Labor Minister Bill King introduced a bill which will impose a collective agreement to end a two and a half year dispute between four elevator companies and the International Union of Elevator Constructors Local 82 in B.C.

An amendment bill, introduced by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, will facilitate re-organization of his department, by giving him greater signing powers and repealing an old provision that the deputy minister must be a physician.

But the focus of attention at today's sitting was the report from the municipal matters committee which was assigned to investigate real property taxation during the spring sitting of the legislature.

The report recommends property taxation assessments in 1975 remain the same as rates in 1974. The committee concluded that "it is better to live with an imperfect assessment roll" than proceed rapidly to implement actual value assessment at 100 per cent "without sufficient time to study the implications of such a move."

Legislation passed last spring introduced 100 per cent assessment of all properties in the Province and the committee's task had been to recommend a tax policy to go along with the new assessment levels.

The report, recommending a return to the old system, will be used as the basis of taxation legislation to be introduced later in the sitting. It was not signed by four committee members, Socred MLAs Hugh Curtis (Saanich and the Islands), Alex Fraser (Cariboo), Don Phillips (South Peace River) and Liberal Allan Williams (Howe Sound).

After the bills and reports were introduced, Education Minister Eileen Dailly moved the house adjourn to 2 p.m. Monday as opposition members shouted it was time to get down to work.

"You have your homework to do for this weekend," she told them, after suggesting there was no need for emergency debate on the forest industry because legislation dealing with the slump would be brought in by the government shortly, and would provide an avenue for debate.

Bennett had pressed for immediate discussion of unemployment in the industry, arguing it has reached "crisis" proportion."

HOUSING GRANTS $500

OTTAWA (CP) — Effective today, the government will give $500 cash grants to first-time buyers of moderately-prices houses, Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson announced in the Commons.

Maximum cost of a moderately-priced house in Victoria has been set at $38,247.

The minister said the legislation, once passed, will make the grants available for a one-year period retroactive to today.

Danson said the definition of moderately-priced houses will vary with market areas. In Regina, where prices were lower than in some areas the maximum house price qualifying under the program would be $31,580. It would be $44,915 in Toronto where housing prices were higher.

Danson said the program is designed to help families buying their first home.

"Rather than wait until legislation can pass through the House, I wish to make this benefit available to families immediately, and to remove any uncertainty on the part of home buyers or the housing industry."

The announcement was applauded by opposition parties who have pressed repeatedly for details since Parliament opened Oct. 30.

The payments are expected to cost about $2 million for the remainder of 1974 and approximately $28 million in 1975.

Angry Firemen Axe Fire Hoses

MONTREAL (UPI) Striking firefighters turned the city of two million residents into turmoil today, defying a court injunction ordering them back to work in a cost-of-living dispute with city hall.

Only about 55 supervisory personnel were on duty to protect the city and authorities asked suburban fire departments to stand by.

Police summoned riot squads to at least three blazes in the city during the night to protect working firemen from strikers who axed hoses and stoned crews as they fought the fires.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, campaigning for re-election in a poll set for Nov. 10, said his administration would issue a major announcement on the situation this afternoon.

Drapeau's principal opponent, worker-priest Jacques Couture, accused the mayor of treating the firemen unfairly and said Drapeau's own salary had been increased 92 per cent in the past two years.

The long-smouldering Montreal Firemen's Association feud blew up Thursday night when the 2,400 firefighters began walking off their jobs, leaving only small crews made up of fire chiefs and district supervisors to cope with 10 major blazes during the night. No serious injuries were reported.

Fire department officials accused strikers of setting some of the blazes, most of which occurred in vacant buildings. Spokesman for the firemen denied responsibility and blamed it on "a pyromaniac that is playing around."

The fireman ignored a superior court injunction served at 3 a.m. today ordering them back to work. It called on association president Jean L'Abbe and his executive council to order the men back on their jobs.

But L'Abbe said he had tried and failed to persuade them return and said there was nothing the union executive could do.

"I tried," L'Abbe said. "It don't seem to work."

Provinces $1B Over Budget

OTTAWA (CP) The 10 provinces have budgeted to spend almost $1 billion more than they take in during the current fiscal year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Provincial spending is projected to rise by 21.1 per cent during the 1974-75 fiscal year while the estimated increase in revenue is 10.8 per cent, Statistics Canada said in its annual survey of provincial budgets tabled in legislatures earlier this year.

The statistical agency has developed what it calls a "financial management system" to present balance sheets of the various government levels. The system attempts to account for the fact that governments have different budget methods.

Included in the Statistics Canada analysis are both operating expenditures and spending on capital projects, such as construction of buildings and highways. Not included are the operations of "government enterprises," such as Crown corporations and utilities.

Six provinces are responsible for the combined deficit of about $1 billion; two have

MORALE BOOST VISIT BY FORD TO NIXON

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) President Ford visited the bedside of Richard Nixon today after doctors told him it would be a great morale booster for the man Ford succeeded in office less than three months ago.

Ford broke off a barnstorming political tour briefly to go to Long Beach Memorial Hospital where the 61-year-old Nixon was still in critical condition following phlebitis surgery and a brush with death Tuesday.

The visit was the first time the two had met since Nixon resigned under fire in the Watergate scandal Aug. 9 and then was given a pardon by Ford, whom he had picked as vice-president.

Ford's call was scheduled for only 20 minutes.

White House News Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford made the decision after word from Dr. John Lungren that "the former president is in the best condition since his operation a visit from President Ford would be a tremendous boost for his morale."

Rich Face Tax Hike

TORONTO (UPI) Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde Thursday warned well-off Canadians to be prepared for higher taxes to give the poor a better deal under an "incomes redistribution" program.

He said one million families — 20 per cent of the total — had incomes of less than $5,156 in 1972. About 345,000 families received less than $3,000 a year.

"This means that one-fifth of all families were required to live on incomes of less than one-half of the national average family income," he said.

"The job of governments, in the course of a social security review this fall and winter, will be to try to determine what kind of income distribution, or redistribution, would be consistent with the community's values."

Lalonde admitted the decisions will be difficult.

NEWS BRIEFS

Air Canada, Pilots Reach Pact

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada announced today that it has reached a tentative agreement with its 1,500 pilots, who voted for a strike earlier in the week.

An Air Canada spokesman said the pact was hammered out during four days of talks following a 91 per cent strike vote Monday by members of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association.

Nanaimo Man Crash Pilot

NANAIMO (CP) — A 29-year-old native of Nanaimo was identified Thursday as the pilot of the four-engine Lockheed Electra owned by Pan-Arctic Oils Ltd. of Calgary that crashed Wednesday near Rea Point, N.W.T., killing 32 persons. Brian Thomson was one of those killed when the plane crashed through sea ice off Melville Island.

Treason Charged To Papadopoulos

ATHENS (UPI) — A Greek judicial council today charged former dictator George Papadopoulos and other protagonists of the 1967 military takeover with high treason, an appeals court spokesman said.

The spokesman said an official statement on the judges' decision to press treason charges would be used shortly.

First National Drops Prime Rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today lowered its prime interest rate for the third consecutive week in response to easing money and credit conditions.

The bank, second largest in the U.S., dropped its rate from 11 to 10¼ per cent, lowest for a major bank and lowest since last spring.

Food Wastage Erupts Into Debate

Times News Services

OTTAWA—The mass wastage of food in Canada over the past few months erupted into emergency debate in the Commons Thursday amidst warnings that Canadians are eating and throwing away too much food.

Federal and provincial health authorities, farmers, ranchers and fishermen have been saying and showing that waste is becoming a distressingly commonplace fact of life in Canada. A four-hour debate, following the rittual killing of 600 calves by financially hard-pressed Quebec farmers, took place a few hours after a special Commons committee ended another day of hearings on the spoilage of 28 million eggs. (See also Page 7.)

New Democratic Party MP Max Saltsman said outside the House Thursday he is drafting a bill to present to the House of Commons to make destruction of food a criminal offence.

The Waterloo-Cambridge MP said he is horrified at reports out of Quebec that farmers are slaughtering calves and burying them in mass graves because low returns for beef mean they can't afford to feed them.

"It's bloody immoral," he said angrily. "No matter what the reason for it."

If Whelan were found guilty under his bill he would like to see the minister thrown in jail, he added.

"If I had my way, I'd have him put behind bars," he snapped.

"Huh," said Whelan when informed of Saltsman's move, "everybody in Canada will be in jail because we're all guilty of wasting food."

Plumptre Says 'Nonsense'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Beryl Plumptre dismissed as "nonsense" complaints that retail beef prices are too high at a time when farmers are selling cattle for less than it costs to raise them.

Current retail prices merely reflect the increased cost of feeding cattle, she said in one of two reports released today.

Although retail prices were higher now than a year ago, there is no evidence to indicate that consumers are paying too much.

In fact, Mrs. Plumptre said, beef is a bargain at current prices.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, meanwhile, stood firm on a commitment made Thursday night to hold a full-scale inquiry into the beef industry if he finds the report is unsatisfactory.

He told irate Commons questioners he has not had time to study the report in detail because it had been released only 90 minutes earlier.

He wanted to consider the board's report carefully before making a decision, he added.

Outside the House he said he hopes inter-departmental discussion of the report will take place while he is attending a United Nations food conference in Rome next week.

According to the report, farmers are selling top-grade beef cattle for 53 cents a pound when it is costing them 57 cents a pound to raise them.

But board economist Gordon Burton, a Claresholm, Alta., rancher, suggested consumers may be paying considerably higher prices in the future.

Burton said he expects a lot of ranchers to sell off cows during the next month in an effort to reduce the size of the country's cattle herds.

The board was concerned what effect this would have on future beef supplies.

The slaughter of 600 calves in the Lac St. Jean region of Quebec "had no economic significance," he added.

Many dairy calves are killed and thrown away each year anyway.

Farmers have no use for them in their herd, particularly if they are bulls, and they do not grade as top quality veal.

It is a common practice to dispose of a number of such calves.

SUGAR UP AGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wholesale price of sugar in B.C. increased $3 a hundredweight Thursday to $54 a hundredweight.

Price increases this week totalled $5.30 a hundredweight.

Wholesale price in eastern Canada is $56.90.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young announced in Victoria Thursday that her department is conducting a study into the reasons for the increases.

She said her department has no power to control or rescind the increases, but would study the matter and present a report to the federal government.

Bill Davies, general sales manager for B.C. Sugar, said the most recent flurry in world sugar prices has been caused by reports of poor sugar beet crops in Eastern Europe.

Retail prices in lower mainland stores have not gone up as a result of the wholesale price boosts, but were expected to rise next week when current stocks run out.

Shrubbery 'Neglect' Irks City

The city will crack down on parking lot owners who are not conforming to the spirit of the city's beautification bylaw, says parks committee chairman Ald. Malcolm Anderson.

Hundreds of shrubs in planters installed to screen parking lots in downtown Victoria died because they were neglected, Anderson said.

"We are disappointed," he said. "The city will press the owners to maintain their screening plants."

He was commenting on complaints that a good beautification idea is going down the drain.

The city issues permits for the operation of parking lots on an annual basis but on the understanding the owners will landscape.

Jack Robbins, manager of Robbins Parking Service Ltd., which manages several parking lots, said his firm maintained the screening plants.

"I think many of the plants died because they were planted at the wrong time of the year — in the spring of 1973," he said. "They did well the first year, but couldn't take on the second. The shrubs should have been planted in fall."

"We watered the plants," he said. "But that didn't seem to do any good."

He said some shrubs were also stolen.

It cost $175 per planter to purchase and install the shrubs. There are two planters to each parking lot.

Clift Bate, parks administrator, said many of the shrubs died because of the lack of attention.

"We don't have any trouble with our planters," he observed. "That is because we look after them."

Frank Snopek, manager-owner of Appollo Cement Products, makers of the planters, said he offered to maintain the shrubs for a nominal fee.

"But the lot owners thought they could do it themselves," he said. "They believed it would be more economical to do it this way."

CRASH PROBE OPENS

EDMONTON (CP) — Coroner Walter England of Yellowknife started an investigation Thursday at the Rea Point Camp 1,600 miles north of Edmonton into the crash of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. aircraft which took 32 lives early Wednesday.

England is no stranger to plane crashes in the remote Arctic regions. He was the coroner who conducted the inquest early in 1973 into the crash of an aircraft piloted by Marten Hartwell. Hartwell survived a 32-day ordeal before being rescued. An English nurse and two Eskimo patients died in the crash of the twin-engine Beechcraft after it strayed 180 miles off course Nov. 8, 1972.

Following is a list of crash victims:

Neil Rogers of Calgary; George Cameron MacLeod of Halifax; Lindsay James Farrell of Calgary; D. Larry Clarke of Edmonton; Ronald Diebert of Grimshaw, Alta.; Paul Guir of Edmonton; Howard Cazaly of Edmonton; Robert Goble of Barrhead, Alta.; Brian Jamieson of Calgary; Stanley Schrauwen of Bashaw, Alta.; Morris Antonation of Brandon, Man.; Wilfred Hoffman of Flatbush, Alta.; Gerald Robertson of Edmonton.

Glen Kelliher of Iron River, Alta.; Chris Killeen of High Prairie, Alta., Hohn Cooper of Calgary; Roy Erickson of Leduc, Alta.; Vernon Adamcik of Calgary; Alvin Desjarlais of Edmonton; George Bremner of Edmonton; Thurston Harrison of Edmonton; Michael Arnatsiaq of Arctic Bay, N.W.T.; Earl Bennett of Kimberley, B.C.; Adam Allan McPhee of Edmonton; Leonard Huff of Edmonton; Joachim Wilhelm Redeker of Edmonton; Peter Mather of Toronto; Raymond Gamblin of Edmonton; Brian Thomson of Leduc, Alta.; Darrell Lamson Petten of Wetaskiwin, Alta.; and Gordon William Slater of Edmonton.

Indian Report 'Hidden'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government has been suppressing a comprehensive, 39-page report on Indian land claims, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said Wednesday.

The union said the report recommends B.C. enter into negotiations with the federal government on aboriginal title claims and that certain lands be returned to Indians without delay.

In releasing an unofficial version the union said Human Resources Minister Norman Levi received the report Feb. 15. It was based on research done under former minister-without-portfolio Frank Calder who was dismissed from cabinet in July, 1973. It was written by Reg Kelly, Calder's executive assistant, who remained a provincial employee after Calder's dismissal.

Kelly has since resigned and now works for the federal Indian affairs department.

The report is considered significant because Levi said in a June policy statement — four months after receiving the report — that the province considers Indian land claims a federal matter and will not enter into negotiations.

Levi said Thursday the government is "sticking to that position."

"Everything mentioned in the report has been covered by the government one way or another," he said.

He reiterated he's ready to meet Indian representatives "to come up with an agenda and work out a range of issues."

Union spokesman Lou Demerais praised the report's land claims position but was critical of the lack of consultation with native people in its preparation.

Anderson 'Misled' Press—MLA

VANCOUVER (CP) — MLA Colin Gabelmann, chairman of the select standing committee on labor and justice Thrusday accused committee member David Anderson of misleading the press during recent public hearings.

Gabelmann (NDP — North Vancouver-Seymour) made his angry remark after Liberal Leader Anderson (L—Victoria), claimed the committee has never heard from a "bonafide" domestic worker.

Gabelmann challenged Anderson, claiming the committee has heard from several domestics during interior hearings.

"Some members of this committee have been misleading the press for some time," Gabelmann said.

However, Anderson said the domestics were from a government homemakers service rather than from the private field.

In the brief, the commission argued that labor legislation protection should be extended to domestic and agricultural workers.

Dave Werlin, first vice-president of the British Columbia division of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, called for an examination of poor wages and conditions for seasonal fruit and berry pickers as well as conditions of Chinese women working in what he called the "lower mainland marketing gardens" and agriculture work in which native Indians are employed.

"We can see no reason why seasonal workers should be exempt from the protection of the province's labor legislation so that some unscrupulous employers may exploit them at will," he said.

Werlin said that arguments that such protection would raise consumr costs are invalid because the middlemen are making the real profit.

"The unfortunate situation is that what the consumer pays has little relation to what the farmer gets."

"If wages of farm laborers are improved this need not necessarily increase prices to the consumer or mean less return for the farmer," he said. "The additional costs could easily be absorbed and should be absorbed by the big middlemen who today are making the highest profits in their history by exploiting both farmers and consumers to the limit."

TUB RACING IN SNOW PROPOSED

COURTENAY — Bathtub racing in the snow has been suggested as a feature of this year's winter carnival at Forbidden Plateau.

Mayors of local municipalities should be asked to participate, he said.

BCR Men Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) Shopcraft workers at British Columbia Rail walked off the job just after 8 a.m. today but a union spokesman said unions will set up picket lines only if a contract has not been agreed on by Sunday midnight.

Norm Farley, chief negotiator for the shopcrafts, said the unions are giving B.C. rail three days to come up with a better contract offer, but added picket lines will go up if the dispute is not resolved during the weekend.

Farley said he met with management negotiators late Thursday night but no progress was made.

Some workers in Prince George began walking off the job at midnight but most other workers stayed on the job until 8 a.m., he said.

B.C. Rail employs 320 shopcraft workers in North Vancouver and Squamish and 120 in Prince George and other northern areas.

A B.C. Rail spokesman said the workers had left the job but no picket lines had been set up.

In anticipation of the walkout, B.C. Rail embargoed all shipments at midnight Thursday.

The embargo coincided with expiration of the corporation's contract with the shopcraft unions which represent carmen, firemen, oilers, machinists, electricians and pipefitters. The term of government-appointed mediator Charles Stewart also expired at midnight Thursday.

The railway operates a freight system from North Vancouver to Fort Nelson in northeastern B.C. and a passenger service to Lillooet and Prince George in central B.C.

The strike was scheduled after union spokesmen said railway negotiators refused to improve an offer of an 87-cents-an-hour pay increase.

The contract which expired at midnight had a journeyman rate of $5.79 an hour.

Farley complained the only offer the government corporation made on a seven-page fringe benefit demand was "a pair of work boots for the guys."

On Thursday a B.C. Rail spokesman denied the company withheld an offer on fringe benefits. He said that when negotiations broke off early Wednesday, the railway's offer, including wages, fringe benefits and catch-up increases for several classifications, was 19.5 per cent.

The railway spokesman said the offer would be the highest Canadian wage settlement ever for shopcrafts — $1.39 an hour higher than the wage paid for similar classifications by Canadian National Railways and CP Rail.

B.C. Rail also said in a statement that union demands have not moved away from the 75-per-cent wage increase and 264-per-cent increase in fringe benefits demanded when talks began July 5.

WAGES UP 14% IN YEAR

OTTAWA (CP) — Collectively-bargained wage settlements produced average annual increases of 14.5 per cent in the third quarter of this year compared with 12.7 per cent in the second quarter, the labor department reported Thursday.

Shouting Match Sees MLAs Back

By LINDA HUGHES and KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The B.C. Legislature reconvened today and immediately erupted into a shouting match across the floor as the Opposition attempted to open emergency debate on the "crisis" in the forest industry.

Speaker Gordon Dowding ruled out of order the motion for debate by Opposition leader Bill Bennett and after a short 45-minute sitting, the government moved to adjourn over Opposition protests.

Three government bills and a legislative committee's report on property taxation were introduced at the morning sitting and indications were given that legislation would be introduced "within a few days" to deal with the slump in the forest industry.

The bills include a new marketing act which will give the B.C. Marketing Board new powers to exercise control over all the individual commodity marketing boards in the province. The board will be representative of the community in order to give consumers and producers the right to question and examine marketing board operations.

Labor Minister Bill King introduced a bill which will impose a collective agreement to end a two and a half year dispute between four elevator companies and the International Union of Elevator Constructors Local 82 in B.C.

An amendment bill, introduced by Health Minister Dennis Cocke, will facilitate re-organization of his department, by giving him greater signing powers and repealing an old provision that the deputy minister must be a physician.

But the focus of attention at today's sitting was the report from the municipal matters committee which was assigned to investigate real property taxation during the spring sitting of the legislature.

The report recommends property taxation assessments in 1975 remain the same as rates in 1974. The committee concluded that "it is better to live with an imperfect assessment roll" than proceed rapidly to implement actual value assessment at 100 per cent "without sufficient time to study the implications of such a move."

Legislation passed last spring introduced 100 per cent assessment of all properties in the Province and the committee's task had been to recommend a tax policy to go along with the new assessment levels.

The report, recommending a return to the old system, will be used as the basis of taxation legislation to be introduced later in the sitting. It was not signed by four committee members, Socred MLAs Hugh Curtis (Saanich and the Islands), Alex Fraser (Cariboo), Don Phillips (South Peace River) and Liberal Allan Williams (Howe Sound).

After the bills and reports were introduced, Education Minister Eileen Dailly moved the house adjourn to 2 p.m. Monday as opposition members shouted it was time to get down to work.

"You have your homework to do for this weekend," she told them, after suggesting there was no need for emergency debate on the forest industry because legislation dealing with the slump would be brought in by the government shortly and would provide an avenue for debate.

Bennett had pressed for immediate discussion of unemployment in the industry, arguing it has reached "crisis" proportion."

HOUSING GRANTS $500

OTTAWA (CP) — Effective today, the government will give $500 cash grants to first-time buyers of moderately-priced houses, Urban Affairs Minister Barnett Danson announced in the Commons.

Maximum cost of a moderately-priced house in Victoria has been set at $38,247.

The minister said the legislation, once passed, will make the grants available for a one-year period retroactive to today.

Danson said the definition of moderately-priced houses will vary with market areas. In Regina, where prices were lower than in some areas the maximum house price qualifying under the program would be $31,580. It would be $44,915 in Toronto where housing prices were higher.

Danson said the program is designed to help families buying their first home.

"Rather than wait until legislation can pass through the House, I wish to make this benefit available to families immediately, and to remove any uncertainty on the part of home buyers or the housing industry."

The announcement was applauded by opposition parties who have pressed repeatedly for details since Parliament opened Oct. 30.

The payments are expected to cost about $2 million for the remainder of 1974 and approximately $28 million in 1975.

Angry Firemen Axe Fire Hoses

MONTREAL (UPI) Striking firefighters turned the city of two million residents into turmoil today, defying a court injunction ordering them back to work in a cost-of-living dispute with city hall.

Only about 55 supervisory personnel were on duty to protect the city and authorities asked suburban fire departments to stand by.

Police summoned riot squads to at least three blazes in the city during the night to protect working firemen from strikers who axed hoses and stoned crews as they fought the fires.

Mayor Jean Drapeau, campaigning for re-election in a poll set for Nov. 10, said his administration would issue a major announcement on the situation this afternoon.

Drapeau's principal opponent, worker-priest Jacques Couture, accused the mayor of treating the firemen unfairly and said Drapeau's own salary had been increased 92 per cent in the past two years.

The long-smouldering Montreal Firemen's Association feud blew up Thursday night when the 2,400 firefighters began walking off their jobs, leaving only small crews made up of fire chiefs and district supervisors to cope with 10 major blazes during the night. No serious injuries were reported.

Fire department officials accused strikers of setting some of the blazes, most of which occurred in vacant buildings. Spokesman for the firemen denied responsibility and blamed it on "a pyromaniac that is playing around."

The fireman ignored a superior court injunction served at 3 a.m. today ordering them back to work. It called on association president Jean L'Abbe and his executive council to order the men back on their jobs.

"But L'Abbe said he had tried and failed to persuade them return and said there was nothing the union executive could do.

"I tried," L'Abbe said. "It don't seem to work."

Provinces $1B Over Budget

OTTAWA (CP) — The 10 provinces have budgeted to spend almost $1 billion more than they take in during the current fiscal year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

Provincial spending is projected to rise by 21.1 per cent during the 1974-75 fiscal year while the estimated increase in revenue is 19.8 per cent, Statistics Canada said in its annual survey of provincial budgets tabled in legislatures earlier this year.

The statistical agency has developed what it calls a "financial management system" to present balance sheets of the various government levels. The system attempts to account for the fact that governments have different budget methods.

Included in the Statistics Canada analysis are both operating expenditures and spending on capital projects, such as construction of buildings and highways. Not included are the operations of "government enterprises," such as Crown corporations and utilities.

Six provinces are responsible for the combined deficit of about $1 billion; two have

MORALE BOOST VISIT BY FORD TO NIXON

LONG BEACH, Calif. (UPI) President Ford visited the bedside of Richard Nixon today after doctors told him it would be a great morale booster for the man Ford succeeded in office less than three months ago.

Ford broke off a barnstorming political tour briefly to go to Long Beach Memorial Hospital where the 61-year-old Nixon was still in critical condition following phlebitis surgery and a brush with death Tuesday.

The visit was the first time the two had met since Nixon resigned under fire in the Watergate scandal Aug. 9 and then was given a pardon by Ford, whom he had picked as vice-president.

Ford's call was scheduled for only 20 minutes.

White House News Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford made the decision after word from Dr. John Lungren that "the former president is in the best condition since his operation — a visit from President Ford would be a tremendous boost for his morale."

Rich Face Tax Hike

TORONTO (UPI) Federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde Thursday warned well-off Canadians to be prepared for higher taxes to give the poor a better deal under an "incomes redistribution" program.

He said one million families — 20 per cent of the total — had incomes of less than $5,156 in 1972. About 345,000 families received less than $3,000 a year.

"This means that one-fifth of all families were required to live on incomes of less than one-half of the national average family income," he said.

"The job of governments, in the course of a social security review this fall and winter, will be to try to determine what kind of income distribution, or redistribution, would be consistent with the community's values."

Lalonde admitted the decisions will be difficult.

NEWS BRIEFS

Air Canada, Pilots Reach Pact

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air Canada announced today that it has reached a tentative agreement with its 1,500 pilots, who voted for a strike earlier in the week.

An Air Canada spokesman said the pact was hammered out during four days of talks following a 91 per cent strike vote Monday by members of the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association.

Nanaimo Man Crash Pilot

NANAIMO (CP) — A 29-year-old native of Nanaimo was identified Thursday as the pilot of the four-engine Lockheed Electra owned by Pan-Arctic Oils Ltd. of Calgary that crashed Wednesday near Rea Point, N.W.T., killing 32 persons. Brian Thomson was one of those killed when the plane crashed through sea ice off Melville Island.

Treason Charged To Papadopoulos

ATHENS (UPI) — A Greek judicial council today charged former dictator George Papadopoulos and other protagonists of the 1967 military take-over with high treason, an appeals court spokesman said.

The spokesman said an official statement on the judges' decision to press treason charges would be used shortly.

First National Drops Prime Rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — First National City Bank today lowered its prime interest rate for the third consecutive week in response to easing money and credit conditions.

The bank, second largest in the U.S., dropped its rate from 11 to 10¾ per cent, lowest for a major bank and lowest since last spring.

Food Wastage Erupts Into Debate

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The mass wastage of food in Canada over the past few months erupted into emergency debate in the Commons Thursday amidst warnings that Canadians are eating and throwing away too much food.

Federal and provincial health authorities, farmers, ranchers and fishermen have been saying and showing that waste is becoming a distressingly commonplace fact of life in Canada. A four-hour debate, following the ritual killing of 600 calves by financially hard-pressed Quebec farmers, took place a few hours after a special Commons committee ended another day of hearings on the spoilage of 28 million eggs. (See also Page 7.)

New Democratic Party MP Max Saltsman said outside the House Thursday he is drafting a bill to present to the House of Commons to make destruction of food a criminal offence.

The Waterloo-Cambridge MP said he is horrified at reports out of Quebec that farmers are slaughtering calves and burying them in mass graves because low returns for beef mean they can't afford to feed them.

"It's bloody immoral," he said angrily. "No matter what the reason for it."

If Whelan were found guilty under his bill he would like to see the minister thrown in jail, he added.

"If I had my way, I'd have him put behind bars," he snapped.

"Huh," said Whelan when informed of Saltsman's move, "everybody in Canada will be in jail because we're all guilty of wasting food."

Plumptre Says 'Nonsense'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Beryl Plumptre dismissed as "nonsense" complaints that retail beef prices are too high at a time when farmers are selling cattle for less than it costs to raise them.

Current retail prices merely reflect the increased cost of feeding cattle, she said in one of two reports released today.

Although retail prices were higher now than a year ago, there is no evidence to indicate that consumers are paying too much.

In fact, Mrs. Plumptre said, beef is a bargain at current prices.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan, meanwhile, stood firm on a commitment made Thursday night to hold a full-scale inquiry into the beef industry if he finds the report is unsatisfactory.

He told irate Commons questioners he has not had time to study the report in detail because it had been released only 90 minutes earlier.

He wanted to consider the board's report carefully before making a decision, he added.

Outside the House, he said he hopes inter-departmental discussion of the report will take place while he is attending a United Nations food conference in Rome next week.

According to the report, farmers are selling top-grade beef cattle for 53 cents a pound when it is costing them 57 cents a pound to raise them.

But board economist Gordon Burton, a Claresholm, Alta., rancher, suggested consumers may be paying considerably higher prices in the future.

Burton said he expects a lot of ranchers to sell off cows during the next month in an effort to reduce the size of the country's cattle herds.

The board was concerned what effect this would have on future beef supplies.

The slaughter of 600 calves in the Lac St. Jean region of Quebec "had no economic significance," he added.

Many dairy calves are killed and thrown away each year anyway.

Farmers have no use for them in their herd, particularly if they are bulls, and they do not grade as top quality veal.

SUGAR UP AGAIN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The wholesale price of sugar in B.C. increased $3 a hundredweight Thursday to $51 a hundredweight.

Wholesale price in eastern Canada is $56.90.

Consumer Services Minister Phyllis Young announced in Victoria Thursday that her department is conducting a study into the reasons for the increases.

She said her department has no power to control or rescind the increases, but would study the matter and present a report to the federal government.

Bill Davies, general sales manager for B.C. Sugar, said the most recent flurry in world sugar prices has been caused by reports of poor sugar beet crops in Eastern Europe.

Retail prices in lower mainland stores have not gone up as a result of the wholesale price boosts, but were expected to rise next week when current stocks run out.
